THE LIBRARY

UNIVERSITY OF MAINE
ORONO, MAINE

THE FACSIMILE TEXT SOCIETY

SERIES I: LITERATURE AND LANGUAGE

VOLUME I

JOHN DONNE

BIATHANATOS

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2026

https://archive.org/details/biathanatos0000unse

JOHN DONNE
BIATHANATOS

Reproduced from the First Edition

With a Bibliographical Note

BY

J. WILLIAM HEBEL

THE FACSIMILE TEXT SOCIETY

NEW YORK

1930

Printed in the United States of America
by The National Process Company, New York

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

For this reproduction of the undated first issue of the first edition of Biathanatos the copy in the Library of Congress has been used. This copy has been exactly reproduced: the size of the type page is that of the original, and the imperfections of the copy have not been corrected. Immediately following this note the title-page of the dated second issue of the first edition has been reproduced from the copy in the Library of the Union Theological Seminary.

It has been customary to date the first issue 1644, from the date of the licenser's imprimatur, '20 Sept. 1644', printed at Sig. Ee2 verso. But the volume was not entered in the Stationers' Registers by the publisher Henry Seyle (or Seale) until September 25, 1646. Although there are at least two known instances of entry after publication (see The Library, 4th series, vi. 52 and vii. 380), entry in the Stationers' Registers is better evidence for the date of publication than the licenser's imprimatur. There is no known reason why Seyle should have delayed entering the volume for two years, so until further evidence is discovered 1646 seems a more probable date for the publication of the first issue than 1644. There is slight corroborative evidence for this later date: of the three known dated presentation copies of the first issue, the earliest is 1647 (Bibliotheca Heberiana, pt. 8, p. 37, item 728; G. Keynes, Bibliography of John Donne, p. 63; Catalogues of the Britwell and Kern Sales).

The sheets of the first edition were re-issued by

97624

Humphrey Moseley with a new title-page dated 1648, although the volume was not transferred from Seyle to Moseley in the Stationers' Registers until June 13, 1649. This second issue was on sale as early as December 2, 1647, for on that date Thomason bought his copy (British Museum press mark, E. 418. [11]). A careful collation of the first and second issues shows that the sheets are identical except Sig. S. In the Union Theological Seminary's copy of the second issue this signature is a completely different setting from the same signature in the Congressional Library's copy of the first issue. The Princeton and Yale copies of the first issue contain an intermediate state of the signature, not agreeing exactly with either of the two copies collated. In the various copies there are no changes in the text affecting the sense; only the forms of words and the paragraphing are changed. The Union Theological Seminary's copy seems to give the more correct state of the text, but since the differences are of no literary significance it was thought best to reproduce the setting actually in the Congressional Library's copy. There is, however, one omission in that copy which should be supplied. On Sig. S4 verso (p. 144) the marginal note numbered '8' has, except for the number, dropped out. In the Union Theological Seminary's copy this note reads: 'So is the / Rule, That / good Angels / alwaies move / to good ordi- / narily.'

Through the survival of one of Donne's own manuscripts of the Biathanatos we can check the trustworthiness of the text of the first edition. He sent a transcript (now in the Bodleian; press mark, Ms. è Musæo 131), with marginal notes in his own hand, to Lord Herbert of Cherbury. A fresh collation of this manuscript with the Bodleian copy of the first issue of the first edition shows that the printed text is a faithful reproduction. There are minor differences in phrasing, such as might have come from the use of a different manuscript by the printer, but no material is omitted or added, and the only important corrections which the manuscript makes are several already noted by Mrs. Simpson in her Study of the Prose Works of Donne, p. 148.

Biathanatos has been once reprinted, by an anonymous publisher in 1700. A collation of a copy of this edition, in the possession of Professor George L. Hamilton, shows that it was set from the first edition without textual changes, even following closely some of the first edition's typographical peculiarities. The copy used by the printer in 1700 had the same setting of Sig. S as the Union Theological Seminary's copy. This second edition makes a few minor corrections such as an intelligent printer might make, and a few minor errors such as a careless proof reader might pass. Spelling is frequently modernized, and the numbered notes are printed at the foot of the page.

J. W. H.

Cornell University
Ithaca, New York

Wm Popple.

ΒΙΑΘΑΝΑΤΟΣ.

A

DECLARATION

OF THAT

PARADOXE,

OR

THESIS,

That Self-homicide is not so naturally Sin, that it may never be otherwise.

Wherein

The Nature, and the extent of all those Lawes, which seeme to be violated by this Act, are diligently surveyed.

Written by John Donne, Church of England who afterwards received Orders and dyed Deane of St Pauls from the London.

Jo: Saresb. de nugis Curial. Prolog.
Non omnia vera esse profiteor. Sed legentium usibus inservire.

Published by Authority.

LONDON,
Printed for Humphrey Moseley, and are to be sold at his shop at the Princes Armes in St Pauls Churchyard. 1648.

ΒΙΑΘΑΝΑΤΟΣ.

A

DECLARATION

OF THAT

PARADOXE,

OR

THESIS, that

Selfe-homicide is not ſo Naturally Sinne, that it may never be otherwiſe.

WHEREIN

The Nature, and the extent of all thoſe Lawes, which ſeeme to be violated by this Act, are diligently ſurveyed.

Written by IOHN DONNE, who afterwards received Orders from the Church of England, and dyed Deane of Saint Pauls, London.

Jo: Saresb. de nugis Curial. Prolog.

Non omnia vera eſſe profiteor. Sed legentium uſibus inſervire.

Publiſhed by Authoritie.

LONDON,
Printed by John Dawſon,

TO THE Right Honourable
THE LORD
PHILLIP HARBERT.

My Lord,

Although I have not exactly obeyed your commands, yet, I hope, I have exceeded them, by presenting to your Honor, the Treatise, tiſe, which is, ſo much the better, by being none of mine owne, and may therefore peradventure, deſerve to live, for facilitating the Iſſues of Death.

It was writ, long ſince, by my Father, and by him, forbid both the Preſſe, and the Fire; neither had I ſubjected it now, to the publique view, but that, I could finde no certaine way to defend it from the one, but by committing it to the other; For, ſince the beginning of this War, my Study having been often ſearched, all my Books (and almoſt my braines, by their continuall allarums ſequeſtred, for the uſe of the Committee; two dangers appeared appeared more eminently to hover over this, being then a Manuſcript; a danger of being utterly loſt, and a danger of being utterly found; and fathered, by ſome of thoſe wild Atheiſts, who, as if they came into the World by conqueſt, owne all other mens Wits, and are reſolved to be learned, in deſpite of their Starres, that would fairely have enclined them, to a more modeſt, and honeſt courſe of life.

Your Lordſhips Protection will defend this Innocent from theſe two Monſters, Men that cannot write, and Men that cannot reade, and, I am very confident all thoſe that can, will think it it may deſerve this favour from your Lordſhip ; For, although this Booke appeare under the notion of a Paradox, yet, I deſire your Lordſhip, to looke upon this Doctrine, as a firme and eſtabliſhed truth.

Da vida oſar morir.

Your Lordſhips
moſt humble Servant

From my houſe in Covent-Garden. 28.

Io: Donne.

Authors cited in this Booke.

Beza.
B. Dorothaus.
Boſquierus.
Athenagoras.
Cauſæus.
Triſmegiſtus.
Theodoricus A. Niem.
Steuchius Eugubi.
Ennodius.
Pererius
Zamb a.us
Alcoran
Corpus Iur: Canon.
Carbo, Summa Summarum
Polidorus Virgilius Matalius Metellus, Præfat. in Oſor. Hiſtor.
Pierius
S. Ambroſius
Cardanus
Tholoſa: Syntagm.
S. Cyprianus
Hadri: Junius
Emanu l Sâ
Nicephorus
S. Gregorius
Vaſques
Clarus Bonarſ ius Corpus Iur: Civil.
Binnius
Bracton
Plowden
A: Gellius Tertull an Climachus
Baſil
Fileſacus
Campianus
S. Hieronimus
Ben: Gorion
Plinius Paleotus de Neth.
Canones Pœnitenti: Clemens Alex:
Sotus
Bodin

Sylvius
Miádendorpius Lucidus
Arpilcueta
Fabricius Hiſt: Cicero.
Windeckus
Lipſius
Porphyrius
Damaſus Feuardentius
Euſebius
Vincentii Speculum
Prateolus
Diodorus Siculus
Tho: Morus Anto: Auguſtin.
P. Manutius
Sebaſt: Medices
Scotus
Calvinus
Foreſtus de Venen.
Serarius
Biblia Sacra
Humfredus Angl.
Mallonius in Paleotti Sindon.
S. Chryſoſtomus
Pontius Paulinus
Aquinas
Azorius
Sayr

Elianus
Cajetanus
S. Auguſtinus
Artemidorus
I. Cæſar
Joſephus
Vegetius
Acacius
Jo: Picus
Hevernius
Latinus Pacatus
Platina
Baronius
Ignatius
Alfon: Caſtro
Schultingius
Plato
Simancha
Alb. Gentilis
Pruckmannus
P. Pomponatius
Buxdorfius
Anto: de Corduba
Thyræus
Lavater
Nauclerus
Quintilianus
Toletus
Sulpitius Adrianus Quodlib.
Beccaria

Vita

Vita Phil: Neriì
Maldonatus
Bonaventura
Gregor: Nazianz.
Canones Apoſtolorum
Lucas de Penna
Optinellus
Lacrtius
Binsfeldius
Pedraça
Sextus Senenſis
Paracelſus Metaphraſtes.
Surius
Gregor: de Valentia
Brentius
Theophilact
Heſichius
Marloratus
Schluſſelburgius
Agapetus
Reuchlin
Martialis ad Tholo:
Saravia
Sylveſter
Liber Coformitatum S. Franc. et Chriſti.
Caſſianus
Procop. Gazæus
Ardoinus
Greg. Turon Supplem. Chronic.
Nazarius Paneg.
Menghi
Ioan de Lapide
Hippocrates
Bellarminus
Revelation. Brigidæ Regul. Ieſuit.
Franc. Gregorius
Oecumenius
Origenes
Alcuinus
Corn Celſus
Idiotæ Contemplatio de morte
Baldus
Ariſtoteles
Stanford
Bartolus
P. Martyr
Declaration des Doctes en France
Sedulius Minorita
Io Gerſon
Lylius Geraldus Mariana Sanſovinus
Lambert
Fra. a Victoria Wierus

Kepplerus	Schultetus
Lyra	Euthymius
Burgenſis	Paterculus
P. Lombard	Caſſaneus
Sophronius

IN citing theſe authors, for thoſe which I produce only for ornament and illuſtration, I have truſted my owne old notes; which though I have no reaſon to ſuſpect, yet I confeſs here my lazines; and that I did not refreſh them with going to the Originall. Of thoſe few which I have not ſeene in the bookes themſelves, (for there are ſome ſuch, even of places cited for greateſt ſtrength,) beſides the integrity of my purpoſe, I have this ſafe defence againſt any quarreller, that what place ſoever I cite from any Catholique Author, if I have not conſidered the Book it ſelfe, I cite him from another Catholique Writer. And the like courſe I hold in the Reformers. So that I ſhall hardly be condemned of any falſe citation, except to make me Acceſſorie, they pronounce one of their owne friends principall.

A distribution of this Book, into Parts, Distinctions, and Sections.

Preface.

1 THe Reason of this Discourse.
2 Incitements to charity towards those which doe it.
3 Incitements to Charity towards the Author.
4 Why it is not inconvenient now to handle this.
5 Dessentious among scholars more, and harder to end then among others.
6 In such perplexities we ought to incline to that side which favours the dead.
7 Why I make it so publique.
8 What reader I desire to have.
9 The reasons why there are so many citations.
10 God punisheth that sin most, which occasions most sin in others.

The first part, first Distinction, first Section.

1 Why we first prove, that this sin is not irremissible.

Sect. 2.

1 Three sorts of mistakers of this sin.

Sect. 3

1 That all desperation is not haynous; and that Self-homicide doth not alwaies proceed from desperation.
2 It may be without Infidelity.

3 When it is pœna peccati it is involuntarium.
4 The reaſon why men ordinarily aggravate deſperation
5 Of the ſecond opinion, which is of impenitiblenes.
6 Of Calvins opinion, that it may be.
7 None impeccable, nor impenitible.

Sect. 4.

1 Of the third ſort, which preſume actuall impenitence by reaſon of this Act.
2 Which is the ſafer ſide in doubtfull caſes.
3 In Articulo Mortis, the Church ever interprets favourably.
4 What true repentance is by Clement.
5 Witneſſes which acquit, more credited, then they which accuſe, in the Cannon Law.

Sect. 5.

1 Why we wayve the Ordinary definition of Sin taken from Saint Auguſtine, and follow another taken from Aquinas.
2 Of the torturing practice of Caſuiſts.
3 Of the eternall Law of God, in Saint Auguſtines Definition, againſt which a man may doe without ſinne.
4 Of the Definition which we follow.

Sect. 6.

1 How Law of Nature, and of reaſon, and of God, exhibited in this definition, are all one; and how diverſly accepted.
2 In ſome caſes all theſe three Lawes may be broken at once. As 3 In revealing a ſecret.
4 In Parricide.

Sect. 7

1 Of the Law of Nature, and that againſt it ſtrictly taken, either no ſinne, or all ſinne is done.
2 To doe againſt Nature makes us not guilty of a greater ſinne, but more inexcuſable.
3 No action ſo evill, that it is never good.

The Contents.

4 No evill in act, but disobedience.

5 Lying naturally worse then Selfe-homicide.

6 Fame may be neglected: yet we are as much bound to preserve fame, as life.

7 God cannot command a sinne, yet he can command a murther.

8 Orginall sin, cause of all sin, is from nature.

Sect. 8.

1 That if our Adversaries by Law of nature mean only sensitive Nature, they say nothing, for so most vertuous actions are against nature.

Sect. 9.

1 As the Law of nature is recta ratio, that is, Jus gentium. So immolation, and Idolatry are not against law of Nature.

Sect. 10.

1 As reason is the form, and so the nature of a man, every sinne is against nature: yea, whatsoever agrees not exactly with Christian Religion.

2 Vertue produced to Act, differs so from Reason, as a medicine made and applyed, from a boxe of drugs.

Dist. 2. Sect. 1.

1 Sinnes against Nature in a particular sense, are by schoolmen said to be unnatural Lusts, and This. But in Scripture only the first is so called.

2 Of the example of the Levite in the Iudges, where the Vulgate Edition, calls it sin against Nature.

3 S. Pauls use of that phrase Law of Nature, in long haire.

4 Vegetius use of that phrase.

Sect. 2.

1 Self preservation is not so of particular Law of Nature, but that Beasts naturally transgresse it, whom it binds more then us. And we, when the reason of it ceases in us, may transgresse it, and sometimes must.

2 Things naturall to the Species, are not alwaies so to the Individuall.

3 There-

3 Thereupon some may retire into Solitude.
4 The first principles in Naturall law, are obligatory, but not deductions from thence, and the lower we descend the weaker they are.
5 Pellicans. And by S. Ambrose, Bees kill themselves.
6 The Reason of almost every law is mutable.
7 He that can declare where the reason ceases, may dispence with the Law.
8 In what manner dispensations worke.
9 As nothing can annull the prerogatives of Princes or of Popes, though their own act seem to provide against it, so no law so much destroyes mans liberty, but that he returns to it, when the reason of that law ceases.
10 Self-preservation, which is but an appetition of that which is good in our opinion, is not violated by Self-homicide.
11 Liberty, which is naturally to be preserved, may be departed withall, when our will is to doe so.

Sect. 3.

5 That cannot bee against law of nature, which men have ever affected, if it be also (as this is) against sensitive nature, and so want the allurements which other sins have.
2. There are not so many examples of all other vertues, as are of this one degree of fortitude.
3 Of Romane Gladiators. Of their great numbers, great persons, and women.
4 With how small persuasions Eleazar in Iosephus drew men to it.
5 Wives in the Indies doe it yet.
6 The Samanæi Priests in the Indies, notorious for good life and death did it.
7 Latinus Pacatus expresseth this desire pathetically.
8 By what means the Spaniards corrected this naturall desire in the Indies. Dist. 3. Sect. 1.
1 After civility and christianity quenched this naturall desire, in the place thereof succeeded a thirst of Martyrdome.

How

The Contents.

2 How leasurely the custome of killing at funerals wore out.
3 Philosophers saw, and Moses delivered the state of the next life, but unperfectly,

Sect. 2.

1 That Martyrdome was by the Fathers insinuated into men, for the most part by naturall Reasons, and much upon humane respects.
2 So proceeded Clement.
3 So did Tertullian.
4 So did Cyprian.
5 Externall honours to Martyrs.
6 Monopoly of Martyrdome
7 Gods punishments upon their persecuters encouraged men to it.
8 Priviledges of Martyrs extended to many.
9 Contrary Reasons cherisht this desire in them.
10 Libellatici, or compounders with the state, in Cyprian.
11 Flight in persecution condemned by Tertullian.
12 Death grew to be held necessary to make one a Martyr.
13 In times when they exceeded in indiscreet exposings of themselvs, they taught that Martyrs might be without death.
14 Professors in Cyprian, men who offred themselves before they were called.
15 Enforcers of their own Martyrdome.
16 Examples of inordinate affecting of Martyrdome.
17 Lawes forbidding more executions, made to despite Christians.
18 Glory in their number of Martyrs.

Sect. 3.

1 That Hereticks noting the dignity gaind by Martyrdome, laboured to avert them from it, but could not correct this naturall inclination.
2 They laboured the Magistrate to oppose this desire.
3 Basilides denyed Christ to have been crucified; and that therefore they dyed madly.

4 Helcheſar, that outward profeſſion of Religion was not needfull; much leſſe Martyrdome.

5 Which alſo the Gnoſtici taught: and why they prevailed not.

Sect. 4.

1 That Heretiques miſſing their purpoſe herein, tooke the naturall way of overtaking the Orthodox in numbers of Martyrs.

2 Petilians new way of Martyrdome.

3 Another new way of the Circumcelliones, or Circuitores.

4 The Cataphrygæ exceed in number.

5 The Euphemitæ for their numbers of Martyrs called Martyrians.

Sect. 5.

1 Hereupon Councels tooke it into their care to diſtinguiſh Martyrs, from thoſe who dyed for naturall and humane reſpects.

Sect. 6.

1 Therefore later Authors doe ſomewhat remit the dignity of Martyrdome.

2 The Jeſuits ſtill profeſſe an enormous love to ſuch death.

Diſtinction 4. Sect. 1.

1 Lawes and Cuſtomes of well polliſhed Eſtates having admitted it, it were raſh to ſay it to be againſt Law of Nature.

2 True and Ideated Common-wealthes have allowed it.

3. 4. Athenians, Romans.

5 Of Depontani.

6 Ethiopians.

7 All Lawes preſume this deſire in men condemned.

8 In Utopia authorized.

9 And by Plato in certaine caſes.

10 Concluſion of the firſt Part.

The

The Contents.

The Second Part of the Law of Reason.

Distinct. 1. Sect. 1.

1 That the Law of Reason is, Conclusions drawn from primary Reason or light of Nature, by discourse.

2 How much strength such deduced reasons have.

Sect. 2.

1 Of this kind of reasons, generall Lawes have greatest authoritie.

2 For it is of their essence that they agree with the Law of Nature.

3 And there is better testimony of their producing, then of particular mens opinions.

Sect. 3.

1 Of Lawes, the Emperiall Law ought first to be considered.

2 The reason of that Law is not abolished; but the confession of our dependencie upon it.

3 Why it is called Civill Law.

4 Of the vastnes of the books from whence it is concocted, and of the large extent thereof.

5 That yet in this so large Law there is nothing against our case.

6 Of the Law of Adrian concerning this in Souldiers.

7 Of the other Law concerning this in offendors already accused.

Dist. 2. Sect. 1.

1 Of the Cannon Law.

2 The largenes of the subject, and object thereof.

3 Of Codex Canonum, or the body of the Canon Law, in use in the primitive Church.

Of the Additions to this Code since.

4 Canon Law apter to condemn then the Civil, and why.

Sect. 2.

1 That this proposition is not hereticall by the Canon Law.

2 Simancha

2 Simancha his large Definition of Heresy.
3 No decision of the church in the point.
4 Nor Canon nor Bull.
5 Of the common opinion of Fathers, and that that varies by times, and by places by Azorius.
7 Gratian cites but two Fathers, whereof one is on our side.
8 That that part of Canon Law, to which Canonists will stand, condemns not this.
9 A Catholique Bps. censure of Gratian, and his decret.

Sect. 3.

1 What any Councells have done in this point.
2 Of the Councell of Antisidore under Greg. 1. 590.
3 That it only refusd their oblations.
4 That it was only a Dioceſan Councell.
5 The Councell of Braccar. inflicts two punishments.
6 The first, of not praying for them is meant of them who did it, when they were excommunicate.
7 The second, which is denying of buriall, is not always inflicted as a punishment, to an offendor; as appeares in a punishment, to an offendor; as appears in a locall interdict.
8 Romans buried such offendors as had satisfied the law within the Towne, as they did Vestalls and Emperours.

Dist. 3 Sect. 1

1 Of the Laws of particular Nations.
2 Of our Law of Felo de se.
3 That this is by our Law Murder, and what reasons entitle the King to his good.
4 That our naturall desire to such dying, probably induced this customary Law.
5 As in States abounding with slaves, Law-makers quenched this desire, left there should have beene no use of them.
6 Forbid left it should draw too many: as hunting, and usury: and as wine by Mahomet.
7 Upon reason of generall inclinations we have severe Laws against theft.
8 When

8 When a man is bound to steale.
9 Sotus his opinion of Day-theeues.
10 Of a like law against Self-homicide in the Earldome of Flaunders. Sect. 2.
1 Severe Laws are arguments of a generall inclination, not of a hainousnes in the fact.
2 Fasting upon Sundays extremely condemned upon that reason.
3 So Duells in France.
4 So Bull-baitings in Spaine.
5 The hainousnes of Rape, or Witch-craft are not diminished, where the Laws against them were but easie.
6 Publike benefit is the rule of extending odious Laws, and restraining favourable.
7 If other nations concurre in like Laws, it sheweth the inclination to be generall.
Sect. 3.
1 The Custome of the Iews not burying till Sunn-set, and of the Athenians cutting off the dead hand evict not.
Sect 4.
1 The reasons drawne from remedies, used upon some occasions to prevent it, prove as little.
Dist. 4. Sect. 1.
1 Of the reasons used by particular men, being divines.
2 Of S. Aug. and of his argument against Donatus.
3 Of S. Augustine comparatively with other Fathers.
4 Comparison of Navar. and Sotus.
5 Iesuits often beholding to Calvin for his expositions.
6 In this place we differ not from S. Augustine.
7 Nor in the second cited by Gratian.
8 That there may be Causa puniendi sine culpa.
9 As Valens the Emperor did misse Theodosius, So S. Augustine pretermitted the right case.
10 Of Cordubensis rule, how we must behave our selves in perplexities.
11 How temporall reward may be taken for spirituall offices. 12 Of 12 Of Pindarus death praying for he knew not what.

13 In one place we depart from S. Augustine upon the same reason, as the Iesuite Thyræus doth depart from him in another.

Sect. 2.

1 The place cited by Gratian out of S. Hierome, is on our side.

Sect. 3.

1 Lavaters confession, that Augustine, Hierome, Chrysostome, Lactantius, are of this opinion.

Sect. 4.

1 Of Peter Martyrs reason, Mors malum.
2 Clement hath long since destroyed that reason.
3 Of Malum pœnæ, how farre it may bee wished, and how farre it condemnes.
4 Possessed men are not alwaies so afflict for sinne.
5 Damnation hath not so much rationem mali, as the least sinne.
6 If Death were of the worst sort of evill, yet there might be good use of it, as of Concupiscence.
7 In what sense S. Paul calles Death Gods enemy.
8 Death, since Christ, is not so evill as before.

Sect. 5.

1 Of Peter Martyrs reason, Vita donum Dei.

Sect. 6.

1 Of Lavaters reason of Iudges in all causes.
2 Where Confession is not in use, there is no Iudge of secret sinne.
3 Of the Popes Iurisdiction over himselfe.
4 Of such Iurisdiction in other persons by Civil lawes.
5 Io: 22. elected himselfe Pope.
6 Iurisdiction over our selves is therefore denyed us;
7 because we are presumed favourable to our selves, not in cases esteemed hurtfull.
8 In cases hurtfull we have such Iurisdiction.
9 Oath of Gregory in the great Schisme.

10 When a man becomes to be ſui Juris.

11 Warre is juſt betweene Soveraigne Kings, becauſe they have no Iudge.

12 Princes give not themſelves priviledges; but declare that in that caſe they will exerciſe their inherent generall Priviledge.

Sect. 7.

1 Joſephus reaſon of Depoſitum.

2 A Depoſitarie cannot be accuſed De Culpa, but De Dolo.

3 A ſecret received Data fide is In natura Depoſiti.

Sect. 8.

1 Of ſimilitudinary reaſons in Authors not Divine.

Sect. 9.

1 Of Joſephus his reaſon of Hoſtis.

Sect. 10.

1 Of Joſephus reaſon of Servus.

Sect. 11.

1 Of Joſephus reaſon of a Pilot.

Diſtinct. 5. Sect. 1.

1 Of Saint Thomas two reaſons from Iuſtice, and Charitie.

2 Of that part of injuſtice, which is ſtealing himſelfe from the State.

3 Monaſtike retyring is, in genere rei, the ſame fault.

4 The better opinion is, that there is herein no injuſtice.

5 Of the other Injuſtice, of uſurping upon anothers Servant.

6 Though we have not Dominium, we have Uſum of this life: And we may relinquiſh it when we will.

7 The State is not Lord of our life, yet may take it away.

8 If injuſtice were herein done to the State, then by a licence from the State it may be lawfull.

9 And the State might recompence her Domage upon the goods or Heire of the Delinquent.

10 In a man neceſſary to the State, there may bee ſome Injuſtice herein.

11 No man can doe injurie to himselfe.
12 The question whether it be against Charity, respited to the third part.

Sect. 2.

1 Of Aristotles two reasons of Misery and Pusillanimitie.

Distinct. 6. Sect. 1.

1 Of reasons on the other side.
2 Of the Law of Rome, of asking the Senate leave to kill himselfe.
3 Of the case upon that Law in Quintillian.

Sect. 2.

1 Comparisons of desertion and destruction.
2 Of Omissions equall to committings.

Sect. 3.

3 In great faults the first step imprints a guiltines, yet many steps to self-homicide are allowable.
4 Dracoes lawes against homicide were retained for the hainousnes of the fault.
5 Tolets five Species of Homicide.
6 Foure of those were to be found in Adams first Homicide in Paradise.

Sect. 4.

7 Of Tolets first and second Species, by Precept, and by Advise, or Option.
8 We may wish Malum pœnæ to our selves, as the Eremite prayed to be possessed.
9 That we may wish death for wearines of this life.
10 It is sin to wish the evill were not evill, that then we might wish it.
11 Of wishing the Princes Death.
12 In many opinions by contrary Religion, a true King becomes a Tyrant.
13 Why an oath of fidelity to the Pope binds no man.
14 Who is a Tyrant by the declaration of the learned men of France.

15 How Death may be wiſhed by Calvins opinion.
16 How we may wiſh death to another for our own advantage.
17 Phil. Nerius conſented that one who wiſhed his own death might have his wiſh.

Sect. 5.

1 Of Tolets third Species of Homicide, by permiſſion, which is Mors Negativa.
2 Of ſtanding mute at the Barre.
3 Three Rules from Scotus, Navar, and Maldonate, to guide us in theſe deſertions of our ſelves.
4 That I may ſuffer a Theif to kill me, rather then kill him.
5 Of Se defendendo in our Law.
6 That I am not bound to eſcape from priſon if I can. Nor to eate, rather then ſtarve,
7 For ends better then this life we may neglect this.
8 That I may give my life for another.
9 Chryſoſtomes opinion of Sarahs lie, and her conſent to Adultery. And S. Auguſtines opinion of this, and of that wife, who proſtituted her ſelfe to pay her husbands debts.
10 That to give my life for another, is not to preferre another before my ſelfe, as Bonaventure and Auguſt. ſay; But to prefer vertue before life; which is lawfull.
11 For ſpirituall good it is without queſtion.
12 That I may give another that without which I cannot live.
13 That I may lawfully wear out my ſelf with faſting.
14 That thus in S. Hier. opinion is ſelfe-homicide.
15 Of the Fryer whom Caſſianus calls a Self-homicide, for refuſing bread from a theife, upon an indiſcreet Vow.
16 Of Chriſts faſt.
17 Of Philoſophers inordinate faſts.
18 Of the Devils threatning S Francis, for faſting.
19 Examples of long faſts.
20 Reaſons, effects, and obligations to rigorous faſtings.

Corollary of this Section of Deſertion.

Sect. 6.

1 Of another Species of homicide, which is not in Tolets diviſion by Mutilation.

2 Of Delivering ones ſelfe into bondage.

3 By divers Cannons homicide and mutilation is the ſame fault.

4 Of Calvins argument againſt Divorce, upon this ground of Mutilation.

5 The example of S. Mark, cutting off his thumbe to eſcape Prieſthood

6 In what caſes it is clear, that a man may maim himſelf.

Sect. 7.

1 Of Tolets fourth Species of Homicide, by actual helping.

2 Ardoynus reckons a flea amongſt poyſons, becauſe it would deſtroy

3 David condemned the Amalekite, who ſaid he had helped Saul to kill himſelfe.

4 Mariana the Ieſuite is of opinion, that a King which may be removed by poyſon, may not be put to take it by his owne hands though ignorantly, for he doth then kill himſelf.

5 That a malefactor unaccu'ed may accuſe himſelf.

6 Of Sanſovins relation of our cuſtome at executions, and withdrawing the pillow in deſperate caſes.

7 Of breaking the leggs of man at executions, and of breaking the halter.

8 Of the forme of purgations uſed by Moſes Law in caſes of Iealouſy.

9 Of formes of Purgation called Vulgares.

10 Charlemaine brought in a new forme of purgation.

11 And Britius a Biſhop, being acquitted before, extorted another purgation upon himſelfe.

12 Both kinds of Ordalium, by water, and fire, in uſe here, till King Johns time.

13 In all theſe purgations, and in that by Battaile, the party himſelf aſſiſted.

14 Exam-

14 Exumples of actuall helpers to their owne deſtruction in S. Dorothæus doctrine.

15 Of Ioſeph of Arimathæa his drinking of poyſon.

16 Of S. Andrew and S. Lawrence.

17 Caſuiſts not cleere whether a condemned man may doe the laſt act to his death.

18 But in caſes without condemnation, it is ſub præcepto to Prieſts, Curats, to goe to infected houſes.

Sect. 8.

1 Of Tolets laſt ſpecies of Homi-cide which is the act it ſelfe.

2 How farre an erring conſcience may juſtify this act.

3 Of Pythagoras philoſophicall conſcience, to dy, rather then hurt a Beane, or ſuffer his ſchollers to ſpeak.

4 Of the apparition to Hero a moſt devout Eremite, by which he killed himſelf, out of Caſſianus.

5 That the Devill ſometime ſollicites to good.

6 That by Uaſques his opinion, it is not Idolatry to worſhip God in the devil.

7 Rules given to diſtinguiſh evil ſpirits from God are all fallible.

8 Good Angels ſometimes move to that which is evill, being ordinarily and morally accepted.

9 As in miſ-adoration by Vaſques, invincible ignorance excuſes, ſo it may in our caſes.

10 Of S. Auguſtines firſt reaſon againſt Donatus, that we may ſave a mans life againſt his will.

11 Of his ſecond reaſons, which is want of examples of the faithfull. And of S. Auguſtines aſſured eſcape, if Donatiſts had produced Examples.

12 Divorce in Rome on either part, And in Jury, on the womans part long without example.

13 Saint Auguſtines Schollers in this point of examples, as ſtubborne as Ariſtotles, for the inalterableneſſe of the Heavens, though the reaſon of both be ceaſed.

14 Of the Martyr Apollonia who killed her ſelfe.

15 Of

15 Of answers in her excuse.
16 Of the Martyr Pelagia who killed her selfe.
17 Though her History bee very uncertaine, yet the Church seems glad of any occasion to celebrate such a fact.
18 Saint Augustines testimony of her.
19 Saint Ambroses Meditation upon her.
20 Eusebius his Oration incitatory, imagined in the person of the Mother.
21 Saint Augustines first of any doubting of their fact, sought such shifts to defend it, as it needed not.
22 S. Augustines example hath drawne Pedraca a Spanish Casuist, and many others, to that shift of speciall Divine inspiration, in such cases.
23 And so sayes Peter Martyr of the Midwives, and of Rahabs lye.
24 To preserve the Seale of Confession, a man may in some case be bound to doe the intire act of killing himselfe.

The Third Part, which is of the Law of God.

Distinct. 1 Sect. 1.
1 An introduction to the handling of these places of Scripture.
2 Why I forbeare to name them who cite these places of Scripture.
3 If any oppose an answer, why I intreat him to avoide bitternes.
4 Why Clergy men, which by Canons may fish, and hunt, yet may not hunt with dogs.
5 Of Bezas answer to Ochius Polygamy.

Distinction 2. Sect. 1.
1 No place against this Self-homicide, is produced out of the Iudiciall or Ceremoniall Law.
Sect. 2 1 Of the place Gen. 9,5. I will require your blood.
2 We are not bound to accept the interpretation of the Rabbins.

3 Of

3 Of Lyra, and of Emmanuel Sâ, both abounding in Hebraiſms, yet making no ſuch note upon this place,

Sect. 3. 1 Of the place Deut. 33. 39. I kill, and I give life.

2 Iuriſdiction of Parents, Huſbands, Maſters. Magiſtrates, muſt conſiſt with this place.

3 This place muſt be interpreted as the other places of Scripture, which have the ſame words. And from them, being three, no ſuch ſence can be extorted.

Sect. 4. 1 Of the place Iob 7. 1. vita militia.

2 Why they cite this place according to the vulgate copy.

3 Of Soldiers priviledges of abſence by Law.

4 Iobs ſcope is, That as warre works to peace, ſo heere we labour to death.

5 Of Chriſts letter to King Abgarus.

Sect. 5. 1 Of another place in Iob 7. 15. Anima elegit ſuſpendium.

2 Why it was not lawfull to Iob to kill himſelf.

3 His words ſeeme to ſhew ſome ſteps toward a purpoſe of Self-homicide.

4 Of Sextus Senenſis, and of Gregories expoſition thereof

5 How I differ from the Anabaptiſts, who ſay that Iob deſpaired.

6 S. Hierome, and the Trent Councell incurre this errour of condemning all which a condemned man ſays.

7 Very holy and learned men impute a more dangerous deſpaire to Chriſt, then I doe to Iob.

Sect. 6. 1 Of the place Io. 2. 4. Skin for Skin &c.

Sect. 7 1 Of the place Eccles. 30. 16. There is no riches above a ſound body.

2 This place is not of ſafety, but of health.

Sect. 8. 1 Of the place Exod. 20. Thou ſhalt not kill.

2 S. Auguſtine thinks this Law to concerne ones ſelf more directly, then another.

3 This Law hath many exceptions.

4 Laws of the firſt table are ſtrictioris vinculi, then of the ſecond.

5 A caſe wherein it is probable that a man muſt kill himſelf, if the perſon be exemplar.

6 As Laws againſt Day-theeves may be deduced from the Law of God authorizing Princes, So may this from the commandement, of preferring Gods glory.

7 Whatſoever might have been done before this Law, this Law forbids not.

Sect. 9. 1 Of the place Wiſd. 1. 12. Seek not death.

Diſtinct. 3. Sect. 1.

1 Of the place Mat. 4. 6. Caſt thy ſelf downe.

2 That Chriſt when it conduced to his owne ends, did as much, as the devill tempted him to, in this place.

Sect. 2. 1 Of the place Acts 16. 17. Do thy ſelf no harme.

2 S. Paul knew Gods purpoſe of baptizing the Iaylour.

3 For elſe ſaith Calvin, he had fruſtrated Gods way of giving him an eſcape by the Iaylours death.

Sect. 3. 1 Of the place Rom. 3. 8. Do not evill for good.

2 In what ſence Paul forbids this.

3 God always inflicts malum pœnæ by inſtruments.

4 Induration it ſelfe is ſometimes medicinall.

5 We may inflict upon our ſelves one diſeaſe, to remove another.

6. In things evill, in that ſenſe as S. Paul takes the word here, Popes daily diſpence.

7 So doe the Civill Lawes.

8 So doe the Cannons.

9 So doth God occaſion leſſe ſins to avoid greater.

10 What any other may diſpence withall in us, in caſes of extremity, we may diſpence with in our ſelves.

11 Yet no diſpenſation changes the nature of the thing, and therefore that particular thing was never evill.

12 The Law it ſelf, which meaſures actions, is neither good nor evill.

13 Which Picus notes well, comparing it to the firmament.

14. What

14 What evill S. Paul forbids here, and why.
15 Nothing which is once evil, can ever recover of that.
16 These Acts were in Gods decree preserved from those ſtains of circumſtances, which make things evill: So as Miracles were written in his book of Nature, though not in our copy thereof; and ſo, as our Lady is ſaid to be preſerved from Originall ſinne.
17 Of that kind was Moſes killing of the Egyptian.
18 If this place of Paul, be underſtood of all evill.
19 Yet it muſt admit exceptions, as well as the Decalogue it ſelfe.
20 Otherwiſe that application which Bellarmine and others doe make of it will be intollerable.
Sect. 4. 1. Of divers places which call us, Temples of God.
2 The dead are ſtill his Temples and Images.
3 Heathen Temples might be demoliſhed, yet the Soyle remained Sacred.
4 S. Pauls reaſon holds in caſes where we avile our bodies, here we advance them.
5 How we muſt underſtand that our body is not our own.
Sect. 5. 1. Of the place, Eph. 4. 15. One body with Chriſt.
2 This place gives Arguments to all which ſpare not themſelves for releif of others, and therefore cannot ſerve the contrary purpoſe.
Sect. 6. 1. Of the place Eph. 5. No man hates his own fleſh.
2 How Marlorate expounds this Hate.
Diſtinct. 4. Sect. 1.
1 Of the places of Scripture on the other part.
2 We may, but our Adverſaries may not make uſe of Examples. To which the anſwer of Martyr and Lavater is weake
3 The Nature, Degrees, and Effects of Charity.
4 S. Auguſtines deſcription of Her. Of her higheſt perfection beyond that which Lombard obſerved out of Aug.
5 He who loves God with all his heart, may love him more.
6 Any

6 Any ſuffering in Charity, hath infallibly the grace of God; by Aquin.

Sect. 2. 1. Of the place 1 Cor. 13 4. Though I give my Body.

2 By this, it was in common reputation, a high degree of perfection to die ſo, and Charity made it acceptable.

3 S. Paul ſpeaks of a thing which might lawfully be done, for ſuch are all his gradations in this Argument.

4 Tongues of Angels, in what ſenſe in this place.

5 Speech in the Aſſe, underſtandings of propheſies in Iudas, or miraculous faith, make not the poſſeſſour the better.

6 How I differ from the Donatiſts, arguing from this place, that in charity there Self-Homicides were alwayes lawfull.

7 To give my body, is more then to let it be taken.

8 How Nicephorus the Martyr gave his Body in Sapritius his roome who recanted.

9 There may be ſome caſe that a man who is bound to give his body, cannot doe it otherwiſe then by ſelf-homicide.

Sect. 3. 1. Of the place Joh. 10. 11. & Joh. 15. 13. The good Shepheard.

2 That a man is not bound to purge himſelf, if anothers crime be imputed to him.

Sect. 4. 1 Of the place Ioh. 13. 37. I will lay down my life.

2 Peters readines was naturall; Pauls deliberate.

Sect. 5. 1. Of the place Ioh. 10. 15. Of Chriſts example.

2 Why Chriſt ſpoke this in the preſent time.

3 Of the abundant charity of Chriſt.

4 Of his ſpeech going to Emmaus.

5 Of his Apparition to S. Charles.

6 Of the Revelation to S. Brigid.

7 Of his mothers charity.

8 That none could take away Chriſts ſoule.

9 His owne will the onely cauſe of his dying ſo ſoon by S. Auguſtine.

10 And by Aquinas, becauſe he had ſtill all his ſtrength.

11 And

11 And by Marlorate becauſe he bowed his head, and it fell not, as ours do in death.

12 In what ſenſe it is true that the Iewes put him to Death.

13 Of Aquinas opinion, and of Silveſters opinion of Aquinas.

14 Chriſt was ſo the cauſe of his death, as he is of his wetting, which might, and doth not ſhut the window when it rains.

15 Who imitated Chriſt in this actuall emiſſion of the ſoul.

16 Upon what Reaſons this manner of dying in Chriſt is called Heroique, and by like Epithets.

17 Chriſt is ſaid to have done herein, as Saul, and Appollonia, and ſuch.

Sect. 6. 1 Of the places Ioh. 12. 25. Luc. 14. 26. Of Hating this life.

2. Ieſuits apply particularly this Hate.

3. If the place in the Epheſ. No man hateth his fleſh, be againſt ſelf-homicide, this place muſt by the ſame reaſon be for it.

4 S. Auguſtine denying that this place juſtifies the Donatiſts, excludes not all caſes.

Sect. 7. Of the place 1 Ioh. 3. 16. We ought to lay down our lives, &c.

2 All theſe places direct us to doe it ſo, as Chriſt did it, unconſtrained.

Sect. 8. 1. Of the place Phil. 1. 23. Cupio diſſolvi.

2. Of S. Pauls gradations to this wiſh, and of his correcting of it.

Sect. 9. 1 Of the place Gal. 4. 15. You would have plucked out your own eyes.

2 This was more then vitam profundere by Calvin.

Sect. 10. 1 Of the place, Rom. 9. 3. Anathema.

2 That he wiſhed herein Damnation.

3 That he conſidered not his Election at that time.

Sect. 11. Of the place, Exod. 32. 32. Dele me de libro.
2 That this imprecation was not onely to be blotted out of the Hiſtory of the Scripture as ſome ſay.
3 It was ſtranger that Chriſt ſhould admit that which might ſeeme a ſlip downward, when he wiſht an eſcape from death, then that Moſes ſhould have ſuch an exaltation upward, as to ſave his Nation by periſhing, yet both without inordinateneſſe.
4 How by Paulinus, a juſt man may ſafely ſay to God, Dele me.

Diſtinct. 5. Sect. 1.
1 Of Examples in Scripture.
2 The phraſe of Scripture never imputes this Act to any as a ſinne, when it relates the Hiſtory.
3 Irenæus forbids man to accuſe where God doth not.
4 Beza his anſwer to Ochius reaſon, that ſome Patriarchs lived in Polygamy, reaches not home to our caſe.
5 For it is not evident by any other place of Scripture, that this is ſinne, and here many examples concur.
Sect. 2. 1 Examples of Acts which were not fully ſelfe-homicides, but approaches.
2 Of the Prophet who puniſhed him that would not ſtrike him.
3 That when God doth eſpecially invite men to ſuch violence, he ſays ſo plainly. And therefore ſuch particular invitations may not be preſumed where they are not expreſſed.
Sect. 3. 1 Of Jonas.
2 Why S. Hierome calls only Jonas of all the Prophets holy.
Sect. 4. 1 Of Samſon.
2 The Church celebrates him as a Martyr.
3 Paulinus wiſhes ſuch a death as Samſons.
4 They which deny that he meant to kill himſelf, are confuted by the text.
5 They which ſay, he intended not his owne death principally, ſay the ſame as we doe.
6 That

6 That S. Auguſtines anſwer to this fact, that it was by ſpeciall inſtinct, hath no ground in the hiſtory.
7 Of Sayr his reaſon, in confirmation of Auguſtine, That Samſon prayed.
8 Of Pedraca his reaſon, that it was therefore the work of God, becauſe God effected it ſo, as it was deſired.
9 That he had as much reaſon, and as much authority to kill himſelfe, as to kill the Philiſtims. And that was only the glory of God.
10 That in this manner of dying, hee was a type of Chriſt.
Sect. 5. 1 Of Saul.
2 Whether the Amalekite did helpe to kill Saul. Whether Saul be ſaved or no.
3 In what caſes the Iewes, and Lyra confeſſe, that a man may kill himſelfe.
4 Lyra's reaſons why Saul is to be preſumed to have dyed well.
5 Burgenſis reaſon to the contrary; That if Saul were excuſable, the Amalekite was ſo too, is of no force.
5 Of Sauls Armour-bearer.
Sect. 6. 1 Of Achitophel.
2 He ſet his houſe in order, and he was buried.
Sect. 7. 1 Of Judas.
2 He dyed not by hanging in the opinion of Euthymius, Oecumenius, Papias S. Johns diſciple, and Theophilact.
3 By what meanes many places of Scripture have been generally otherwiſe accepted, then the text enforceth.
4 Judas not accuſed of this in the ſtory, nor in the two Prophetical Pſalmes of him.
5 Origens opinion of his repentance.
6 Calvin acknowledgeth all degrees of Repentance, which the Romane Church requires to Salvation to have been in Judas.
7 Petilians opinion that Judas was a Martyr.
8 His Act had ſome degrees of Iuſtice, by S. Auguſt.
Sect. 8. 1 Of Eleazar. 2 All

2 All confesse that it was an Act of vertue.
3 His destruction was certaine to him.
4 He did as much to his owne death, as Samson.
5 The reasons of this Act, alleadged in the Text, are Morall.
6 Saint Ambrose extols this by many concurrences.
7. Cajetans reason for justification thereof, is appliable to very many other cases of Selfe-homicide.
Sect. 9. 1 Of Rasis.
2 His reasons in the Text Morall.
3 Whether it be Pusillanimity, as Aristotle, Augustine and Aquinas urge.
4 Saint Augustine confesseth that in Cleombrotus it was greatnesse of minde.
5 How much great Examples governe.
6 That it was reputed Cowardlinesse in Antisthenes, being extremely sicke, not to kill himselfe.
7 Vpon what reasons Lyra excuses this, and like actions.
8 Burgensis his reason confesseth that there might have beene just causes for this act.

Conclusion

1 Why I refrained discourse of destiny herein.
2 Man made of shadow, and the Devill of fire by the Alcoran.
3 Our adversaries reasons contradict one another.
4 No precept given of loving our selves.
5 Encouragemens to contempt of death.
6 Why I abstaine from particular directions.
7 Laws forbid ordinary men to cure by extraordinary meanes, yet Kings of England, Fra. and Spaine doe it.
8 As Hierom Origen Chrysost. and Cassianus are excused for following Plato, in toleration of a lye, because the church had not then pronounced; so may it be in this.

THE PREFACE

Declaring the Reaſons, the Purpoſe, the way, and the end of the AVTHOR.

BEZA, A man as eminent and illuſtrious, in the full glory and Noone of Learning, as others were in the dawning, and Morning, when any, the leaſt ſparkle was notorious, (a) confeſſeth of himſelf, that only for the anguiſh of a Scurffe, which over-ranne his head, he had once drown'd himſelfe from the Millers bridge in Paris, if his Uncle by chance had not then come that way; I have often ſuch a ſickely inclination. And, whether it be, becauſe I had my firſt breeding and converſation with men of a ſuppreſſed and afflicted Religion, accuſtomed to the deſpite of death, and hungry of an imagin'd Martyrdome; Or that the common Enemie find that doore worſt locked againſt him in mee;

1. The reaſon of this diſcourſe.

a Epiſt. ante confeſſionem.

Or that there bee a perplexitie and flexibility in the doctrine it ſelfe; Or becauſe my Conſcience ever aſſures me, that no rebellious grudging at Gods gifts, nor other ſinfull concurrence accompanies theſe thoughts in me; or that a brave ſcorn, or that a faint cowardlineſſe beget it, whenſoever any affliction aſſailes me, mee thinks I have the keyes of my priſon in mine owne hand, and no remedy preſents it ſelfe ſo ſoone to my heart, as mine own ſword. Often Meditation of this hath wonne me to a charitable interpretation of their action, who dy ſo: and provoked me a little to watch and exagitate their reaſons, which pronounce ſo peremptory judgements upon them.

Incitements to charity towards the doer.

(b) A devout and godly man, hath guided us well, and rectified our uncharitableneſſe in ſuch caſes, by this remembrance, [Scis lapſum, &c. Thou knoweſt this mans fall, but thou knoweſt not his wraſtling; which perchance was ſuch, that almoſt his very fall is juſtified and accepted of God.] For, to this end, ſaith one, (c) [God hath appointed us tentations, that we might have ſome excuſes for our ſinnes, when he calles us to account]

b B. Dorotheus doctrin. 6.

c Boſq. conc 2.

An uncharitable miſ-interpreter unthriftily demoliſhes his own houſe, and repaires not another. He loſeth without any gaine or profit to ny. And, as (d) Tertullian comparing and making equall him which provokes another, and him who will be provoked by another, ſayes, [There is no difference, but that the provoker offended firſt. And that is nothing, becauſe in evill there is no

d lib. de patientia.

reſpect

respect of Order or Prioritie] So wee may soone become as ill as any offendor, if we offend in a severe increparion of the fact. For, (e) Climachus in his Ladder of Paradise, places these two steps very neere one ano her, when hee sayes, [Though in the world it were poss.ble for thee, to escape all d filing by actuall sinne, yet by judging and condemning those who are defiled, thou art defiled] In this thou art defiled, as (f) Basil notes, [That in comparing others sinnes, thou canst not avoid excusing thine owne] Especially this is done, if thy zeale be too fervent in the reprehension of others: For, as in most other Accidents, so in this also, Sinne hath the nature of Poyson, that (g) [It enters easiest, and works fastest upon cholerique constitutions.] It is good counsell of the Pharises stiled, (h) [Ne judices proximum donec ad ejus locum pertingas. Feele and wraftle with such tentations as he hath done, and thy zeale will be tamer. For, [(i) Therefore (saith the Apostle) it became Christ to be like us, that he might be mercifull.]

If therefore after a Christian protestation of an innocent purpose herein, And after a submission of all which is said, not only to every Christian Church, but to every Christian man, and after an entreaty, that the Reader will follow this advise of Tabæus, [(k) Qui litigant, sint ambo in conspectu tuo mali & rei, and trust neither me, nor the adverse part, but the Reasons, there be any scandall in this enterprise of mine, it is Taken, not Given. And though I know, that the mali-

e Scala paradis. grad. 3.

f In quæst. fuse di.p. ad q. 6.

g Forest. de venen. not. in observat. 2.

h Serar. Trihæres. l. 2. cap. 17.

i Heb. 2. 17.

Incitements to charity toward the Author.

k Serar. Trihæres. l. 2. cap. 17.

malitious prejudged man, and the lazy affectors of ignorance, will uſe the ſame calumnies and obtreſtations toward me, (for the voyce and ſound of the Snake and Gooſe is all one) yet becauſe I thought, that as in the poole of Bethſaida, (l) there was no health till the water was troubled, ſo the beſt way to finde the truth in this matter, was to debate and vexe it, (for (m [We muſt as well diſpute de veritate, as pro veritate,]) I abſtained not for feare of miſ-interpretation from this undertaking. Our ſtomachs are not now ſo tender, and queaſie, after ſo long feeding upon ſolid Divinity, nor we ſo umbragious and ſtartling, having been ſo long enlightned in Gods path, that wee ſhould thinke any truth ſtrange to us, or relapſe into that childiſh age, in which (n) a Councell in France forbad Ariſtotles Metaphyſiques, and puniſhed with Excommunication the excribing, reading, or having that booke.

l Io. 5. 2.

m Athenag. de reſur.

Why it is not inconvenient now to handle this point.

n Fileſacus de authorit. Epiſ. cap. 1. § 7.

Contemplative and bookiſh men, muſt of neceſſitie be more quarrelſome then others, becauſe they contend not about matter of fact, nor can determine their controverſies by any certaine witneſſes, nor judges. But as long as they goe towards peace, that is Truth, it is no matter which way. (o) The tutelare Angels reſiſted one another in Perſia, but neither reſiſted Gods revealed purpoſe. (p) Hierome and Gregorie ſeem to be of opinion, that Salomon is damned; Ambroſe and Auguſtine, that he is ſaved: All Fathers, all Diſſentions among ſcholars more and harder to end then others.

o Dan. 10.

p Humf. Ieſui. part. 2. ad rat. 5

all zealous of Gods glory. (q) At the ſame time when the Romane Church canonized Becket, the Schooles of Paris diſputed whether hee could be ſaved; both Catholique Judges, and of reverend authoritie. And after ſo many Ages of a devout and religious celebrating the memory of Saint Hierome, Cauſæus hath ſpoken ſo dangerouſly, that (r) Campian ſaies, hee pronounces him to be as deepe in hell as the Devill. But in all ſuch intricacies, where both opinions ſeem equally to conduce to the honor of God, his Juſtice being as much advanced in the one, as his Mercie in the other, it ſeemes reaſonable to me, that this turne the ſcales, if on either ſide there appeare charity towards the poore ſoule departed. (ſ) The Church in her Hymnes and Antiphones, doth often ſalute the Nayles and Croſſe, with Epithets of ſweetneſſe, and thanks; But the Speare which pierced Chriſt when he was dead, it ever calles, dirum Mucronem.

This pietie, I proteſt againe, urges me in this diſcourſe; and what infirmity ſoever my reaſons may have, yet I have comfort in Treſmegiſtus Axiome, (t) [Qui pius eſt, ſummè Philoſophatur.] And therefore without any diſguiſing, or curious and libellous concealing, I preſent and obje&t it to all of candor, and indifferencie, to eſcape that juſt taxation (u) [Novum malitiæ genus eſt, & intemperantiæ, ſcribere quod occultes.] For as, (x) when Ladiſlaus tooke occaſion of the great ſchiſme, to corrupt the Nobility in Rome, and hoped

q ejuſd. part 1. præfat. ad Com. Leiceſt.

r Ratio 5.

n Such perplexities wee ought to enclin to that ſide that favoureth the dead.

ſ Notæ Mallon. in Paleot. Sin. part. 1. cap. 2.

t De pietate et philoſophia. Why I make it ſo publique.

u Hier. Apol. adverſ. Ruffin.

x Theodor. a Niem. l. 2. ca. 37.

ped thereby to poſſeſſe the Towne, to their ſeven Governours whom they called Sapientes, they added three more, whom they called Bonos, and confided in them; So doe I wiſh, and and as much as I can, effect,) that to thoſe many learned and ſubtile men which have travelled in this point, ſome charitable and compaſſionate men might be added.

y Teſarid. 6. What reader I wiſh.

If therefore, of Readers, which (y) Gorionides obſerves to be of foure ſorts, (Spunges which attract all without diſtinguiſhing; Howre-glaſſes, which receive and powre out as faſt; Bigges, which retaine onely the dregges of the Spices, and let the Wine eſcape; And Sives, which retaine the beſt onely,) I finde ſome of the laſt ſort, I doubt not but they may bee hereby enlightened. And (z) as the eyes of Eve, were opened by the taſte of the Apple, though it bee ſaid before that ſhee ſaw the beauty of the tree, So the digeſting of this may, though not preſent faire obj cts, yet bring them to ſee the nakedneſſe and deformity of their owne reaſons, founded upon a rigorous ſuſpition, and winne them to be of that temper, which (a) Chriſoſtome commends, [He which ſuſpects benignly would faine be deceived, and bee overcome. and is pionſly glad, when he findes it to be falſe, which he did uncharitably ſuſpect.] And it may have as much vigour (as (b) one obſerves of another Author) as the Sunne in March, it may ſtirre and diſſolve humors, though not expell them; for that z Gen. 3. 6. et 7.

a Hom. de S. Suſanna.

b Steuch. de Valla de Don. conſt.

that muſt bee a worke of a ſtronger power.

Every branch which is excerpted from other authors, and engrafted here, is not written for the readers faith, but for illuſtration and compariſon. Becauſe I undertooke the declaration of ſuch a propoſition as was controverted by many, and therefore was drawne to the citation of many authorities, I was willing to goe all the way with company, and to take light from others, as well in the iourney as at the journeys end. If therefore in multiplicity of not neceſſary citations there appeare vanity, or oſtentation, or digreſſion my honeſty muſt make my excuſe and compenſation, who acknowledg as (c) Pliny doth [That to chuſe rather to be taken in a theft, then to give every man due, is obnoxii animi, et infelicis ingenii.] I did it the rather becauſe ſcholaſtique and artificiall men uſe this way of inſtructing; and I made account that I was to deale with ſuch, becauſe I preſume that naturall men are at leaſt enough inclinable of themſelves to this doctrine.

The reaſon of ſo many citations.

c Epiſt. Tit. Veſp.

This my way; and my end is to remove ſcandall. For certainly God often puniſheth a ſinner much more ſeverely, becauſe others have taken occaſion of ſinning by his fact. If therefore wee did correct in our ſelves this eaſines of being ſcandalized, how much eaſier and lighter might we make the puniſhment of many tranſgreſſors? for God in his judgements hath almoſt made us his aſſiſtants, and counſellers, how far he ſhall puniſh; and our interpretation of anothers ſinne doth doth often give the measure to Gods Justice or Mercy.

God puniſhes that ſinn moſt which occaſions moſt ſinne in others.

d Paulin. Ep. 4. Severo.

If therefore, since (d) [disorderly long haire which was pride and wantonnesse in Absolon, and squallor and horridnes in Nebuchodonozor, was vertue and strength in Samson, and sanctification in Samuel,] these severe men will not allow to indifferent things the best construction they are capable of, nor pardon my inclination to do so, they shall pardon this opinion, that their severity proceeds from a self-guiltines, and give me leave to apply that of Ennodius, (e) [That it is the nature of stiffe wickednesse, to think that of others, which themselves deserve, and it is all the comfort which the guilty have, not to find any innocent.]

e Epist. ad Asyrium.

THE

THE FIRST PART OF LAW and NATURE.

Distinction I.

SECT. I.

AS (a) Lawyers use to call that impossible, which is so difficult; that by the rules of law it cannot be afforded, but by the indulgence of the Prince, and excercise of his Prerogative: So Divines are accustomed to call that sinne, which for the most part is so, and which naturally occasions and accompanies sinne. Of such condition is this SELF-HOa Palæotus de notbis. c. 28.

1. Why wee first prove that this sinne is not irremissible.

HOMICIDE: which to be ſinne every body hath ſo ſucked, and digeſted, and incorporated into the body of his Faith and Religion, that now they preſcribe againſt any oppoſer; and all diſcourſe in this point is upon the degrees of this ſinne, and how farre it exceeds all other: So that none brings the metall now to the teſt, nor touch, but onely to the balance. Therefore although whatſoever is in our appetite good or bad, was firſt in our underſtanding true or falſe, and therefore if wee might proceed orderly, our firſt diſquiſition ſhould be employd upon the firſt ſource, and origen, which is, whether this opinion be true or falſe, yet finding our ſelves under the iniquity and burden of this cuſtome, and preſcription, we muſt obey the neceſſitie, and preposterouſly examine: Firſt, why this fact ſhould be ſo reſolutely condemned, and why there ſhould be this precipitation in our judgement, to pronounce this above all other ſins irremiſſible: and then, having removed that which was neereſt us, and delivered our ſelves from the tyranny of this prejudice: our judgment may be brought neerer to a ſtraightneſſe, and our charity awakned, and entendred to apprehend, that this act may be free not onely from thoſe enormous degrees of ſinne, but from all.

SECT. II.

1. Three ſorts of miſtakers of this ſinne.

They who pronounce this ſinne to be ſo neceſſarily ſarily damnable, are of one of theſe three perſwaſions. Either they miſ-affirme that this act alwaies proceeds from deſperation; and ſo they load it with all thoſe comminations with which from Scriptures, Fathers, Hiſtories, that common place abounds. Or elſe they entertaine that dangerous opinion, that there is in this life an impenitibleneſſe, and impoſſibilitie of returning to God, and that apparent to us (for elſe it could not juſtifie our uncharitable cenſure;) Or elſe they build upon this foundation, that this act being preſum'd to be ſinne, and all ſinne unpardonable without repentance, this is therefore unpardonable, becauſe the very ſin doth preclude all ordinary wayes of repentance.

SECT. III.

To thoſe of the firſt Sect, if I might be as vainly ſubtile, as they are uncharitably ſevere, I ſhould anſwer, that all deſperation is not ſinnefull. For in the devill it is not ſinne, nor doth hee demerit by it, becauſe he is not commanded to hope. Nor in a man which undertook an auſtere and diſciplinary taming of his body by faſts or corrections, were it ſinfull to deſpaire that God would take from him ſtimulum carnis. Nor in a Prieſt employ'd to convert infidels, were it ſinfull to deſpaire; that God would give him the power of miracles; If therefore to quench and extinguiſh this ſtimulum carnis, a man ſhould kill himſelfe;

1. That all deſperation is not hainous; and that this act doth not alwaies proceed from deſperation.

the effect and fruit of this desperation were evill, and yet the root it selfe not necessarily so. No detestation nor dehortation against this sinne of desperation when it is a sinne) can be too earnest. But yet (a) since it may be without infidelitie, it cannot be greater then that. And though Aquinas there calls it sinne truly, yet he sayes hee doth so, because it occasions many sinnes. And if it bee as (b) others affirme, Pœna peccati, it is then involuntarium, which will hardly consist with the nature of sinne: Certainly, though many devout men have justly imputed to it the cause and effect of sin, yet as in the (c) penitentiall Cannons, greater Penance is inflicted upon one who kills his wife, than one who kills his mother; and the reason added, not that the fault is greater, but that otherwise more would commit it; So is the sinne of desperation so earnestly aggravated; because springing from Sloth, and Pusillanimity, our nature is more slippery and inclinable to such a descent, than to presumptions, which yet without doubt do more wound and violate the Majesty of God, then desperation doth. But howsoever, that none may justly say, that all which kill themselves, have done it out of a despaire of Gods mercy, (which is the onely sinnefull despaire) we shall in a more proper place, when we come to consider the examples exhibited in Scriptures, and other Histories; finde many who at that act have been so far from despaire, that they have esteemed it a great degree of Gods mercy, to a Tho. 22. q. 2. ar. 2.

2. It may bee without infidelitie.

3 When it is pœna peccati it is involuntarium.
b Perer. Exod. c. 11. disp. 4.

4. The reason why men ordinarily aggravate it.
c Can. 17.

to have been admitted to ſuch a glorifying of his name, and have proceeded therein as religiouſly as in a ſacrifice; and as (d) one ſayes, elegantly, of Job, venere in glorioſa Proverbia, and of whom we may properly ſay, that which Moſes ſaid, when they puniſhed upon one another their Idolatry, Conſecraſtis manus veſtras Domino.

d Boſquier Con. 2.

Exod. 32. 29.

When I come to conſider their words who are of the ſecond opinion, and which allow an impenitibleneſſe in this life (of which Calvin is a ſtrong Authorizer, if not an Authour; who ſayes, that actuall impenitence is not the ſinne intimated in Matth. 12. 30, & 31. But it is a willing reſiſting of the holy Ghoſt, into which whoſoever falls, Tenendum eſt, ſaith he, we muſt hold that he never riſeth again) becauſe theſe hard and miſ-interpretable words fall from them, when they are perplexed, and intricated with that heavy queſtion of ſinne, againſt the holy Ghoſt, and becauſe I preſume them to ſpeak proportionally and analogally to their other Doctrine, I rather incline to afford them this conſtruction, that they place this impenitibleneſſe onely in the knowledge of God, or that I underſtand them not, then either beleeve them literally, or beleeve that they have clearly expreſſed their own meanings. For I ſee not why we ſhould be lother to allow, that God hath made ſome impeccable, then impenitible. Neither do I perceive, that if they had their purpoſe, and this were granted to them, that therfore ſuch an impenitibleneſſe muſt of neceſſity be

5. Of the ſecond opinion, impenitibleneſſe.

6. Of Calvins opinion, Mat. 12. 30.

7. None impeccable, nor impenitible.

be concluded to have been in this person, by reason of this act.

SECT. IIII.

1. Of the third sort, and that we ought not to presume actuall impenitence in this case.

But the third sort is the tamest of all the three, and gives greatest hope of being reduced, and rectifyed: For though they pronounce severely upon the fact, yet it is onely upon one reason, that the fact precludes all entrance to repentance. Wherein I wonder why they should refuse to apply their opinions to the milder rules of the Casuists (a) which ever in doubtfull cases, teach an inclination to the safer side. And though it be safer to thinke a thing to be sin, then not, yet that rule serves for your own information, and for a bridle to you, not for anothers condemnation. They use to interpret that rule of taking the safer side, that in things necessary (necessitate finis, as repentance is to salvation) wee must follow any probable opinion, though another bee more probable; and that, directly that opinion is to be followed, Quæ favet animæ: which they exemplifie thus. (b) That though all Doctors hold that baptisme of a childe not yet throughly born, in the hand or foot to be ineffectuall, yet all Doctors counsell to baptize in that case, & to beleeve of good effect. And the example of the good theife informes us, that repentance works immediately, and from that history Calvin collects, That such paine in articulo mortis, is naturally apt to a Aqor. Mor. Instit. pa. 1. l. 2. c. 16.

2. Which is the safer side in doubts.

b Zambran. de pœniten. dub. 2. n. 39.

7. In articulo mortis, the Church interprets ever favourably.

to beget repentance; Since the Church is so indulgent, and liberall to her children, (c) that at the point of death shee will afford her treasure of baptisme to one which hath been mad from his birth, by the same reason as to a child; (d) yea, to one fallen lately into madnesse, though it appeare he were in mortall sinne, if he have but attrition, which is but a feare of hell, & no tast of Gods glory; And such attrition shall be presum'd to be in him, if nothing appeare evidently to the contrary: (e) If she be content to extend and interpret this point of death, of every danger by sea, or travell; (f) If she will interpret any mortall sinne, in a man provoked by sodain passion, and proceeding from indeliberation, to be no worse nor of greater malignity, then the act of a childe. If being unable to succour one before (g) she will deliver him from excommunication after he is dead. (h) If she bee content that both the penitent and confessor, bee but diligentes, not diligentissimi; (i) If rather then she will be frustrate of her desire to dispense her treasure, she yeelds that mad and possessed men, shall be bound till they may receive extreame unction. (k) If lastly she absolve some whether they will or no, why should we abhorre our mothers example, and being brethren, be severer than the Parent? Not to pray for them which dye without faith is a precept so obvious to every Religion, that even (l) Mahomet hath inhibited it: But to presume impenitence, because you were not by, and heard it, is an usurpation.

This

c Idem de bap. dub. 8. n. 1.

d Ibid. n. 2.

e Idem prælud. 1. n. 7.

f Idem de pœnitent. dub. 3. nu. 2.

g Ibidem.

h Dub. 7. nu. 9.

i Idem de unct. dub. 2. nu. 3.

k Sayr Thesaur casf. consci. tom. 1. l. 2. c. 21. nu. 2.

l Alcor. azoar. 19.

4. What true repentance is.

This is true repentance (saith Clement) [(m) To doe no more, and to speake no more, those things, whereof you repent; and not to be ever sinning, and ever asking pardon.] Of such a repentance as this our case is capable enough.

n Lib. 3. ad amandum. ep. 1.

And of (n) one who died before he had repented, good Paulinus would charitably interpret his haste. [That he chose rather to go to God debitor quam liber] and so to die in his debt rather than to carry his acquittance. As therefore in matters of fact, the delinquent is so much favor'd that (o) a Lay-man shall sooner be beleeved which acquits him, then a Clerk which accuseth (though in (p) other cases there be much disproportion betweene the value of these two testimonies;) So, if any will of necessitie proceede to judgement in our case, those reasons, which are most benigne, and which, (as I sayd) favent animæ, ought to have the best acceptation and entertainment.

5. Witnesses which acquit, more acceptable then accusers.

o Dist. 81. ca. Clerici.

p 12. q. 1. c. duo sunt.

SECT. V.

1. Why wee wave the ordinary definition of sinne taken from S. Augustine, and follow that of Aquinas.

Of all those definitions of sinne, which the first Rhapsoder Pet. Lombard hath presented out of ancient learning, as well the Summists as Casuists doe most insist upon that which he brings from (a) S. Augustine, as, commonly, where that Father serves their turnes, they never goe further. This definition is, that sinne is dictum, factum, concupitum, contra aternam legem Dei. This they stick too, because this definition (if it be one) best beares their descant a Lib. 2. Dist. 35. A.

ſcant; and is the eaſieſt conveyance, and cariage, and vent for their conceptions; and applying rules of Divinitie to particular caſes: by which they have made all our actions perplex'd and litigious, in foro interiori, which is their tribunall: by which torture they have brought mens conſciences to the ſame reaſons of complaint, which (b) Pliny attributes to Rome, till Trajans time; that Civitas funaata legibus, legibus evertebatur. For as Informers vext them with continuall delations upon penall Lawes, ſo doth this act of ſinning entangle wretched conſciences in manifold and deſperate anxieries.

Of the torturing practiſe of Caſuiſts.

b Panegyr. Traian.

But for this uſe this definition cannot be thought to be applyable to ſinne onely, ſince it limits it to the externall Law of God, (which word though Lombard have not, (c) Sayr and all the reſt retain) for this eternall Law is (d ratio gubernativa Dei, which is no other then his eternall decree for the government of the whole world, and that is Providence. And certainly againſt this, becauſe it is not alwayes revealed, a man may without ſinne both think and ſpeak and doe: as I may reſiſt a diſeaſe, of which God hath decreed I ſhall die. Yea though he ſeeme to reveale his will, we may reſiſt it, with prayers againſt it, becauſe it is often conditioned, and accompanied with limitations and exceptions. Yea though God deale plainly by Nathan, (e) [The child ſhall ſurely die] David reſiſted Gods decree by prayer and penance. We muſt therefore ſeek another definition of ſinne

c Theſaur. Caſ. Conſc. l. 1. Ca. 5.
d Tho. 22. q. 91. ar. 2.

3. Of the eternall law of God in Auguſtines definition againſt which a man may doe without ſinne.

e 2. Sam. 12. 14.

which I think is not ſo well delivered in thoſe words of Aquinas (f) [Omnis defectus debiti actus habet rationem peccati] as in his other; [Peccatum eſt actus devians ab ordine debiti finis contra regulam naturæ rationis, aut legis æternæ] For here lex æterna being put as a member and part of the definition, it cannot admit that vaſt and large acceptation, which it could not eſcape in the deſcription of S. Auguſtine, but muſt in this place be neceſſarily intended of lex divina. Through this definition therefore, we will trace this act of Self-homicide, and ſee whether it offend any of thoſe three ſorts of Law.

f 22. q. 64. ar. 1. Con. 4. Of the Definition which we follow.

SECT. VI.

1. How the law of nature, of reaſon, and of God, exhibited in this definition, are all one; and how diverſly accepted.

Of all theſe three Laws, of Nature, of Reaſon, and of God, every precept which is permanent, and binds alwayes, is ſo compoſ'd and elementedand complexion'd, that to diſtinguiſh and ſeperate them is a Chymick work: And either it doth only ſeeme to be done, or is done by the torture and vexation of ſchoole-limbicks, which are exquiſite and violent diſtinctions. For that part of Gods Law which bindes alwayes, bound before it was written, and ſo it is but dictamen rectæ rationis: and that is the Law of nature. And therefore Iſidore as it is related into the (a) Canons, dividing all Law into divine and humane, addeth [Divine conſiſts of nature, Humane of cuſtome] Yet though theſe three be almoſt all one; yet becauſe

a Diſt. 1. Omnes.

cause one thing may be commanded divers waies, and by divers authorities, as the common Law, a Statute, and a Decree of an arbitrary Court, may bind me to do the same thing, it is necessary that we weigh the obligation of every one of these Laws which are in the Definition.

But first I will only mollify and prepare their crude and undigested opinions and prejudice which may be contracted from the often iteration, and specious but sophisticate inculcatings of Law, and Nature, and Reason, and God, with this Antidote, that many things which are of Naturall and Humane and Divine Law may be broken. Of which sort (b) to conceale a secret delivered unto you is one. And the Honour due to Parents is so strictly of all these Laws, as none of the second Table more. Yet in a iust warre a Parricide is not guilty; yea by a law of Venice, though (c) Bodin say, it were better the Towne were sunk then ever there should be any example or president therein; A sonne shall redeeme himselfe from banishment by killing his Father being also banished. And we (d) read of another state (and Laws of Civil Commonwealths may not easily be pronounced to be against Nature) where when Fathers came to be of an unprofitable and useless age, the sons must beat them to death with clubs: And of another, where all persons of above 70 years were dispatched.

2. In some cases all these three lawes may be broke at once.

3. Revealing a secret.
b Soto de teg. Secr. membr. 1. q. 2.

4. Parricide.
c de Rep. l. 1. cap. 4.

d Ælian. l. 4. cap. 1.

SECT. VII.

1. Of the law, of nature; and that against it strictly taken, either no sin, or all sinne is done.

2. To doe against nature, makes us not guilty of a greater sinne, but more inexcusable.

3. Nothing so evill, that is never good.

4. No evill but disobedience.

5. Lying naturally worse then Selfe-homicide.

This terme the law of Nature, is so variously and unconstantly deliver'd, as I confesse I read it a hundred times before I understand it once, or can conclude it to signifie that which the author should at that time meane. Yet I never found it in any sence which might justifie their vociferations upon sinnes against nature. For the transgressing of the Law of nature in any act doth not seeme to me to increase the haynousnesse of that act, as though nature were more obligatory than divine Law: but only in this respect it aggravates it, that in such a sin we are inexcusable by any pretence of ignorance since by the light of nature we might discern it. Many things which we call sin, and so evill have been done by the commandement of God; by Abraham and the Israelites in their departing from Ægypt. So that this evill is not in the nature of the thing, nor in the nature of the whole harmony of the world, and therefore in no Law of nature, but in violating, or omitting a Commandement: All is obedience or disobedience. Whereupon our Country-man (a) Sayr confesseth, that this SELF-HOMICIDE is not so intrinsecally ill, as to Ly. Which is also evident by Cajetan (b) where he affirmes, that I may not to save my life, accuse my self upon the Racke. And though Cajetan extend no farther herein, then that I may not bely my self: Yet (c) Soto evicts, a Thesaur. cas. conf. l. 7. c. 9. n. 9.

b sup. 22. q. 37. ar. 2.
c de teg. secr. memb. 1. q. 3.

evicts, that Cajetans reasons, with as much force forbid any accusation of my self, though it be true. So much easier may I depart with life then with truth, or with fame, by Cajetan. And yet we find that of their fame many holy men have been very negligent. For not onely Augustine, Anselm, and Hierome, betray themselves by unurged confessions, but (d) St Ambrose procur'd certain prostitute women, to come into his chamber, that by that he might be defamed, and the People thereby abstaine from making him Bishop. This intrinsique and naturall evill therefore will hardly be found. For, (e God who can command a murder, cannot command an evill, or a sinne; because the whole frame and government of the world being his, he may vse it as he will. As, though he can doe a miracle, he can do nothing against nature; because (f) [That is the nature of every thing, which he works in it.] Hereupon, & upon that other true rule, (g [whatsoever is wrought by a superior Agent, upon a patient, who is naturally subject to that Agent, is naturall] we may safely infer, that nothing which we call sinne is so against nature, but that it may be sometimes agreeable to nature.

6 Fame may be neglected; yet we are as much bound to preserve it, as life.
d Soto ibid.

e Th. 22. q. 104. ar. 4. ad 2. m.
7 God cannot command a sin, yet he can command murder.
f Aug. cont. faust. l. 26. ca. 3.
g Th. 1. q. 105. ar. 6. ad. 1.

On the other side, nature is often taken so widely and so extensively, as all sinne is very truely said to be against nature. Yea, before it come to be sinne. For S. Augustine sayes (h) [Every vice, as it is vice, is against nature.] And vice is but habite which being produced to act, is then sinne. Yea the h De li. Arb. l. 13. ca. 13.

8 Originall sin is from nature.

the parent of all sinne, which is hereditary originall sin, which (i) Aquinas calls, [a languor and faintnesse in our nature, and an indisposition, proceeding from the dissolution of the harmony of originall Justice] is by him said to be in us, [(k) quasi naturale] And is, as he saith in another place, so (l) naturall, [that though it is propagated with our nature, in generation, though it be not caused by the principles of nature.] So (m) as if God would now miraculously frame a man, as he did the first woman, of another's flesh and bone, and not by way of generation, into that creature, all infirmities of our flesh would be derived but not originall Sin. So that originall sinne is traduced by nature onely, and all actuall sinne issuing from thence, all sinne is naturall.

i 12. q. 81. ar. 4.

k 3. q. 8. ar. 5. ad 7.

l 1. q. 100. ar. 1. ad 3.

m 12. q. 81. ar. 4.

SECT. VIII.

But to make our approaches neerer. Let us leave the consideration of the Law of nature, as it is Providence, and Gods decree for his government of the great world; and contract it only to the law of nature in the lesse world, our selves. There is then in us a (a) double law of nature, Sensitive and Rationall; and (b) the first doth naturally lead and conduce to the other. But because by the languor and faintnesse of our nature, we lazily rest there, and for the most part goe no further in our journeys therfore out of this ordinary

1 That if our adversaries by law of Nature meane onely Sensitive Nature, they say nothing, for so most vertuous actions are against Nature.

a Tho. 12. q. 71. ar. 2. Con.

b Carbo Cas. Cons. To. 2. pa. 1. c. 5.

nary indiſpoſition, Aquinas pronounceth, that the inclinatio 1 of our ſenſitive nature is againſt the law of reaſon. And this is that which the Apoſtle calls the law of the fleſh, and oppoſeth againſt the law of the ſpirit. Rom. 7. 23.

Now although it be poſſible to ſinne and tranſgreſſe againſt this ſenſitive nature, which naturally and lawfully (c) is inclined upon bonum delectabile, by denying to it lawfull refreſhings, and fomentations; yet I think this is not that law of nature which theſe abhorrers of SELF-HOMICIDE complaine to bee violated by that Act. For ſo they might aſwell accuſe all diſcipline and auſteritie, and affectation of Martyrdome, which are as contrarie to the Law of ſenſitive Nature. c Tho. ibid.

SECT. IX.

And therefore, by law of nature, if they will meane any thing, and ſpeak to be underſtood, they muſt entend the law of rationall nature: which is that light which God hath afforded us of his eternall law; and which is uſually call'd recta ratio. Now this law of nature as it is onely in man and in him directed upon Piety, Religion, Sociableneſſe; and ſuch for as it reacheth to the preſervation both of Species and individualls, there are lively prints of it in beaſts) is with moſt authors confounded and made the ſame with jus gentium. So (a) Azorius, and ſo (b) Syl-

1 As the law of Nature is Recta Ratio, it is jus gentium. So Immolation of men and Idolatry, are not againſt Nature.

a Mor. Inſt. 9. l. 5. cap. 1.

b Com. ad leg. Reg. præ.

c De Som. sign.

(b) Sylvius delivers [That the law of nature, as it concerns only reason is jus gentium,] and therefore whatever is jus gentium that is, practised (and accepted in most especially civil'st nations) is also law of nature, which (c) Artemidorus exemplifies, in these two, Deum colere, mulieribus vinci.

How then shall we accuse Idolatry, or immolation of men to be sinnes against nature? For (not to speak of the first, which like a deluge overflowed the whole world, and only Canaan, was a little Ark swimming upon it, delivered from utter drowning, but yet not from stormes and and leakes, and dangerous weather-beatings,) immolation of men was so ordinary, that (d) [almost every nation, though not barbarous, had received it.] the (e) Druids of France made their divinations from sacrifices of men. (f) And in their wars they presaged also after the same fashion. And for our times it appeares, by the Spanish relations, (g) that in only Hispaniola they sacrific'd yearly 20000 children.

d Pol. Virg. de Invent. rer. l. 5. cap. 8.
e Middendorp. de Acad. l. 6. ex Io. Bermo.
f Cæsar. Bell. Gall. l. 6.
g Mat. Met. præf. ad Oser. Hist.

SECT. X.

However since this is receiv'd [(a) that the nature of every thing is the forme by which it is constituted, and that to doe against it, is to doe against nature] since also this forme in man is reason and so to commit against reason is to sin against nature; what sin can be exempt from that charge, that it is a sin against nature, since every sin is a 12. q. 71. ar. 2. Con.

1 A reason is the forme, and so the Nature of man, every sin is against Nature, yea, whatsoever agrees not exactly with Christian Religion.

is againſt reaſon. And in this acceptation (b) Lucidus takes the law of nature, when he ſayes [God hath written in our hearts ſuch a law of nature, as by that, we are ſaved in the coming of Chriſt.] And ſo every act which concurres not exactly with our religion ſhall bee ſinne againſt nature. Which will appeare evidently out of (c Jeremies words, where God promiſeth as a future bleſſing, that he will write his lawes in their hearts, which is the Chriſtian law. So that the Chriſtian law, and the law of nature, (for that is the law written in hearts) muſt be all one. Sinne therefore againſt nature is not ſo enormous, but that that may ſtand true, which Navar ſaith (d) [that many lawes both naturall and divine doe bind onely ad veniale.] And ſo (not diſputing at this time, whither it be againſt reaſon alwaies or no,) (for reaſon and vertue differ no otherwiſe than a cloſe box of druggs, and an emplaiſter or medicine made from thence and applyed to a particular uſe and neceſſitie; and in the box are not onely aromatike ſimples, but many poyſons, which the nature of the diſeaſe, and the art of the Adminiſtrer make wholſome.) This SELF-HOMICIDE is no more againſt the law of nature, then any other ſinne, nor in any of the acceptations which we touch'd before. And this is as much as I determined for this firſt Diſtinction.

b Epiſtola multis eſtji.

c 31. 33.

d Manual. ca. 23. nu. 50.

2. Vertue produced to act, differs ſo from reaſon, as a medicine made and applyed, from a box of druggs.

Distinction II.

SECT. I.

1. Sinnes against nature in a particular sense, are by School-men said to be unnaturall lusts; and this. But in Scriptures onely the first is so called.
a Mor. Instit. p. 1. l. 4. cap. 1.
b 22. q. 154. ar. 11. Con.

There is a lower and narrower acceptation of this law of nature (which could not well be discerned but by this light, and fore-discoursing) against which law, this sinne, and a very few more, seeme to be directly bent, and opposed. For (a) Azorius sayes, [That there are sinnes peculiarly against nature, which are contra naturalem usum hominis] which he exemplifies in unnaturall lusts, and in this. And of the former example (b) Aquinas sayes, [That there are some kinds of lusts which are sinnes against nature, both as they are generally vices, and as they are against the naturall order of the act of generation.] In the Scriptures also this sinne of mis-using the Sexe, is called against nature, by (c) S. Paul. And once (in the vulgar edition) in the (d) old Testament. But (as I intimated once before) this sinne against nature is so much abhor'd, not because the being against nature makes it so abominable, but because the knowledge therof is so domestique, so neare, so inward to us, that our conscience cannot slumber in it, nor dissemble it, as in most other sinnes it doth. For, in that example of the Levite in the booke of Judges, (if those wicked men did seeke him for that abomin. ble use, which (e) Josephus sayes, c Rom. 1. 20.

d Judg. 19. 24

2. Of the example of the Levite in the Judges.
e Antiq. l. 5. c. 2.

ſayes, was onely for his wife; And when himſelf relates to the people the hiſtory of his injury in the next chapter, he complains that they went about to kill him, to enjoy his wife, and of no other kind of injury;) though the Hoſt which had harbor'd him diſſwade the men thus, [ſolum non operemini hoc contra naturam] will any man ſay, that the offer which he made them to extinguiſh their furious luſt, to expoſe to them his owne daughter, a virgine, and the wife of his gueſt, (which Ioſephus encreaſes by calling her a Levite and his kinſ-woman,) was a leſſe ſinne, then to have given way to their violence, or leſſe againſt nature, becauſe that which they ſought was contra naturalem uſum. Is not every voluntary pollution, in genere peccati, as much againſt the law of nature, as this was, ſince it ſtrayes and departs from the way, and defeats the end of that facultie in us, which is generation? The violating therefore of the law of nature, doth in no acc ptation aggravate the ſinne. Neither doth the Scripture call any other ſinne, then diſorderly luſt by that name; S. Paul once appeals to the law of nature, when arguing about the covering of heads, of men or women at publique prayer, hee ſayes, [Fudge in your ſelves;] And [Doth not nature teach you, that if a man have long hatre, it is a ſhame.] Not that this was againſt that law of nature to which all men were bound, for it was not alwayes ſo. For, in moſt places, ſhavings and cuttings, and pullings, are by the Satyriques and Epigrammatiſts

1 *Cor.*11.14.
3. S Pauls uſe of the phraſe Law of nature in long haire.

of those times, reprehended for delicacy and effeminateneſſe. And the Romans till forrain corruption had envenom'd them, were ever call'd gloriouſly Intenſi; but becauſe (ſayes Calvine) [it was at that time received as a cuſtome throughout all Greece, to weare ſhort haire, S. Paul calls it naturall.]

So Vegetius ſayes [That from (f) November to March the Seas are ſhut up, and intractable lege naturæ,] which now are tame and tractable enough, and this alſo lege naturæ. And that cuſtome which S. Paul call'd naturall in Greece, was not long naturall there. For the Biſhops of Rome, when they made their Canons for Prieſts ſhavings, (g) did it becauſe they would have their Prieſts differ from the Prieſts of the Greek Church. So that S. Paul mentioning the law of nature, argues not from the weight and hainouſneſſe of the fault, as our adverſaries uſe; but uſeth it as the neareſt and moſt familiar and eaſie way to lead them to a knowledge of decencie, and a departing from ſcandalous ſingularitie in thoſe publique meetings.

f De re milit. l. 4. c. 39. 4. Vegetius uſe of that phraſe.

g Pierius de barbis Sacerdotum.

1. Selfe-preſervation is not ſo of particular law of nature, but that beaſts naturally tranſgreſſe it, whom it binds more then us; and we, when the reaſon thereof ceaſes in us, may tranſgreſſe it, and ſometimes muſt.

SECT. II.

And though Azorius (as I ſaid) and many others, make this Selfe-homicide an example of ſin, againſt particular Law of Nature; yet it is onely upon this reaſon, that ſelfe-preſervation is of Naturall Law. But that Naturall Law is ſo generall, that that it extends to beasts more then to us, because they cannot compare degrees of obligation and distinctions of duties and offices, as we can. For we know that (a)[some things are naturall to the species, and other things to the particular person] and that the latter may correct the first. And therefore when (b) Cicero consulted the oracle at Delphos, he had this answer, [Follow your owne nature] And so certainly that place, (c)[It is not good for the man to be alone] is meant there, because if he were alone, Gods purpose of multiplying mankinde had beene frustrate. Yet though this be ill for conservation of our species in generall, yet it may be very fit for some particular man, to abstaine from all such conversation of marriage or men, and retire to a sollitude. For some may need that counsell of (d) Chrysostome, [Depart from the high way, & transplant thy self in some inclosed ground: for it is hard for a tree which stands by the way side, to keep her fruit, till it be ripe.] Our safest assurance, that we be not mislead with the ambiguity of the word Naturall Law, and the perplex'd variety thereof in Authors, will be this, That [all the precepts of Naturall Law, result in these, Fly evill, seek good;] That is, doe according to Reason.

For these, as they are indispensable by any authority, so they cannot be abolished nor obscur'd, but that our hearts shall ever not onely retaine, but acknowledge this Law. From these are deduced by consequence, other precepts which a Tho. 12. q. 51. ar. 7. Con.

2. Things naturall to the species, are not alwaies so to the individuum.

b Fabricius Hist. Cicero, Ann. 30.

c Gen. 2. 18.

3 Therefore some may abandon the world.

d Homil. 36. Oper. imperf. in Matth.

e Th. 12. q. 94. ar. 4.

4 First principles in naturall Law are obligatory, but not deductions from thence, and the lower we descend, the weaker they are.

which are not necessary alwaies; as Redde depositum. For though this seeme to follow of the first, Doe according to reason, yet it is not alwaies just. And as Aquinas saies, The lower you goe towards particulars, the more you depart from the necessitie of being bound to it. So (f) Acacius illustrates it more clearely, [It is naturall, and bindes all alwaies, to know there is a God. From this is deduced by necessary consequence, that God (if he be) must be worshipped; and after this, by likely consequence, that he must be worshipped in this or this manner.] And so every Sect will a little corruptly and adulterately call their discipline Naturall Law, and enjoyn a necessary obedience to it. But (g) though our substance of nature, (which is best understood of the foundations and principles, and first grounds of Naturall Law,) may not be changed, yet functio naturæ, (which is the exercise and application therof,) and deduction from thence may, and must. The like danger is in deducing consequences from this naturall Law, of Selfe-preservation; which doth not so rigorously, and urgently, and illimitedly binde, but that by the Law of Nature it selfe, things may, yea must neglect themselves for others; of which the Pellican is an instance, or an embleme.

f De privilegiis Juris l. 1. c. 8.

g Sylvius Comment. ad leg. reg. præfat. c. 1.

5 Pellicans, and Bees, by S. Ambrose, kill themselves.

And (h) St. Ambrose Philosophying divinely in a contemplation of Bees, after he hath afforded them many other prayses, sayes [That when they finde themselves guilty of having broken any of their h Hexam. l. 5. cap. 1.

Kings

Kings Lawes, Pœnitentî condemnatione ſe mulctant, ut immoriantur aculei ſui vulnere] Which magnanimity and juſtice, he compares there with the Subjects of the Kings of Perſia, who in like caſes are their owne executioners. As this naturall inſtinct in beaſts, ſo rectified reaſon belonging onely to us, inſtructs us often to preferre publique and neceſſary perſons, by expoſing our ſelves to unevitable deſtruction.

No law is ſo primary and ſimple, but it foreimagines a reaſon upon which it was founded: and ſcarce any reaſon is ſo conſtant, but that circumſtances alter it. In which caſe a private man is Emperor of himſelfe; for ſo (i) a devout man interprets thoſe words, [Faciamus hominem ad imaginem noſtrum, id eſt, ſui juris.] And he whoſe conſcience well tempred and diſpaſſion'd, aſſures him that the reaſon of ſelfe-preſervation ceaſes in him, may alſo preſume that the law ceaſes too, and may doe that then which otherwiſe were againſt that law.

6 The reaſon of almoſt every Law is mutable.

i B. Dorotheus Doctrinâ 12.

And therefore if it be true that [it (k) belongs to the Biſhop of Rome, to declare, interpret, limit, diſtinguiſh the law of God,] as their Doctors teach, which is, to declare when the reaſon of the Law ceaſes: it may be as true which this Author, and the (l) Canons affirme, that he may diſpenſe with that Law: for hee doth no more, then any man might doe of himſelfe, if he could judge as infallibly. Let it be true that no man may at any time doe any thing againſt the law of nature, yet, (m) [As k Windeck. Canonum & legum conſenſ. & diſſenſ. ca. 12.

7 He that can declare when the reaſon ceaſes, may diſpence with the Law.

l 25. q. 1. ſunt quidam.

m Tho. 22. q. 88. ar. 10. 8. How dispensations worke.

(m) [As a dispensation workes not thus, that I may by it disobey a law, but that that law becomes to me no law, in that case wher the reason ceases;] So may any man be the Bishop & Magistrate to himselfe, and dispense with his conscience, where it can appeare that the reason which is the soule and forme of the law, is ceased. Because, n Tho. 22. q. 89. ar. 9.

(n) as in Oathes and Vowes, so in the Law, the necessitie of dispensations proceedes from this, that a thing which universally considered in it selfe is profitable and honest, by reason of some particular event, becomes either dishonest or hurtfull; neither of which, can fall within the reach, or under the Commandement of any law; and in these exempt and priviledged cases, o Acacius de privilegijs l. 1. ca. 3.

(o) [the priviledge is not contra jus universale, but contra universalitem juris] It doth onely succor a person, not wound, nor infirme a law. No more, then I take from the vertue of light, or dignitie of the Sunne, if to escape the scortching thereof, I allow my selfe the reliefe of a shadow.

9. As nothing can annull the prerogative of Princes or Popes, though their own act seeme to provide against it; so no law doth so destroy mans liberty, but that he returnes to it, when the reason of the law ceases.

And, as neither the watchfulnesse of Parliaments, nor the descents and indulgences of Princes, which have consented to lawes derogatory to themselves, have beene able to prejudice the Princes non obstantes, because prerogative is incomprehensible, and over flowes and transcends all law. And as those Canons which boldly (and as some School-men say) blasphemously say, Non licebit Papæ, diminish not his fulnesse of power, nor impeach his motus propriores, (as they call them) them) nor his non obstante jure divino, b cause they are understood ever to whisper some just reservation, sine justa causa, or rebus sic stantibus, so, what law soever is cast upon the conscience or liberty of man, of which the reason is mutable, is naturally condition'd with this, that it binds so long as the reason lives.

Besides, Selfe-preservation, which wee confesse to be the foundation of generall naturall Law, is no other thing then a naturall affection and appetition of good, whether true or seeming. For certainly the desire of Martyrdome, though the body perish, is a Selfe-preservation, because thereby, out of our election our best part is advanc'd. For heaven which we gaine so, is certainly good; Life, but probably and possibly. For here it holds well which (p) Athenagoras sayes, [Earthly things and Heavenly differ so, as Veri-simile, & Verum;] And this is the best description of felicitie that I have found, That [(q) it is reditus uniuscujusque rei ad suum principium.] Now since this law of Selfe-preservation is accomplish'd in attaining that which conduces to our ends, and is good to us, (for (r) liberty, which is a faculty of doing that which I would, is as much of the law of nature as preservation is; yet if for reasons seeming good to me, (as to preserve my life when I am justly taken prisoner, I will become a slave; I may doe it without violating the law of nature.) If I propose to my selfe in this SELF-HOMICIDE a greater good, though I mistake it, I perceive not

10. Selfe-preservation being but an appetition of that which is good to us, is not violated by this act.

p De resurrect.

q Heptapl. Io. Pici. l. 7. proem.

r Sylvius Com. ad leg. reg. præfat. l. 1.

11. Liberty, which is naturally to be preserved, may be departed with.

wherein I transgresse the generall law of nature, which is an affection of good, true, or seeming: and if that which I affect by death, bee truely a greater good, wherein is the other stricter law of nature, which is rectified reason, violated?

SECT. III.

1. That cannot be against Law of Nature, which men have ever affected; if it be also, (as this is) against sensitive Nature, and so want the allurements of other sins.

Another reason which prevailes much with me, and delivers it from being against the Law of nature, is this, that in all ages, in all places, upon all occasions, men of all conditions, have affected it, and inclin'd to doe it. And as (a) Cardan sayes it, [Mettall is planta sepulta, and that a Mole is Animal sepultum.] So man, as though he were Angelus sepultus, labours to be discharged of his earthly Sepulchre, his body. And though this may be said of all other sinnes, that men are propense to them, and yet for all that frequency, they are against nature, that is rectifyed reason, yet if this sinne were against particular Law of nature, (as they must hold, which aggravate it by that circumstance,) and that so it wrought to the destruction of our species, any otherwise then intemperate lust, or surfet, or incurring penall Lawes, and such like doe, it could not be so generall; since being contrary to our sensitive nature, it hath not the advantage of pleasure and delight, to allure us withall, which other sinnes have.

a De Subtil. lib. 5.

And when I frame to my selfe a Martyrologe of of all which have perished by their own meanes for Religion, Countrey, Fame, Love, Ease, Feare, Shame; I blush to see how naked of followers all vertues are in respect of this fortitude; and that all Histories afford not so many examples, either of cunning and subtile devises, or of forcible and violent actions for the safeguard of life, as for destroying.

2. There are not so many examples of all other vertues, as of this one degree of Fortitude.

Petronius Arbiter who served Nero, a man of pleasure, in the office of Master of his pleasures, upon the first frowne went home, and cut his Veines. So present and immediate a step was it to him, from full pleasure to such a death.

Petr. Arbiter.

How subtilly and curiously Attilius Regulus destroyed himselfe? Wo being of such integritie, that he would never have lyed to save his life, lyed to lose it; falsely pleading, that the Carthaginians had given him poyson, and that within few dayes he should dye, though he stayed at Rome.

Attil. Regulus.

Yet Codrus forcing of his death, exceeded this, because in that base disguise he was likely to perish without fame.

Codrus.

Herennius the Sicilian, could endure to beat out his own braines against a post; and as though he had owed thanks to that braine which had given him this devise of killing himselfe, would not leave beating, till he could see and salute it.

Herennius.

Comas who had been a Captaine of theeves, when he came to the torture of examination, scorning all forraigne and accessorie helps to dye, made his owne breath, the instrument of his death, by stopping and reccluding it.

Comas.

Annibal. Annibal, because if hee should be overtaken with extreame necessitie, he would be beholden to none for life nor death, dyed with poyson which he alwaies carryed in a ring.

Demosthenes. As Demosthenes did with poyson carryed in a penne.

Aristarchus. Aristarchus when he saw that 72 yeares, nor the corrupt and malignant disease of being a severe Critique, could weare him out, sterved himselfe then.

Homer. Homer which had written a thousand things, which no man else understood, is said to have hanged himselfe, because he understood not the Fishermens riddle.

Othryades. Othryades who onely survived of 300 Champions, appointed to end a quarrell between the Lacedemonians and Athenians, when now the lives of all the 300 were in him, as though it had been a new victory to kill them over again, kill'd himselfe.

Democles. Democles, whom a Greeke Tyrant would have forced, to show that he could suffer any other heat, scalded himselfe to death.

Portia. Lucatium. Portia, Cato's daughter, and Catulus Lucatius sought new conclusions, and as Quintilian calls them, [Nova Sacramenta pereundi,] and dyed by swallowing burning coales.

Declam. 17.

Terence. Poore Terence because he lost his 108 translated Comedies, drown'd himselfe.

And

And the Poet Labienus, becauſe his Satyricall Bookes were burned by Edict, burnt himſelfe too. Labienus.

And Zeno, before whom ſcarce any is preferr'd, becauſe he ſtumbled, and hurt his finger againſt the ground, interpreted that as a Summons from the earth, and hang'd himſelfe, being then almoſt 100 yeares old. For which act, Diogenes Laertius proclaimes him to have been [Mira felicitate vir, qui incolumis, integer, ſine Morbo exceſſit.] Zeno.

To cure himſelfe of a quartane, Portius Latro killed himſelfe. Por. Latro.

And Feſtus, Domicians Minion, onely to hide the deformity of a Ringworme in his face. Feſtus.

Hippionax the Poet rimed Bubalus the Painter to death with his Iambiques. Hippionax.

Macer bore well enough his being called into queſtion for great faults, but hanged himſelfe when hee heard that Cicero would plead againſt him, though the Roman condemnations at that time inflicted not ſo deep puniſhments. Macer.

And ſo Caſſius Licinius to eſcape Cicero's judgement, by choaking himſelfe with a napkin, had (as Tacitus callsit) precium feſtinandi. You can ſcarce immagine any perſon ſo happy, or miſerable, ſo repos'd or ſo vaine, or any occaſion either of true loſſe, or of ſhamefaſtneſſe, or frowardneſſe, but that there is ſome example of it. Licinius. Annal. lib. 5.

Yet no man, to me ſeemes to have made harder ſhift to dy, then Charondas, who firſt having Charondas.

made a new law, that it ſhould be death to enter the Counſell Chamber armed, not onely offended that Law, but puniſhed it preſently by falling upon his ſword.

3. Of the Romane Gladiators in great perſons, and great numbers

But the generall houre of ſuch death is abundantly expreſſed, in thoſe ſwarmes of the Roman Gladiatory Champions, which, as (b) Lipſius collects, in ſome one month coſt Europe 30000 men, and to which exerciſe and profuſion of life, till expreſſe Lawes forbade it, (c) not onely men of great birth, and place in the State, but alſo women coveted to be admitted.

b L. 1. cap. 12. de Gladiator.

c Idem. l. 2. cap. 3.

By Eleazars Oration recorded in (d) Joſephus, we may ſee how ſmall perſwaſions moved men to this. [Hee onely told them, that the Philoſophers among the Indians did ſo. And that we and our children were borne to dy, but neither borne to ſerve.] d De bell. Judai. l. 7. c. 28.

4 Small perſwaſions drew men to it.

And we may well collect, that in Cæſars time, in France, for one who dyed naturally, there dyed many by this devout violence. For (e) hee ſayes there were ſome, whom he calls Devotos, and Clientes, ((f) the latter Lawes call them Soldurios) which enjoying many benefits, and commodities, from men of higher ranke, alwaies when the Lord dyed, celebrated his Funerall with their owne. And Cæſar adds, that in the memorie of man, no one was fouud that ever refuſed it.

5 By the Soldurii in France it may be gathered, that more dyed ſo, then naturally.

e Lib. 3. com. Bell. Gall.

f Tholoſa. Synt. lib. 14. cap. 10. N. 14.

Which devotion I have read ſome where continues tinues yet in all the wives in the Kingdome of Bengala in the Indies.

And there not onely such persons, as doe it in testimony of an entire dependency, and of a gratitude, but the (g) Samanæi, (which did not inherite Religion, and Priesthood, and wisedome, as Levites did amongst the Jewes, and the Gymnosophists amongst them, but were admitted by election, upon notice taken of their sanctity) are sayd to have studied wayes how to dye, and especially then when they were in best state of health. And yet (h) these Priests whose care was to dye thus, did ever summe up, and abridge all their precepts into this one, Let a pious death determine a good life. Such an estimation had they of this manner of dying. (i) How pathetically Latinus Pacatus expresses the sweetnesse of dying when we will; [Others, sayth he, after the conquest, making a braver bargaine with Destiny, prevented uncertaine death by certaine, and the slaves scaped whipping by strangling. For who ever fear'd, after there was no hope? Or who would therefore forbeare to kill himselfe, that another might? Is anothers hand easier then thine own? Or a private death fouler then a publique? Or is it more paine to fall upon thy sword, and to oppresse the wound with thy body, and so receive death at once, then to divide the torment, bend the knee, stretch out the necke, perchance to more then one blow?] And then wondring why Maximus, who had before murdered Gratian, and was now suppressed by Theodosius, had not enjoyed the common benefit of killing himselfe,

6. Wives in Bengala doe so yet.
7. The Samanæi which were Priests in the Indies used to doe it.
g Porphyr. de Abstin. antiq.

h Hermius de philosoph. Barbar. l. 2. ca. 2.

i Panegyr. Theodosio. 8. Lat. Pacat. expresseth this death pathetically.

himselfe, he turnes upon Gratian, and sayes, [Thou Reverend Gratian, hast chased thine Executioner, and would'st not allow him leasure for so honest a death, least he should staine the sacred Imperiall robe with so impious blood, or that a Tyrants hand should performe thy revenge, or thou bee beholden to him for his owne death.] And with like passion speakes another Panegyrique to Constantine, who after a victorie, tooke their swords from the conquered, Ne quis incumberet dolori. By which language one may see, how naturall it was to those times, to affect such dispatch.

k Natal. Metel. præfat. in hist. Osorij.

9. How the Spaniards corrected this naturall desire in the Indians.

And in our age, (k) when the Spaniards extended that Law, which was made onely against the Canibals, that they who would not accept Christian Religion, should incurre bondage; the Indians in infinite numbers escaped this by killing themselves; and never ceased, till the Spaniards by some counterfeitings made them thinke, that they also would kill themselves, and follow them with the same severity into the next life.

And thus much seeming to me sufficient, to defeate that argument which is drawen from Selfe-preservation, and to prove that it is not so of particular law of Nature, but that it is often transgressed naturally, wee will here end this second Distinction.

Distinct.

Distinction III.

SECT. I.

AFter this when men by civilitie and mutuall use one of another, became more thrifty of themselves, and sparing of their lives, this solemnity of killing themselves at funeralls wore out and vanish'd; yet leysurely, and by unsensible dimunitions (a) [For first in shew of it, the men wounded themselves, and the women scratch'd and defaced their cheekes, and sacrific'd so by that aspersion of blood. After that, by their friends graves they made graves for themselves, and entred into them alive, (as Nunnes doe when they renounce the world.) And after in shew of this shew, they onely tooke some of the earth, and wore it upon their heads: and so for the publique benefit were content to forfeit their custome of dying]

And after Christianitie, which besides the many advantages above all other Phylosophies, that it hath made us clearely to understand the state of the next life: which Moses and his followers (though they understood it) disguis'd ever under earthly rewards, and punishments; either because humane nature after the first fall, till the restitution and dignification thereof by Christ, was generally incapable of such mysteries, or, because it was reserved to our blessed Saviour to interpret and comment upon his owne Law, and that great a Sylvius Com. ad leg. reg. c. 24.

1 After civility and christianity quenched this naturall desire, in the place thereof, there succeeded a thirst of Martyrdome.

2 How leisurely the custome of killing at funerals wore out.

3 Moses delivered, and the philosophers saw the state of the next life, but unperfectly.

great ſucceſſive Trinity of humane wiſedome, Socrates, Plato, and Ariſtotle, ſaw but glimmeringly and variouſly; as alſo for matters of this life, the moſt Stoick and ſevere Sect that ever caſt bridle upon mankind, I ſay, after Chriſtianity had quench'd thoſe reſpects of fame, eaſe, ſhame, and ſuch, how quickly naturally man ſnatch'd and embraced a new way of profuſing his life by Martyrdome?

SECT. II.

1 That this was for the moſt part infinuated into men by Naturall reaſons, and much upon humane reſpects.

For whil'ſt the famous acts, or famous ſuffrings of the Jewes, for defence even of Ceremonies, (many thouſands of them being ſlaine, onely becauſe they would not defend themſelves upon the Saboth;) And whil'ſt the cuſtome of that Nation ever embrued in ſacrifices of blood, and all, moſt of all other Nations devout and earneſt even in the immolation of men. And whil'ſt the example of our bleſſed Saviour, who choſe that way for our Redemption to ſacrifice his life, and profuſe his blood, was now freſh in them, and govern'd all their affections, it was not hard for their Doctors even by naturall reaſons, and by examples to invite, or to cheriſh their propenſneſſe to Martyrdome.

Strmat. l. 4.

2 So proceeded Clemens.

Clement therefore when he handles this point, ſcarce preſents to them any other argument then naturall men were capable of, and ſuch food, and ſuch fuell, as would ſerve the taſt and fervour vour of such an one as were not curious above Nature. As, that Death was not naturally evill: That Martyrdome was the beginning of another life. That the Heathen endured greater paines for lesse reward. That a Barbarous people immolated every yeare a principall Philosoper to Xamolxis an Idol; and they upon whom the lot fell not, mourn'd for that. And with most earnestnesse that Martyrdome is in our owne power: which be arguments better proportioned to Nature, then to Divinity; and therefore Clement presumed them men inclined, or inclinable by nature to this affection.

Tertullians Reasons are somewhat more sublime; yet rather fine, and delightfull, then solid and weighty; As, That God knowing man would sin after Baptisme, provided him, Secunda solatia, lavacrum Sanguinis: That the death of Saints, which is said to be precious in Gods sight, cannot bee understood of the naturall death common to all: And that from the beginning in Abel righteousnesse was afflicted. And these reasons were not such as would have entred any, in whom a naturall inclination had not set open the gates before.

L. cont. Gnostic. 3. So did Tertullian.

Cyprian also takes the same way; and insists upon application of Prophecies of these two sorts; That they should bee despised in this world, and that they should be rewarded in the next.

Lib. de exhort. Martyrii ad fortunatum. So did Cyprian.

To these were added externall Honours,

97624

(a) Annuall celebrating their Memories, and entitling their deaths, Natalitia; And (b) that early instituting of the office of Notaries to regulate their passions, even in Clemens time; And (c) the proposing their Salita capita to bee worshipped; which word (though Eunapius speake it prophanely) was not undeserved by the generall misuse of such devotion.

And (d) after the Monopoly of appropriating Martyrdome, and establishing the benefit thereof upon them onely which held the integritie of faith, and were in the unity of the Church; of which persuasion Augustine, and Hierom, and most of the Ancients are cited to be; and then by continuall increasing the dignity and merit of it, as that (e) ex opere operato, it purged actuall sinne, as Baptisme did originall; And (f) that without Charitie, and in Schisme, though it merited not salvation, yet it diminished the intensnesse of Damnation.

And by these they incited mans nature to it, which also might be a little corruptly warmed towards it, by seeing them ever punisht who afflicted them, for so (g) Tertullian saies, that [no City escaped punishment, which had shed Christian bloud.]

After this, they descended to admit more into their fellowship, and communicate and extend these priviledges: for by such indulgence are (h) Herods Infants Martyrs: So is John Baptist, though he dyed not for a matter of Christian a Tertul. de Corona Milit.

4 Externall Honours to Martyrs.
b Damasc. & Platin.
c Hadr. Junius in Eunapii vita
5 Monopolie of Martyrdom d Fevardentius l. 8. c. 13. Baron. Martyr. cap. 10.
e Carbo. Cas. Cons. To. 2. pa. 2. c. 6.
f De pœniten. Dist. 1. Si qui autē. Ex Aug. de pœnitent.
6 Gods punishments upon their persecutors, encouraged men to Martyrdome.
g Ad Scapulam.
7. Extending priviledges of Martyrs to many.
h Aug. Epist. ad Hieron. 28. De Nat. & Orig. Anim.

ſtian faith: So (i) is he which ſuffers for any vertue, and he which dyes in his mothers womb, if ſhe be a Martyr. (k) And ſo is he which being for Chriſtian profeſſion wounded deadly, recoveis: and hee which being not deadly wounded, dyes after of ſickneſſe contracted by his owne negligence, if that negligence amounted not to mortall ſinne.

i Aphoris: Eman. Sa. verbo Martyr.
k Tho. 22 q. 124. ar. 4. ad quart.

So not onely the ſickly and infirme ſucceeding Ages, but even the pureſt times did cherriſh in men this deſire of death, even by contrary reaſons; both which notwithſtanding by change of circumſtances, had apparance of good. For as fire is made more intenſe, ſometimes by ſprinkling water, ſometimes by adding fuell. So when their teachers found any cooleneſſe or remiſſeneſſe in them, and an inclination to flight, or compoſition with the State, then (l) Cyprian noted ſuch with the ignominy of Libellatici, becauſe they had taken an acquittance of the State, and ſayes of them [Culpa minor ſacrificatorum, ſed non innocens conſcientia.]

8. Contrary reaſons cherriſhed this deſire in them.

9 Cyprian Libellatici. Compounders with the State.

l Sermo de laſſis.

And then (m) Tertullian equally infames flying away, and ſuch marchandizing, when hee ſayes, [Perſecution muſt not be redeemed; for running away is a buying of your peace for nothing, and a buying of your peace for money is a running away.]

m De fuga. propoſitio, 2.
10 Tertullian condemnes flying in perſecution.

And then we ſhall finde that even againſt the nature of the word Martyre, it became the common opinion, that death was requiſite and neceſſarie to make one a Martyr.

11 Death became to bee held neceſſary to make one a Martyr.

n Hist. l. 5. c. 2.

So in (n) Eusebius, the Christians though afflicted, modestly refuse the name of Martyrs, and professe that they have not deserved it, except they may be kill'd.

12. In times when they exceeded in discreet exposing themselves, they taught that Martyres might be without dying.

Contrary wise in other times when the disease of head-long dying at once, seemed both to weare out their numbers, and to lay some scandall upon the cause, which wrought such a desire in men, which understood not why they did it, but uninstructed, uncatechized, yea unbaptized, (but that the charity of the Supervivers imputed to them Baptisma fluminis, as they hope, or at least, Sanguinis, for that they saw) did onely, as they saw others doe; Then I say (as (o) a Learned Writer of our time sayes, [That the Church abstaines from easie Canonizing, Ne vilesceret Sanctitas] (which is not here Holinesse, but Saintship) least the dignity of Martyrdome should be aviled by such promiscuous admittance to it, they were often contented to allow them the comfort of Martydome without dying; which was but a returning to the naturall sense of the word.

o Azor. Mor. Inst. p. 2. l. 5. cap. 7.

Ad Polycarp.

So Ignatius stiles himselfe in his Epistles, Martyr. Yea more then the rest he brought down the value thereof, and the deare purchase, for he sayes (p) [That as he which honors a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, shall have a Prophets reward; So hee shall have a Martyrs reward which honors [victum Christi.] And so our most blessed Saviour, proceeding in his mercifull purpose of encreasing his King-

p Ad Smirnen.

Kingdome upon earth, yet permitting the Heathen Princes to continue theirs as yet, the Christian Religion was dilated and oppreſſed; and the profeſſors thereof, ſo dejected and worne with confiſcations and impriſonments, thought that as in the (q) Paſſeover from Egypt every doore was ſprinkled with blood; So Heaven had no doore from this world but by fires, croſſes, and bloody perſecutions: and preſuming Heaven to be at the next ſtep, they would often ſtubbornly or ſtupidly winke, and ſo make that one ſtep.

q Exod. 12.7.

God forbid any ſhould be ſo malignant, ſo to miſ-interpret mee, as though I thought not the blood of Martyrs to be the ſeed of the Church, or diminiſhed the dignity thereof; yet it becomes any ingenuity to confeſſe, that thoſe times were affected with a diſeaſe of this naturall deſire of ſuch a death; and that to ſuch may fruitfully be applyed thoſe words of the good B: Paulinus, (r) [Athleta non vincit ſtatim, quia eruitur: nec ideo tranſnatant, quia ſe ſpoliant.] Alas! we may fall & drown at the laſt ſtroke; for, to ſayle to heaven it is not enough to caſt away the burdenous ſuperfluities which we have long carried about us, but we muſt alſo take in a good frayte. It is not lightneſſe, but an even-repoſed ſtedfaſtneſſe, which carries us thither.

r Nouem. ep. 2.

But (ſ) Cyprian was forced to finde out an anſwer to this lamentation, which he then found to be common to men on their death beds, [Wee mourne becauſe with all our ſtrength we haa vowed our ſelves ſ De Contempt. mortis. 13 Cyprian. profeſſ. Men who offered their lives before they were called.

selves to Martyrdome, of which we are thus deprived, by being prevented by naturall death] And (t) for them who before they were called upon, offered themselves to Martyrdome, he is faine to provide the glorious and satisfactory name of Professors.

(t) Baroni. Mar. 2. Ian. H.

14 Enforcers of their owne Martyrdome.

From such an inordinate desire, too obedient to nature, proceeded the fury of some Christians (u) who when sentence was pronounced against others, standing by, cryed out, Wee also are Christians.

(u) Euseb. Hist. l. 8. c. 9.

15 Examples of inordinate affecting of Martyrdome. Germanus.

And that inexcusable forwardnesse of Germanus, (x) who drew the beast to him, and enforced it to teare his body; And why did he this? Eusebius delivers his reason; That he might bee the sooner delivered out of this wicked and sinfull life. Which (y) acts Eusebius glorifies with this prayse, [That they did them mente digna Philosophis] So that it seemes wisest men provoked this by their examples; As (z) at the burning of the temple at Hierusalem, Meirus and Iosephus, though they had way to the Romans, cast themselves into the fire. How passionately (a) Ignatius solicites the Roman Christians not to interrupt his death. [I feare (saith he) your charity will hurt me, and put me to beginne my course again, except you endeavour that it may be sacrificed now. I professe to all Churches, quod voluntarius morior] And after, Blandiciis demulcete feras; entice and corrupt the Beasts to devoure me, and to be my sepulchre, truer best is, Let me enjoy those beasts, whom I wish much more cruell then they are; and if they

(x) Hist. l. 4. c. 14.

(y) Hist. l. 4. c. 10.

(z) Meir. & Iosep. Ioseph. de bel. Ind. l. 7. c. 11.

(a) Ignati. epist. ad Roman.

16 Ignatius solicitation for it.

they will not attempt me, I will provoke and draw them by force] And what was Ignatius reason for this, being a man necessary to those Churches, and having allowable excuses of avoiding it? [quia mihi utile mori est.] such an intemperance urged the woman of Edissa, (b) when the Emperour Valens had forbidden the Christians one temple, to which particular reasons of devotion invited them, to enrage the Officers with this Contumely, when they asked her, why thus squallid, and headlong she dregg'd her sonne through the streets; I do it least when you have slaine all the other Christians, I and my sonne should come to late to partake that benefit. And such a disorderly heate possessed that (c) old wretched man, which passing by after the execution of a whole legion of 6666, by iterated decimation, under Maximianus, although he were answered that they dyed, not onely for resisting the Roman Religion, but the State, for all that, wish't that he might have the happines to be with them, and so extorted a Martyrdome. For that age was growne so hungry and ravenous of it, that many were baptized onely because they would be burnt. and children taught to vexe and provoke Executioners, that they might be thrown into the fire.

Edissena.

b Nicephor. l. 11. c. 21.

c Speculum vinc. To. 4. l. 11. c. 40.

And this assuredness that men in a full persuasion of doing well would naturally runne to this, made (d) the proconsul in Africk proclaime, Is there any more Christians which desire to dy, and d Bod. Dæmon. l. 4. c. 3. ex Tertulli.

17 Lawes forbidding more executions made to despite Christians.

and when a whole multitude by generall voice discovered themselves, he bid them [Goe hang and drown your selves and ease the Magistrate.] And this naturall disposition, (e) afforded Mahomet an argument against the Jews, [if your Religion be so good, why doe you not dy?] for our primitive Church was so enamored of death, and so satisfied with it, that to vex and torture them more, f the Magistrate made lawes to take from them the comfort of dying, and encreased their persecution by ceasing it, for they gloried in their Numbers.

e Alc. 72. Az.

f Ex Tertul. Bodin. supra

18 Glory in the numbers of Martyrs.

And as in other warfares men muster and reckon how many they bring into the field, their confidence of victory was in the multitudes of them which were lost. So they admit into the Catalogue Herods Infants, and the 1100 Virgins. And (g) when 9000 Souldiers under Adrian by apparition of an Angel, are said to have embraced Christian Religion, and when the Emperour sent others to execute them, 1000 of those executioners joyn'd to them and so the whole 10000 were crucified (h). And of an intire legion nasfacred at once we spoke but now. And Baronius (i) speakes of 10000 crucified in Armenia, celebrate upon the 22th. of June: whether divers from the 10000 under Adrian or no, I have not examined. (k) Saint Gregory says, [Let God number our Martyrs, for to us they are more in number then then the sands.] And (l) Baronius saies, That excepting the first of January, (which yet in the Roman g Sæcul. Vin. To. 4. l. 10 c. 88.

h Supra. fo. 66.

i Baron. Mart. 22. June.

k Homil. 27. in Evangel.

l Martyrolog cap. 8

Mar-

Martyrologe records as many, as moſt other daies) there is no day which hath not 500 Martyres; almoſt every one hath 900, or 800.

SECT. III.

And when the Church encreaſed abundantly under all theſe preſſures, (for, As in profane and ſecular wars, the greater the Triumphs of a Conqueror are, the greater alſo are his Armies, becauſe the more and more concur to his ſplendor, and to participate his fortunes; So in this ſpirituall warfare, the greater the triumphant Church was, the greater grew the Militant, aſſiſted both with the Example & Prayers of the other.) And when all theſe treadings downe did but harrow our Saviours field, and prepare and better it for his Harveſt, The bloud of the Martyrs (for though, as I ſay ſtill, very many dyed out of a naturall infirmitie of deſpiſing this life, a great number had their direct marke upon the glory of God, and went to it awake) having, as a (a) Nicephorus ſayes, almoſt ſtrangled the Devill, hee tryed by his two greateſt Inſtruments, (when they are his) the Magiſtrate, and the Learned, to avert them from this inclination.

1. That Heretiques ſeeing the dignity gained by Martyrdome, laboured to avert them from it, but could not correct this naturall inclination.

a Lib. 4. cap. 2.

For, ſuggeſting to the Magiſtrate that their forwardneſſe to dye, grew onely from their faith in the Reſurrection, he (b) procur'd there bodyes to be burnt, and their aſhes ſcattered into Rivers,

2. The Devill labours the Magiſtrates to quench their deſire of dying b Specul. Hiſt. Tom. cap 102. lib. 10.

Rivers, to frustrate and defeat that expectation; And he raised up subtile Heretiques, to infirme and darken the vertue and majestie of Martyrdome.

Basilides heresi. Anno 134. 3. Basilides denyed Christ to have been crucifyed, & that therefore they dyed madly.

Of which the most pestilently cunning Basilides, fore-suspecting that hee should not easily remove that desire of dying, which Nature had bred, and Custome confirmed in them, tryed to remove that which had root onely in their Religion, as being yet of tenderer growth, and more removable then naturall impressions. Therfore he offered not to impugne their exposing themselves to death in all cases, but onely said, (c) that it was madnesse to dye for Christ, since he, by who e example they did it, was not crucified, but Symon who bore the Crosse.

c Alfon. Castr. verb. Martyr. ex Philast.

Another (d) Heretique, called Helchesar, perceiving that it was too hasty to condemne the act of Martyrdome even for Christ, thought onely to slacken their desire to it, by teaching, that in time of Persecution, so wee kept our heart at Anchor safe, we were not bound to testifie our Religion by any outward act, much lesse by dying.

d Prateolus l. 5. ex Niceph. 4. Helchesar that outward profession of Religion was not needfull.

Which Doctrine the Gnostici also taught, but prevailed little, both because the contrary was rooted in Nature, and because they accompanied this doctrine, with many others, foule and odious even to sense; and because they were resisted by Tertullian, a man mighty, both in his generall abilities, and in his particular and profes-

5. That also the Gnostici taught, and why they prevailed not.

sed

ſed earneſtneſſe to magnifie Martyrdome: And againſt theſe he writ his Scorpiacum.

SECT. IIII.

This way giving no advantage to Hereticks, they let looſe the bridle of their owne nature too, and apprehended any occaſion of dying as forwardly as the Orthodoxall Chriſtians. And becauſe the other preſcrib'd againſt them, and were before hand with them in number, to redeeme time and overtake them, they conſtituted new occaſions of Martyrdome.

1. That Hetiques failing herein, tooke naturall ways, of overtaking the Orthodox in Numbers of Martyrs.

(a) Petilian againſt whom St. Aug: writ, taught, that whoſoever kill'd himſelf as a Magiſtrate, to puniſh a ſinne committed before, was a Martyr.

2. Petilian new way of Martyrdom.

a Alf. Caſir. ver. Martyrium

And they who are by Saint Auguſtine, and others, called Circumcelliones, and Circuitores, becauſe (I thinke) as their Maſter, they went about to devoure) would entreate, perſwade, enforce others to kill them, and fruſtrated after all thoſe provocations, would doe it themſelves, and by their ſurvivors bee celebrated for Martyrs. Theſe were of the (b) Donatiſts, of whom Saint Auguſtine ſayes, To kill themſelves out of reſpect of Martyrdome, was Ludus Quotidianus Other Hereticks alſo, whoſe errors were not about Martyrdome, haſtened to it. So the (c) Cataphrygæ. who erreniouſly baptizing the dead, Ordaining Women, Annulling ſecond Marriges, and erring in ſuch points, (d) could ſoone boaſt of their number of Martyrs; perchance

3. Another new way of the Circumcelliones & Circuitores.

b To. 2. Ep. 50.

4. The Cataphrygæ exceed in Number.

c Prateolus.

d Baron. Martyr. C. 10.

chance because Tertullian being then on their part, they found him, as he was whersoever he came, a hot encourager of men to Martyrdome. It is complain'd in (e) Eusebius, that Heretiques seeing their arguments confuted, fled now to their number of Martyrs, in which they pretended to exceed the others. And from their numbers of Martyres, (f) the Euphemitæ called themselves Martyrians. And thereupon (g) Baronius saies, [Amongst the heathen, perchance you may heare, and there find one Empedocles, which will burne himself, but amongst the Donatists, Hominum examina.]

e Hist. l. 5. c. 15

f Baron. Martyrol. ca. 10. Ex Epiph. Hær. 80

g Schultingius, To. 3. ca. 177. 10. Euphemitæ therefore called Martyrians

SECT. V.

1. Hereupon Councels took it into their care to distinguish true Martyrs, from those who dyed for naturall and humane respects.

So that the authoritie gained by their forwardnesse to equall the number of true Martyrs, was so great, and began so farre to perplex the world, that some Councels foreseeing, that if both sides did it equally, it would all be imputed to humane respects, began to take it into their care to provide against it. And thereupon a your Councell exhibites an expresse Canon, That no Christian leaving true Martyrs, should goe to false, Quia alieni à Deo. And (b) another corrects the other Heresie of diminishing the reputation of Martyrs thus, Martyrum dignitatem nemo profanus infamet.

a Conc. Laodic. Can. 33.

b Conc. Carth. 1. C. 2.

SECT.

SECT. VI.

Thus when the true Spirit of God drew many, the ſpirit of Contention many, and other naturall infirmities more, to expoſe themſelves eaſily to death, it may well be thought, that from thence the Authors of theſe later Ages, have ſomewhat remitted the intenſneſſe of Martyrdome, and mingled more allayes, or rather more mortall, and not made it of ſo great value alone, as thoſe earneſt times did: for ſince (a) Saint Thomas ſaid, [That though Martyrdome be a worke of greateſt perfection, yet it is not of it ſelfe, but as it is wrought by charity, and expreſſes that]

Vaſquis (b) reprehends Cordubenſis for ſaying that it is any worſhip of God: for [it is not ſayes he, a Sacrifice nor worke of Religion, but of fortitude, which is but a morall vertue] Therefore it is now (c) taught, [that it is a mortall ſinne to provoke another to inflict Martyrdome.] And (d) a Martyr, (though Martyrdome purge much) is bound to cleanſe himſelfe by every one of the Degrees of penance; for ſaith Carbo, [it is not Sacramentum, but opus privilegiatum.] So they ſeeme tender and loth by addition of religious incitements, to cheriſh or further that deſire of dying, to which by reaſon of our weakneſſe, and this worlds encumbrances, our nature is too propenſe and inclined.

Onely the Ieſuits boaſt of their hunting out of Mar-

1 Therefore later Authors do ſomewhat remit the Dignity of Martyrdome.

a 2.2.q.124. ar. 3.

b De Adoratione l.1.N.42.

c Navar.Man. c.1.Nu.40.

d Carbo. Caſ. Conſ.To.p.2.c. 6.

2 The Ieſuits ſtill profeſſe an enormous love to ſuch death.

Martyrdome in the new worlds, and of their rage till they finde it. (e) He which hath brought them all upon one Scene, ſaies that [Alfonſus Caſtro at his execution in the Molucca, was ſo overjoyed that he forgot his modeſty [Rapimus Martyrium, ſayes he, ſpontanea irruptione,] And [one would think that it were a diſeaſe in us.] [Which we doe, leaſt the reſt of our life ſhould be Meritis ſterile, & gloria vacuum] [we bargaine and contract with our profeſſion, upon that Condition, that we may prodigere animas in hoſtili ferro;] [And we poſſeſſe no more, then ſuch ſmall matters as onely ſerve to cut off our life.] So that, if this deſire of dying be not agreeable to the nature of man, but againſt it, yet it ſeemes that it is not againſt the nature of a Ieſuite. And ſo we end this Diſtinction, which we purpoſed onely for the conſideration of this deſire of Martyrdome, which ſwallowed up all the other inducements, which, before Chriſtianity contracted them, tickled and inflamed mankinde.

e Clarus Bonarſicus Amphitheat. Honor. l. 1. c. 4.

Diſtinction IIII.

SECT. I.

THere remaines onely for the fourth and laſt Diſtinction of this firſt part, our reaſon by which this SELF-HOMICIDE ſeemes to me to eſcape eſcape the breach of any Law of Nature, which is, that both expreſſe literall Lawes, and mute Law, cuſtome, hath authorized it, not onely by ſuffering, and connivency, but by appointing it.

1 Lawes and cuſtomes of well policed eſtates having admitted it, it is not likely to be againſt law of Nature.

And it hath the countenance not onely of many flouriſhing and well policed ſtates, but alſo of Imaginary Common-wealths, which cunning Authors have Idæated, and in which ſuch enormous faults are not like to be admitted. Amongſt the Athenians condemned men were their own executioners by poyſon. And amongſt the Romans often by bloodlettings. And it is recorded of many places, that all the Sexagenarii, were by the lawes of wiſe States, precipitated frō a bridge. Of which, if (a) Pierius his conjecture be true, that this report was occaſioned by a cuſtome in Rome, by which men of that age were not admitted to ſurffage; And becauſe the way to the Senate was per pontem, they which for age were not permitted to come thither, were called Depontani, yet it is more certaine, that (b) amongſt the Ceans unprofitable old men poyſoned themſelves; which they did crown with garlands, as triumphers over humane miſery. And the (c) Ethiopians loved death ſo well, that their greateſt Malefactors being condemned to baniſhment, eſcaped it Ordinarily by killing themſelves. (d) The civill law, where it appoints no puniſhment to the delinquent in this caſe, neither in his eſtate nor memory, puniſhes

2 True and Idæated common-wealths have allowed it.

Athenians.

Romans.

Depontum.

a Hierogliph. l. 17.

Ceans.

b Ælianus. l. 3. cap. 26.

c Diod. Sicul. l. 2. bib. Æthiopians.

d Dig. l. 48. tit. 3. leg. final.

3 Civill law and all others, preſume it, in condemned men.

a keeper, if his prisoner kill himselfe; out of a prejudice, that if meanes may be afforded them, they will all doe so.

And do not we see it to be the custome of all Nations now, to manacle and disarme condemned men, out of a sore assurance that else they would escape death by death? (e) Sir Thomas Moore a man of the most tender and delicate conscience, that the world saw since Saint Augustine) not likely to write any thing in jest mischieuously interpretable, sayes, That in Vtopia, the Priests and Magistrates did use to exhort men afflicted with incurable diseases, to kill themselves, and that they were obeyed as the interpreters of Gods will; But that they who killed themselves without giving an account of their reasons to them, were cast out unburied. And (f) Plato who is usually cited against this opinion, disputes in it, in no severer fashion, nor more peremptory then thus, [What shall we say of him, which kills his neerest and most deare friend? which deprives himselfe of life, and of the purpose of destiny? And not urged by any Sentence, or Heavy Misfortune, nor extreame shame, but out of a cowardlinesse and weakenesse of a fearfull minde, doth unjustly kill himselfe? What Purgatory, and what burriall by law belongs to him, God himselfe knowes. But let his friends inquire of the Interpreters of the law, and doe as they shall direct] You see nothing is delivered by him against it, but modestly, limitedly, and perplexedly.

c Vtop. l. 2. c. de servis.
4 In Vtopia authorised.
5 And by Plato in certaine cases.
f De leg. 9.

And

And this is all which I will ſay of the firſt member of that definition of ſinne which I undertooke, which is, tranſgreſſing of the Law of Nature. Wherein I make account that I have ſufficiently delivered and reſcued this Selfe-homicide, from any ſuch violating of the Law, as may aggravate the fact, or make it hainous.

6 Concluſion of the firſt part.

Second Part.

Diſtinction I.

Of the Law of Reaſon.

SECT. I.

THat part of the Definition of ſin, which wee received for the ſecond place, is, That it be againſt the Law of Reaſon; where, if we ſhould accept Reaſon for Recta Ratio, (eſpecially primarily, and originally,) it would be the ſame as Law of Nature. Therefore I rather chooſe to admit ſuch an acceptation thereof, as may bring moſt doubts into diſputation, and ſo into cleareneſſe.

1. That the law of reaſon, is, concluſions drawne from primary reaſon by diſcourſe.

Reaſon therefore in this place ſhall ſignifie concluſions drawne and deduced from the primary Reaſon, by our diſcourſe and ratiocination: And ſo ſinne againſt reaſon, is ſinne againſt ſuch arguments and concluſions, as may by good conſequence be derived from primary and originall Reaſon, which is light of nature.

2. How much ſtrength, Reaſons deduced have.

This primary reaſon therefore, againſt which none can plead lycenſe, law, cuſtome, or pardon, hath in us a ſoveraigne, and masculine force; and by it, through our Diſcourſe, which doth the motherly office of ſhaping them, and bringing them forth and up, it produces concluſions and reſolutions.

SECT. II.

1. Of this ſort of Reaſons, generall lawes have the greateſt authority.

And as in earthly Kingdoms, the Kings children, and theirs, and their race, as farre as we may reaſonably preſume any tincture of blood, have many priviledges and reſpects due to them, which yet were forfeited if there appeared any baſtardy or interruption of lawfull deſcent from that roote; And though theſe reſpects and obſequiouſneſſe, belong to them as they are propagated from that roote, and as ſome ſparks of that Soveraignty glimmer in them, yet their Servants and Officers take them where they finde them, and conſider them onely as Dukes, or Lords, and poſſeſſors of patrimoniall eſtates, but every mans heart and allegeance is directed and and faſtned upon the Prince, and perchance a ſtep or two lower, with a preſent and immediate relation to the father, and what they have from him. So whē from thoſe true propoſitions, which are the eldeſt children and iſſue of our light of Nature, and of our diſcourſe, concluſions are produced, thoſe concluſions alſo have now the Nature of propoſitions, and beget more; and to all theſe there belongs an aſſent and ſubmiſſion on our parts, if none by the way have beene corrupted and baſtarded by fallacy. And though (as in the other caſe) men of a weake diſpoſition, or lazey, or flattering, looke no farther into any of theſe propoſitions, then from whoſe mouth it proceeds, or what authority it hath now, not from whence it was produced, yet upon the heire apparent, which is, every neceſſary conſequence from naturall light, every mans reſolution is determin'd, and arreſted by it, and ſubmitted to it. And though humane lawes, by which Kingdomes are policed, be not ſo very neare to this Crown of certaine Truth, and firſt light, (for if they were neceſſary conſequences from that law of nature, they could not be contrary in divers places and times, as we ſee lawes to be) yet I doe juſtly eſteeme them neerer, and to have more of that bloud royall in them, then the reſolutions of particular men, or of Schooles.

Both becauſe it is of the eſſence of all humane law, that it agrees with nature, (I meane for the obligation in interiori foro, without which a law hath no more ſtrength, then an uſurper, whom they which obey, watch an oportunity to diſpoſſeſſe.)

2. For that is of there eſſence that they agree with law of Nature.

3. And there is better teſtimony of their producing, then of private mens opinions

And becauſe Aſſemblies of Pa liaments, and Councels, and Courts, are to be preſumed more diligent for the delivery and obſtetrication of thoſe children of naturall law, and better witneſſe that no falſe nor ſuppoſititious iſſue be adm tted, then any one man can be. For (a) the law is therefore well call'd Communis Reip. ſponſio, becauſe that word ſignifies as well, that, to which they have all betroth'd themſelves, as, the ſecuritie and ſtipulation which the State gives for every mans direction and aſſurance in all his civill actions. Since therefore we have in the firſt part throughly examined, whether this Selfe homicide be alwayes of neceſſitie againſt the law of nature, it deſerves the firſt conſideration in this ſecond part, to inquire how farre humane Lawes have determin'd againſt it, before wee deſcend to the arguments of particular Authors, of whatſoever reverence or authoritie.

a Dig. l. 1. tit. 3 le. 1. lex eſt.

SECT. III.

1. Of lawes, the Imperiall' law ought firſt to be conſidered.

And becauſe in this diſquiſition, that law hath moſt force and value, which is moſt generall, and there is no law ſo generall, that it deſerves the name of Jus gentium; or if there be, (a) it will bee the ſame, (as wee ſaid before) as Recta Ratio, and ſo not differ from the law of Nature.

a Dig. l. 1, T. 1. le. 9. omnes.

To

To my understanding, the Civill or Imperiall law, having had once the largest extent, and being not abandon'd now, in the reason, and essence, and nature thereof, but onely least the accepting of it should testifie some dependencie upon the Empire, we owe the first place in this consideration to that Law.

2 The reason of that law is not abolished, but our dependency upon it.

This therefore which we call the Civill Law, (for, though properly the Municipall Law of every Nation be her Civill Law, yet Romes Emperors esteeming the whole world to be one City, as her Bishops doe esteeme it one Diocesse, the Romane Law hath wonne the name of Civill Law, being a (b) decoction and composition of all the Regall Lawes, Decrees of the Senate, Plebescites, Responsa Prudentum, and Edicts of Emperors, from 1400. yeares before Justinian, to so long time after, as the Easterne Emperors made them authentique; being of such largenesse, as (c) Iustinians part thereof consists of 150000. of those distinctions which he calls verses, and is the summe and marrow of many millions, extracted from 2000. Volumes

3 Why this is called civill Law.

4 Of the vastnes of the books from whence it is concocted, and and of the extent thereof.

b Iustinian. ep. ad Trebonian.

c Iustinian epi. ad DD. de Iur. docend. arte.

This Law which is so abundant, that (d) almost all the points controverted betweene the Romane and the reformed Churches, may be decided and appointed by it. This Law, I say, which both by penalties, and Anathemaes hath wrought upon bodies, fortunes, and consciences, hath pronounced nothing against this Selfe-homicide, which we have now in disputation.

d Wind. Theolog. Iur.

5 Nothing in this law against our case.

It

6. Of the law of Adrian.

It is true that of Adrian the Emperor, who was about 120. yeares after Christ, we finde one Rescript, in the body of the Law, [(d) That if a Souldier do attempt to kill himselfe, and not effect it, except he offred it upon impatience of griefe, or sickn sse, or sorrow, or some other cause, capite plectatur.] Which Rescript is repeated againe in another (e) Title, and there (though the other generall clause, or some other cause, might seeme to have reach'd farre inough,) are added especially for excusing causes, [wearinesse of life, madnesse, or shame.] You see with what moderate gradations this Law proceeded, which being (as it seemes) to contend and wrestle with a thing customary, and naturally affected, extends not at all to punish it when it is done, as in many other crimes the Lawes doe, by confiscation, and by condemning the memory of the delinquent, and ignobling his race.

d Dig. lib. 48. tit. 19. le. 38. Si quis aliquid. § Qui miles.

e Dig. lib. 49. tit. 16. le. 6. Omne delictum.

Nor embraces it all manners of doing it; (yea scarce any, considering how benignly, and favorably penall Lawes are to be interpreted:) Nor overtakes it all men, but onely such as being of present use, as well much disadvantage might grow to the Army, if sodainly any numbers of them should be suffered to turne upon this naturall and easie way of delivering themselves from painfull danger, as much dammage to the State, if those men matriculated for Souldiers, to whom there belong'd by the lawes, as many priviledges and immunities under the Romane Emperors, as ever ver did to the Clergy under their Romane Biſhops, after they had thus maym'd themſelves, and defrauded the State of their ſervice, ſhould by this inhærent character of Souldierſhip, enjoy all thoſe advantages, which thoſe Lawes afforded them.

There is (h) one law more in the body of the ivill Law, which ſeemes to reach farther, becauſe it binds not it ſelfe to any one condition of men; which is, [That if a man already accuſ'd, or taken in the manner, for any ſuch crime, upon which his goods ſhould be forfeited upon conviction, kill himſelfe before judgement, his goods ſhall be forfeit;] elſe not. For the Law addes her opinion of the fact. [Non facti celeritas eſt obnoxia, ſed conſcientia metus] And proceeds, [Qui cauſam mortis habet, habeat ſucceſſorem.] So that that Law preſumes there are juſt cauſes to worke ſuch an effect. And upon the conſideration of this Civill Law, I determin'd to beſtow this firſt Diſtinction.

h Dig. l. 48. tit. 21. le. 3. Qui rei.

7 Of the other law for guilty men.

Diſtinction II.

SECT. I.

THat which they call the Canon Law is of larger extent then this; for it reaches to bind the Princes themſelves, at leaſt by their acceptation and ſubmiſſion to it.

1 Of the Canon Law.

2 The largnes of the ſubject, and object thereof.

And as the ſubject of it, is greater, being people and Prince; ſo is the object, being the next and eternall life. Yea it is ſo vaſt and undetermin'd, as we know not in what books to ſeeke the limits thereof, nor by what rules to ſet the land-marks of her jurisdiction.

3 Of Codex Canonum, or the body of the laws in uſe in the primitive Church. a Dist. 10. certum eſt.

For, (for the booke,) it is evident that the Primitive Church had Codicem Canonum, which was inſerted into the body of the Romane Law, and had no other ſubſiſtence, but as it was incorporated there. Thereupon (a) Gelatius writes to Theodorus the Goth, King of Italy, to intreat him, that as by his authoritie the Romane Law was obſerved in Civill matters, ſo it might be ſtill in Eccleſiaſtique. And after the expulſion of the Goths, (b) Leo 4. intreated and obtained the ſame from Lotharius. From this Codex Canonum, the Emperors determined and decreed in many Eccleſiaſtique cauſes; From this Codex the Councels after were governed in making their Canons: as wee may ſee particular Canons of this Booke cited, the booke being often call'd for in the Councels, and being then ordinarily named, The body of the Canon Law. This body conſiſted of the Canons of nine Councels authorized by the Emperors.

b Dist. 10. veſtrum.

4 Of the Additions to this Codex.

But for thoſe immenſe additions growne to it ſince that time, of Bulls, and Decretall Letters of Popes, Decrees of ſuſpitious and partiall and Schiſmatick Councels, (for nothing is more properly Schiſme, and Solutio continui, than a rent betweene the Civill and Eccleſiaſtique State, which occa-occasion'd many of the later Councels,) the rags of Fathers decerpted and decocted by Gratian, and the glosses of these made also as authentique as the Text. I perceive not what title they have to bee of the body of the Canon Law, except where the Princes have incorporated and denizen'd them.

But least to quarrell with their authority now, might seeme in us a subter-fuge and shift to decline them, as though they were heavy against us, in this point which we have now in hand; wee will accept them as they are obtruded, and dissemble nothing, which in them seemes to resist this opinion, though in common entendment this law is likely to be severe against it, because the civill lawes content themselves ever with any excuse or colour in favour of the Delinquents, because when a fault is proved it punishes severely, but (c) the Canon Lawes which punish onely medicinally, and for the soules health, are apt to presume or beleeve a guiltinesse, upon light evidence, because those punishments ever worke good effects, whether just or no.

5 Canon law apter to condemne then Civill, and why.

c Paleotus de notbis c. 19.

SECT. II.

And first because heresie which is læsa Majestas Divina, of all crimes is the principall object of that Court, I say, that this proposition, is not by any thing extant in the Canon law, (and therefore not at all) hereticall, allowing to them their largest largeſt definition of hereſie; which is, (a)[Any thing which is againſt Catholique faith, that is Scriptures rightly unaerſtood; Or the traditions and definitions of the Church, or generall Councells lawfully gathered, or definition of the ſea Apoſtolique, or the common opinion of Fathers, in a matter of faith.] The propoſition may perchance ſeeme to ſome ſo ill qualified, as it may be male ſonans, or temeraria, or perchance ſapiens hereſis, for all theſe proceed from the indiſpoſition and diſtempred taſte of the apprehendor, which muſt not alwaies be idly flattred and pampred, but invited to the ſearch and diſcovery of truth, who elſe being the greateſt Prince in the world, ſhould have no progreſſe, but be ſtraightned in a wretched corner. Firſt therefore, (to caſt a glance upon every part of the definition of hereſie) whether it be againſt the Scriptures rightly underſtood or no will be more properly and naturally examined, when we come to the laſt part, which is of Divine law.

1 That this proposition is not hereticall.

a Sinancha Enchirid. Iud: tit. 24. nu. 2.
2 A large definition of hereſie.

Next, there is no tradition nor definition of the Church in the point at all, much leſſe as of a matter of faith, which is the ſecond limbe of the definition.

3 No definition of the Church in the point.
4 Nor Canon
5 Nor Bull.

No decree of any generall Councell. No reſcript or Bull of any Pope. And for the common opinion of the Fathers (beſides that it can be no ſafe rule, becauſe (b) as [Azorius notes, Controverters often ſay on both ſides this is the common opinion; And certainely that is the common opi-

b Moral. Inſtit. to. 1. l. 2. c. 13.
6 Of the common opinion of Fathers, how it varies in times and places.

nion

nion in one Age which is not in another; yea, in one Kingdome at the ſame time, which is not in another, though both be Catholik: As in Germany and France, by the common opinion Latreia is not due to the Croſſe, in Spaine by the common opinion it is,] it cannot appeare, by the Canon law, that this is the common opinion of the Fathers; for (c) Gratian who onely of the Compilers of the Canon law toucheth the point, (as farre as either my reading or ſearch hath ſpied out) cites but two Fathers, Auguſtine, and Hierome. Whereof the latter is of opinion, that there may be ſome cauſe to do it. But in the Canon law I finde no words, not onely to lay the infamous name of hereſie upon it, but that affects it with the mark or ſtile of ſinne, or condemnes the fact, by inflicting any puniſhment upon the offender.

c 23. q. 5. 7 Gratian cites but two fathers, one of which is of our ſide.

I ſpeake here of the Canon law, to which the Canoniſt will ſtand: which are the Decretall letters, and all the extravagants. For, of Grattans Decret. that learned and ingenious Biſhop of Tarracon, hath taught us what we ſhould thinke, when he ſayes, [(d) That he is ſcarce worth ſo much reprehenſion; who having nothing that is profitable or of uſe, except he borrows it, is admired of the ignorant, and laughed at of the learned,] (e) [who never ſaw the bookes of the Councells, nor the works of the Fathers, nor the Regiſters of the Popes letters.] (f) And whoſe compilation had not that confirmation from Eugenius 3, as is falſly attributed to it.] Yet allthough Gratian have not ſo much authority, that 8 Of that part of the Canon Law, to which Canoniſts will ſtand.

d Ante. Auguſtin. l. de emendat. Gratian. l. 1. dial. 1. de titulo.

9 A Cathol. Biſhops cenſure of Gratians Decret.

e Idem dial. 4.

f Idem dial. 3.

by his inserting an imperiall law, or fragment of a Father, it should therefore be canoniz'd and grow into the body, and strength of the Canon law, (for then though that law were abrogated againe by the Emperour, it should still be alive and bin e by a stronger obligation in the Canon, which (g) Alb. Gentilis proves to be against the common opinion.) yet by consent, thus much is afforded him, that places cited by him, have as much authority in him, as they had in the Author from whom he tooke them And therefore when we come to handle the Reasons of particular Authors, we will pretermit none whom Gratian hath cited, for that is their proper place.

g De libris juris Canon. c. 2.

SECT. III.

1 What any Councels have done in this point.

And in this Distinction where we handle the opinion of the Canon Law in the point (not because Gratian cites it, but because the Canons of all Councels are now usurped as Canon Law) we will consider (a) a Canon of the Braccarense Councell cited by him.

a 23. q. 5. placuit.

But first, (although he have it not) wee will not conceale the (b) Antisidorense Councel, (which was before the other, under Gregor. 1. Anno 590.) For as the Civill Lawes by limitation of persons and causes, gave some restraint and correction to this naturall desire of dying when we would, which they did out of a duty to sinew and strengthen, as much as they were able b Concil. Antisidor. sub Greg. 1. An. 590.

able, the Doctrine of our blessed Saviour, who having determined all bloudy sacrifices; enlightens us to another Doctrine, that to endure the miseries & afflictions of this life, was wholsome, and advantagious to us; the Councels also perceiving that this first ingraffed and inborne desire, needed all restraints, contributed their help.

Ths (c) Canon then hath these words, [If any kill themselves, Ilsorum oblata non recipiantur.] For it seemes, that Preaching and Catechizing had wrastled, and fought with their naturall appetite, and tamed them to a perplexity whether it might be done or no; and so thinking to make sure worke, in an indiscreet devotion, they gave oblations to the Church, to expiate the fault, if any were. These oblations the Councell forbids to bee accepted, not decreeing any thing of the point, as of matter of faith, but providing against an inconvenient practice.

c Canon. 17. 3 The Councel of Antisid. onely refused their oblations

Neither was it much obligatory, or considerable, what it had decreed, being onely (d) a Diocesan Councell, of one Bishoppe, and his Abbats, and whose Canons Binnius presents, because (though some of them be out of use, of which this may be one) yet they are (saies he) some discoverers of Antiquity.

3 This was but a Diocesan Councell. d Notæ Binnij in Conc. Antis. To. 2. fi. 955.

The other Councell which (e) Gratian cites and besides which two I finde none) hath these words, [For those that kill themselves, there shall be no commemoration at the oblation, nor shall they bee brought to buriall with Psalmes.] which intimates, as e 23. q. 5. placuit. 4 The Braccar Councel inflicts two punishments.

as the language of the Canon Law is, Caninam sepulturam.

f 24. q. 2. Sane quid.

5 The first, not praying for them, is of them who did it when they were excommunicate.

But the (f) glosse upon this doth evict from another Canon, that if the person were not under excommunication, it is not so; [For we may communicate with him dead, with whom we may communicate living.] Which showes that his act of dying so, put him not into worse state in this respect. This answers the first punishment inflicted by that Canon. And for the second which is deniall of Christian buriall, it is very rigorous to conclude a hainousnesse of the fact, from that, since the (g) true Canon Law denyes that to men slaine at Tilt, though it afford them, if they be not presently dead, all the Sacraments applyable in that extreamitie, as Penance, Eucharist, and Unction.

g Decret. l. 5. tit. 13. de torneamentis.

6 The second, which is deniall of buriall, is not alwayes inflicted for offences; as appears in an interdict locall.

h 13. q. 2. anim.

So that, though since it denies buriall to men whom they esteeme in state and way of salvation, the Glosse here collects reasonably, [That this punishment reaches not to the dead, but onely to deterre the living;] referring to this purpose an h) Epistle of Gregory, saying, [So much as a sumptuous funerall profits a wicked man, so much a base, or none at all hurts a godly.] i Li. 3. tit. 7. de sepulchris. Eos qui.

Lastly, that (i) Clementine which reckons up many causes for which Christian buriall is denyed, amongst which one is a locall interdict, at what time the holyest man which dyes in that place cannot bee buried, which sometimes extends to whole Kingdomes, instructs us sufficiently ently, that one may be subject to that punishment, (if it be any in that Law) and yet not guilty of such a crime as this is reputed to be.

And (k) the Romans in their Religious Discipline, refused solemne buriall, to any which perished by lightnings, (l) though they buried offenders in the towne, as they did Vestals and Emperours; because as their Dedication to God had delivered the Nunnes, and Soveraigntie the Emperours from bondage of Law; so did Justice, to which they had made full satisfaction deliver offenders punished. And since both Saint Hierome, and the Bracarense Councell, inflict the same punishments upon those Catechumeni, who although they had all other preparations, and degrees of maturity in the Christian Faith, yet departed out of this world without Baptisme, as they doe upon Selfe murtherers, and so made them equall in punishment, and consequently in guiltinesse; I thinke it will ill become the Doctrines of our times, and the Analogy thereof, to pronounce so desperately of either of their damnations. Sert. Senen. lib. 6. Annot. 7. p. 311.

And here wee end our second Distinction of this second Part, which was allotted for the examination of the Canon Law.

k Sylv. ad leg. Reg. c. 11.

l P. Manut. de leg. Rom. 7 Romans buried such offenders as had satisfied the Law within the towne, as Vestals, and Emperors.

Distinction III.

SECT. I.

1 Of the laws of particular Nations.

OF Arguments of this Nature, which are concluſions deduced out of reaſon and diſcourſe, next to theſe generall Lawes of the Empire, and of the Church, (which though it might ſeeme for the generality thereof, to have deſerved the firſt place, we handled in the ſecond roome, becauſe the power thereof hath beene ever litigious and queſtionable,) I may juſtly ranke the Lawes of particular ſtates.

2 Of our law of Felo de ſe. Bract. f. 150. a.

By our Law therefore, as it hath not beene long in practiſe, (for (a) Bracton ſeemes not to know ſuch a Law, when allowing an intire chapter to that title, he onely repeats the words in that Emperiall Law, which I cited before, and ſo admitts, (if he admit that Law, that exception, Sine juſta cauſa) he which kills himſelfe is reputed felo de ſe; and whether he be chargeable with any offence or no, he forfeits his goods; which devolving to the Kings Almoner, ſhould on the Kings behalfe be employed in pious and charitable uſes.

b Flowd. Com. Hales his caſe. 3 That this is murder in our law; And the reaſons which entitle the King.

And (b) it is not onely Homicide, but Murder, And yet the reaſons alledged there, are but theſe, That the King hath loſt a Subject, that his Peace is broken, and that it is of evill example.

Since

Since therefore, to my understanding, it hath no foundation in Naturall nor Emperiall Law, nor receives much strength from those reasons, but having by custome onely put on the nature of law, as most of our law hath, I beleeve it was first induced amongst us, because we exceeded in that naturall desire of dying so. For it is not a better understanding of nature, which hath reduced us from it; But the wisedome of Law-makers and observers of things fit for the institution and conservation of states.

4 Our naturall desire to such dying, probably induced this law.

For in ancient Common-wealths, the numbers of slaves were infinite, as ever both (c) in Rome and Athens, there were 10 slaves for one Citizen; and (d) Pliny sayes that in Augustus time, Isidorus had above 4000. And (e) Vedius Pollio so many, that he alwayes fed his fish in ponds with their blood; and since servitude hath worne out, yet the number of wretched men exceeds the happy (for every labourer is miserable and beastlike in respect of the idle abounding men;) It was therefore thought necessary by lawes, and by opinion of Religion, (as (f) Scævola is alleaged to have said, Expetit in Religione Civitates falli,) to take from these weary and macerated wretches, their ordinary and open escape, and ease, voluntary death.

5 As in States abounding with slaves, the Law-makers quenched this desire.

c Bodin Rep. l. 1. c. 2. & l. 6. c. 1.

d l. 33. c. 10.

e Schast. Med. de Venat. Pisca. et aucup. q. 41.

f Aug. de Civi. Dei l. 4. c. 27.

And therfore it seemes to be so prohibited, as a (g) Lawyer sayes, hunting and usery is, [Ne ineſcarentur homines] and as (h) Mahomet to withdraw his Nation from wine, brought them

6 Least it should draw too fast, as Hunting and Vsury are; and as wine by Mahom.

g Pruckman. de Venat. Pisc. & Aucup. c. 4.

h Pomp. de Incantat. c. 10.

to a religious beliefe, that in every grape there was a Devill.

7 And as ſevere lawes againſt ſtealing

As therefore amongſt us a naturall diſeaſe of ſtealing, (for as all other, ſo this vice may as well abound in a Nation as in a particular man, and (i) Dorotheus relates at large the ſick eſſe of one of his fryars, who could not abſtaine from ſtealing, though he had no uſe of that which he ſtole) hath drawn from a (k) Councell holden at London under Hen. 3. a Canon which excommunicates the Harbourers of Theeves, quibus abundat Regio Angliæ, and mentions no other fault but this, and from the Cuſtome, and Princes, and Parliaments ſevere Lawes againſt theft, then are juſtifiable by Nature, or the Iewes Judiciall Law, (for our Law hangs a man for ſtealing in extreame neceſſity, when not onely all things, to him, returne to their firſt community, but he is bound in conſcience to ſteale, and were, in ſome opinions, (though others ſay he might neglect this priviledge) a Selfe-murderer if he ſtole not.

i B. Dorotheus doct. 11.

k Binnius to 3. par. 2. f. 1476. An. 1237.

8 When a man is bound to ſteale.

9 Scotus opinion of day theeves. l 4. Diſt. 15. q. 3.

And (l) Scotus diſputing againſt the Lawes of thoſe Nations, which admit the death of a theife robbing by day, becauſe (m) whoever kills ſuch a theife, is expreſly by Gods Law a murderer, ask where have you read an exception of ſuch a theife from the Law, Non occides, or where have you ſeene a Bull fallen from Heaven to juſtifie ſuch executions? So it may be, a naturall declination in our people to ſuch a manner of death, m Exod. 22. 3.

death, which weakned the ſtate, might occaſion ſeverer Lawes, then the common ground of all Lawes ſeemes well to beare.

And therefore, as when the Emperour had made a Law, to cut off a common abuſe of miſdevout men, that no man might give any thing to the Clergy, no not by Teſtament, Saint Hierome ſaid, I lament and grieve, but not that ſuch a Law is made, but that our manners have deſerved ſuch a Law, ſo doe I in contemplation of theſe Lawes mourne, that the infirmity and ſickneſſe of our Nation ſhould neede ſuch Medecines.

The like muſt be ſaid of the like Law in the Earldome of Flaunders; If it be true, (n) That they allow confiſcation of goods, in onely five caſes, whereof this is one; and ſo it is rankt with Treaſon, Hereſie, Sedition, and forſaking the Army againſt the Turk, which be ſtrong and urgent circumſtances to reduce men from this deſire.

n Tholoſa. Syn. l. 36. c. 22. nu. 13. ex Buteler. in ſumma rurali. 10 Of ſuch a law in Flaunders.

SECT. II.

For whereſoever you finde many and ſevere Lawes againſt an offence it is not ſafe from thence to conclude an extreame enormity or hainouſneſſe in the fault, but a propenſneſſe of that people, at that time, to that fault. Thereupon (a) Ignatius and many others, even intire Councells, were forced to pronounce, that whoſoever soever fasted upon Sundayes were Murderers of Christ.

1 Severe lawes are arguments of the peoples inclination, not of the hainouſneſſe of the fault. a Epiſt. ad Philip.

2 Sunday fast extremly condemned thereupon.

So in France the Lawes abound against Duells, to which they are headlongly apt.

3 So Duells in France.

So are the resolutions of the Spanish Casuists, and the Bulls of the Popes, iterated and aggravated in that Nation, against there Bull-bayting, to which they are so enormously addicted, which yet of it selfe is no sinne, as Navar retracting his opinion after 70 yeares holds at last.

4 So Bull-baitings in Spain.

Navar. Manu. li. 15. nu. 18.

These severe lawes therefore do no more aggravate a fault, then milde punishments diminish it. And no man thinks Rape a small fault, though Solon punish it, if she be a Virgin, and freeborn, with so much morey as would amount to our five shillings: and the (b) Salique law punishes a witch, which is convict to have eaten a man, pecuniarily, and at no high price. And therefore (c) Bartolus allowes that in cases of publique profit or detriment, the Judges may extend an odious and burdenous law beyond the letter, and restraine a favourable and beneficiall law, within it, though this be against the Nature and common practise of both these lawes.

5 Gentle laws diminish not the nature of rape, nor witchcraft.

b Cap. 67.

c H. de his qui not. infam. l. 2. §. 1. nu. 2.

6 Publique benefit is the rule of extending or restraining all lawes by Bartol.

It therefore our, and the Flemish law be severe in punishing it, and that this argument have the more strength, becaufe more Nations concurre in such lawes, it may well from hence be retorted, that every where men are inclinable

7 If other Nations concur in like lawes, it shews their inclination to be generall.

to

to it: which establisheth much our opinion, considering that none of those lawes, which prescribe Civill restraints from doing it, can make it sinne; and the act is not much discredited, if it be but therefore evill, because it is so forbidden, and binds the conscience no farther, but under the generall precept of obedience to the law, or to the forfeiture.

SECT. III.

It seemes also by the practise of the Jewes, (for (a) Josephus speaks of it as of a thing in use) that they did not bury such as killed themselves, till the Sunne set. But though I know not upon what Law of theirs they grounded this, and I finde not by writers of either of their Policies since their dispersion, (for though they have no Magistracie, but bee under the Lawes of those places into which they are admitted, in all cases except where they be exempted by priviledg, yet they doe also testifie a particular detestation of some sins by outward penances among themselves, (b) as in theft, they binde, and whip, and enjoyne to publike confession, and in Adultery the offender sits a day in Winter in freezing water, and in Sommer upon an Anthill, or amongst hives of Bees naked, though, I say, I finde not by Galatine, Sigonius, Buxdorfius, nor Mol-ther, that this was or is in use amongst them, yet because Josephus, though but Oratorily sayes it, we

1 The custom of the Iewes, and the law of the Athenians evict nothing.

a De bello Jud. l. 3. c. 13.

b Buxdor. Syn. Iudaic. c. 34.

we will accept it; and beleeve that it was upon the reason common almost to all Nations to deterre men from doing it, and not to punish it being done. And of like use, that is, in terrorem, was also that Law of the Athenians, who cut off that hand after death which perpetrated that fact; which Law Josephus remembers in the same place.

SECT. IIII.

1 The reason drawne from remedies against it, proves no more.

That reason which is grounded upon the Edict of Tarquinius Priscus, (a) who when this desire of Death raigned amongst his men like a contagion, cured it by an opprobrious hanging up their bodies, and exposing them to birds and beasts. And (b) upon that way of reducing the Virgins of Milesium, who when they had a wantonnesse of dying so, and did it for fashion, were by Decree dishonourably exhibited as a spectacle to the people naked, prevailes no farther then the argument before, and proves onely a watchfull solicitude in every State, by all meanes to avert men from this naturall love of ease, by which their strength in numbers would have been very much empaired. And thus wee determine this Distinction.

a Pliny. li. 36. cap. 13.
b A. Gellius li. 15. c. 10.

SECT.

Distinct. IV.

WEe will now descend to those reasons which particular men have used for the detestation of this action. And first we will pay our debt to Gratian, in considering the places cited by him, and after, the other reasons of Divine Authors, if they bee not grounded upon places of Scriptures, which we repose for the last part, shall have there ventilation in this Distinction.

1. Of reasons used by particular men, being Divines.

SECT. I.

The (a) first place then, is in an Epistle of Saint Augustine to Donatus thē Heretique; who having beene apprehended by the Catholikes, fell from his Horse, and would have drown'd himselfe: and after complaines of violence used towards him, in matter of Religion, wherein he claimes the freedome of Election, and conscience. Saint Augustine answers, wee have power to endeavour to save thy soule against thy will, as it was lawfull to us, to save thy body so. If thou wert constrained to doe evill, yet thou oughtest not to kill thy selfe. Consider whether in the Scriptures, thou finde any of the faithfull that did so, when they suffered much

1. Of S. Augustine and his Argument.
a 23. q. 5. Duplicet.

from them, who would have forced them to do things to their ſoules deſtruction.

2 Of St. Aug. comparatively with other Fathers.

To ſpeake a little of Saint Auguſtine in generall, becauſe from him are derived almoſt all the reaſons of others, he writing purpoſely thereof, from the 17 to the 27 Chapter of his firſt book De Civitate Dei, I ſay, as the Confeſſaries of theſe times, comparing Navar and Sotus, two of the greateſt Caſuiſts, yeeld ſometimes that Navar, is the founder and learneder, but Sotus more uſefull and applyable to practique Divinitie; So, though Saint Auguſtine for ſharpe inſight, and concluſive judgement, in expoſition of places of Scripture, which he alwaies makes ſo liquid, and pervious, that he hath ſcarce been equalled therein, by any of all the Writers in the Church of God, except Calvin may have that honour, whom (where it concernes not points in Controverſie,) I ſee the Jeſuits themſelves often follow, though they dare not name him, have a high degree and reverence due to him, yet in practique learning, and morall Divinity, he was of ſo nice, and refin'd, and rigorous a conſcience, (perchance to redeeme his former licenciouſneſſe, as it fals out often in ſuch Convertits, to be extreamely zealous) that for our direction in actions of this life, Saint Hierome, and ſome others, may bee thought ſometimes fitter to adhere unto, then St. Auguſtine; Yet I ſay not this, as though wee needed this medicament for this place.

3. Compariſon of Navar and Sotus.

4 Jeſuiſts often beholden to Calvin for expoſitions,.

For

For I agree with Saint Augustine here, That neither to avoid occasion of sinne, nor for any other cause, wherein my selfe am meerely or principally interessed, I may doe this act; which also serves justly for answer to the same zealous Father in the other place, (b) cited by Gratian; for with him I confesse, [That he which kills himselfe, is so much the more guilty herein, as hee was guiltlesse of that fact for which hee killed himselfe.]

5. In this place we differ not from St. Aug.

6. Nor in the second.
b 22. q. 5. Si non.

Though, by the way, this may not passe so generally, but that it must admit the exception, which the (c) Rule of Law upon which it is grounded, carries with it, [Nemo sine culpa puniendus, nisi subsit causa] And so, as Saint Augustine, we, with as much earnestnesse, say, [Hoc asserimus, hoc dicimus, hoc omnibus modis approbamus. That neither to avoid temporall trouble, nor to remove from others occasion of sinne, nor to punish our owne past sinnes nor to prevent future, nor in a desire of the next life, (where these considerations are only, or principally) it can be lawfull for any man to kill himselfe.] But neither Saint Augustine nor we deny, but that if there be cases, wherein the party is dis-interested, and only or primarily the glory of God is respected and advanced, it may be lawfull.

7. That then may be Causa puniendi sine culpâ.
c Reg. jur. 61.

So that, as Valens the Emperour, having surprised Famblicus, when his divining cock had described three letters of his name who should succeede, slew all whose names were Theodorus, Theodotes, 8 As Valens missed Theodosius; So did Augustine pretermit the right cause.

Theodotes, or Theodulus, but escaped Theodosius who fulfilled the Prophecy, So Saint Augustine hath condemned those causes which we defend not, but hath omitted those wherein it is justifiable.

9 Of Cordubensis rule, how we must do in perplexities; d Ant. Cordub. de simonia q. 27. Editione. Hispani.

In which case being hard to be discern'd and distinguished from others arising from humane infirmity, if that rule which d, Antonius de Corduba, gives in cases of simony, be as he sayes it is, a good guide in all perplexities, it will ease very much.

10 How temporall reward may be taken for spirituall office.

He sayes, because in the case of simony, many difficulties grow, because not onely by cleare and common judgements, temporall reward may be taken for spirituall offices, by way of gift, stipend, wages, almes, sustenation, or fulfilling the law or custome of that place, but also by some Doctors, even by way of price, and bargaine, if not directly for the spirituall part thereof, yet for the labour necessarily annexed to it, because every Curate cannot distinguish in these cures, he bids him [ever doe it, with an intention to doe it so, as God knowes it may de done, and as wise men know and would teach that it might be done: For thus saith he, humbly remitting our selves to the learned, which are our fathers instruction, what ever defect be in us, yet Saluamur in fide parentum] And in this sort (e) Pindarus making an implicite prayer to God, that he would give him that which he knew to be best for him, died in that very petition.

Hesychius vitæ philosophorum.

11 Of Pindarus death praying for he knew not what.

Except

Except therefore (f) Saint Auguſtine have that moderation in his reſolution; That a better life never receives a man after a death whereof himſelfe was guilty, we will be as bould with him, as (g) one who is more obliged to him then we, who repeating Auguſtines opinion, That the Devill could poſſeſſe no body, except he entred into him by ſinne, rejects the opinions, and ſaies, The holy Father ſpeaks not, of what muſt of neceſſity be, but what for the moſt part uſes to bee.

f Vbi ſupra. 12 In our place we depart from St. Aug. upon the ſame reaſon as the Jeſuit Thyræus doth.

g Thyræ. Jeſui. de Dæmoniacis c. 31. nu. 428.

SECT. II.

And in our caſe we ought (as I thinke rather to follow (a) Saint Hieromes temper, who in his expoſition upon Jonas, (which I wonder why Gratian cited being ſo farre from his end and advantage) ſayes, [In perſecution I may not kill myſelfe, abſque eo, ubi caſtitas periclitatur] where I am ſo farre from agreeing with (b) Gratian, that [Abſque eo, is incluſively ſpoken, and amounts to this phraſe, no not though] as I thinke that good learned father, included in that word Caſtitas, all purity of Religion and manners; for to a man ſo rectified death comes ever, and every way ſeaſonably and welcome. For [(c) qualem mors invenit hominem, ita homo invenit mortem.]

1 The place out of S. Hierome cited by Gratian. a 23. q. 5. Non eſt, b Gloſſ. in locum ſupra.

c Idiotæ Contemplatio de morte.

SECT. III.

1 Lavater confesses Aug. Hie. Cry. and Lactan. to be of this opinion.
2 Lavater in 1 Sam. Caulti.

From this place of Saint Hierome, I believe, and some other, which perchance I have not read, and some other places in others, of like charitable dissent to this opinion (a) Lavater having made his profit of all Peters Martyrs reasons almost against this act, and adding some of his owne, when they both handle the duties of Saul, confesseth that in this case of preserving Chastity, Augustine, Chrysostome, and Lactantius, and Hierome departed from their opinion who condemned this Act.

SECT. IIII.

1 Of P. Mar. reason Mors malum.

Peter Martyr also presents one other reason, of which he seemes glad, and well contented in it, which is, That we may not hasten death, because Mors malum.

2 Stromat. l. 4. 2 Clement. hath long since destroyed that opinion.

But it is not worthy of his gravity, especially so long after (a) Clemens Alex. had so throughly defeated that opinion.

3 Of Malum pœnæ.
b Aqui. 1. q. 48. ar. 6. Con.
c Jo. 9. 3.

But if it be Malum, it is but Malum pœnæ. And that is an evill of which God is Authour, and is not that (b) Malum quo mali sumus; neither doth it alwayes prove the patient to be evill, (though God for all that be alwaies iust,) for himselfe said of the man borne blinde (c) [Neither he, nor his parents have sinned.]

And

And of that Malum pœnæ, which is eſteemed the greateſt in this life, of temporall afflictions, becauſe of the neere danger of empairing our ſoule, which is to be poſſeſſed, (d) Thyræus, from Saint Hierome and Chryſoſtome ſayes, that it is not alwayes inflicted for ſinne, but to manifeſt the glory of God.

4 Poſſeſſed men are not alwaies ſo afflicted for ſin.
d Thyræus de Dæmon. c. 31.

And therefore the greateſt evill which can be imagined, of this kinde of evill, which is [(e) Damnation, hath not ſo much Rationem mali, as the leaſt ſinne that drawes Damnation.]

e Aqui. 1. q. 48. ar. 6. Con.

Death therefore is an act of Gods juſtice, and when he is pleaſed to inflict it, he may chuſe his Officer, and conſtitute my ſelfe as well as any other.

5 Damnation hath not ſo much rationem mali as the leaſt ſin.

And if it were of the worſt ſort of evill, yet as (f) Saint Auguſtine ſayes that [in the Act of Marriage, there is Bonus uſus mali, id eſt concupiſcentiæ, quo malo male utuntur adulteri.] And as good Paulinus prayſes Severus, that (g) [he having in Conjugio peccandi licentiam, departed not from his accuſtomed auſterity,] ſo may the ſame be ſaid of death in ſome caſes, as in Martyrdome.

6 If death were of the ſorts of evill, yet there may be good uſe of it.
f Aug. de bono Conjugii.
g Paulin. Severo epiſt. 1.

For though Martyr urge farther, that death is called (h) Gods enemy, and is therefore evil, yea (i) Muſculus ſayes upon that place, [It is often commended in Scriptures, becauſe towards the faithfull God uſeth it to good ends, and makes it cooperari ad ſalutem.] And by what authority can they ſo aſſuredly pronounce that it falls out never 7 How Paul calls Death Gods enemy.

h 1 Cor. 15. 20.
i Marlorat. in hunc locum.

never in our case? Besides this, death hath lost much of her naturall malignity already, and is not now so ill, as at first she was naturally; for as (k) Calvin notes here, [she is already so destroyed, that she is not lethalis, but molesta.]

8 Death since Christ is not so evill as before.
k Calvin in hunc locum.

SECT. V.

One reason more Martyr offers of his owne which is, Vita Donum, life, because it is the gift of God may not be profused; but when we have agreed to him, that it may not be unthriftily and prodigally cast away, how will he conclude from thence, such an ingratitude, as that I shall forsake Gods glory? and may in no case ponere animam? How will it follow from I must not alwaies, to I may never?

1 Of Martyrs reason, Vita donum.

SECT. VI.

Lavater after many other urges this reason; That because Judges are established, therefore no man should take Dominion over himselfe.

But in the Church of England, where auricular confession is not under precept, nor much in practise, (for that we admit it not at all, or refuse it so as the Waldenses did, though (a) a reverend man say it, is more then I knew) who is judge of sin against which no civill law provides, or of which there is no evidence? May not I accuse and condemne my selfe to my selfe, and inflict

1 Of Lavaters reason of Judges.
2 Where confession is not in use, there is no exterior Judge of secret sinne.
a Humfred. Iesui. p. 2. ad Ratio. 3. Cam.

inflict what penance I will for punishing the past, and avoiding like occasion of sinne?

Upon this reason depends that perplexed case, whether the Pope may not give himselfe absolution from Acts and Vowes, and partake his owne indulgences, although by the best opinion it is agreed, that to do so is an act of jurisdiction, which by Lavaters rule, no man may exercise upon himselfe.

3 Of the Popes jurisdiction over himselfe.

(b) The Emperiall lawes forbid in a generality any to be judge in his owne cause, but all Expositors, except Soveraignes. And in ordinary Judges, all agree with c) Balaus [That in facto notorio if the dignity of the Iudge be concerned, he is the proper Iudge of it. And he sayes that it belongs to the Pretor to judge, whether such a cause belong to his judgement, or no.] (d) And with a Non obstante even upon Naturall law, as the words of the privilege are, Theodorius allowed Bishops to be Judges in their owne cause. (e) So [if a sonne which had not beene Sui juris had beene made Consul, he might have emancipated himselfe, or authorized another to have adopted him.]

4 Of such jurisdiction in other persons by civill lawes.

b Cod. l. 3. tit. 5. le. Generali.

c Bald. F. le. 5. de. judiciis.

d Filesacus de Episc. autorit. Ca. 1. §. 17.

e Dig. l. 1. tit. 7. le. 3. si Cons.

And besides that, it appeares, that the Popes have exercised jurisdiction upon themselves, even before they were Popes, (for (f) John 22 having permission to chuse one Pope, chose himselfe, which deed Naucler relates and justifies) by Canonicall rules it is plaine, that a man may exercise jurisdiction upon himselfe in any case where there is not a distinction of persons

5 Joh. 22. elected himselfe Pope.

f Vol. 2. Genera. 44.

enjoyned Iure Divino, as in Baptiſme: which will not be ſtretched to our caſe.

6. Juriſdiction over our ſelves is denyed us, becauſe we are preſumed favourable to our ſelves; Not in caſes hurtfull to our ſelves.

And certainly the reaſon of the Law, why none ſhould be judge in his owne cauſe, is, becauſe every one is preſumed favourable towards himſelfe. And therefore if it be diſpenſable in ſome caſes beneficiall to a man, much more may it be in caſes of inflicting puniſhment, in which none is imagined to be over-rigorous to himſelfe.

g Heurnius de Philoſ. Barbar.

And if man were by nature as ſlaviſh, as the [(g) Eſſeni by profeſſion and rule, who had power of themſelves in nothing, but juvando & miſerenda] I ſee not, but when this becomes an act of advantage to our ſelves, we may have juriſdiction enough to doe it.

7. Even in caſes hurtfull, we have ſuch juriſdiction.

And what is more evident to prove, that in ſome caſes derogatory and prejudiciall to us, we have this right over our ſelves, then that every man may cedere ſuo jure, And Non uti privilegio.

h Theod. a Niee. l. 3. c. 3. & 23. 8. Gregories oath in the great Sciſme.

And (h) it was by all condemned in Gregorie, in the great Sciſme, that after hee had promiſed to depart from the Papacie, by oath, in which was a clauſe, that he ſhould neither aske, give, nor accept abſolution from that oath, hee induced his Mendicants to preach, that it were deadly ſinne in him to de-relinquiſh the Church. So alſo have many Kings departed from their Government, and deſpoiled them of their burden, at their pleaſure. For, as (i) one ſayes, i Schluſſelburgius. Catul. Hereticos, l. 13.

of

of the whole Church, it may bee ſaid of every particular member; it was ever in Politicall bondage, but not in Spirituall.

So that, if there bee caſes, wherein one may aſſuredly, or probaly, after juſt diligence uſed, conclude upon an illumination of the Spirit of God, or upon a ceaſing of the reaſon of the Law at that time in him, that man is then Sui Iuris.

9. When a man becomes to be ſui juris.

For though in caſes where there is a proper Court, I am bound to it; yet, as Kings which are both Soveraignes, may therefore juſtly decide a cauſe by Warre, becauſe there can bee no competent Judge between them; So in ſecret caſes betweene the Spirit of God, and my conſcience, of which there is not certainly conſtituted any exteriour Judge, we are our ſelves ſufficient to doe all the Offices; and then delivered from all bondage, and reſtored to our naturall libertie, we are in the ſame condition as (k) Princes are, who if in the rigour of words they may not properly bee ſaid to give themſelves Priviledges, have yet one generall inherent Privilege, and when they will, they may declare, that in that particular caſe, they will not take a new, but exerciſe their old Priviledge.

10. Warre is juſt betweene Soveraigne Kings, becauſe they have no Judge.

k Accacius de privileg. juris. l. 1. cap. 7.

11. Princes give not themſelves priviledges, but declare that in that caſe they will exerciſe their inherent priviledge.

SECT. VII.

And becauſe (a) Ioſephus hath one reaſon

Ioſephus Reaſon of Depoſitum.

a De bell. Iud. l. 3. ca. 13.

which tasts of Divinitie, we will consider it in this place. He sayes, our Soule is, particula Dei, and depoſed and committed in truſt to us, and we may not neglect or diſharbour it, before he withdraw it. But we are ſtill upon a ſafe ground, That whenſoever I may juſtly depart with this life, it is by a Summons from God; and it cannot then bee imputed to any corruption of my will; for, (b) Velle non creditur, qui obſequitur Imperio. Yet I expect not ever a particular inſpiration, or new commiſſion, ſuch as they are forced to purchaſe for Sampſon, and the reſt; but that reſident and inherent grace of God, by which he excites us to works of morall, or higher vertues.

b Regula juris 4.

And ſo, when it is ſo called for againe, (c) it were a greater injuſtice in us to deny or withhold any thing, of which wee were Depoſitaries, then if we were Debtors; yea, (not to depart from Joſephus Alluſion or Meraphor of Depoſitum. If it were a fault to let goe that of which I were Depoſitary, before it were truely called for, yet in Conſcientia errante, I were excuſable; for it (d) is [Ex ſubſtantia depoſiti, ut depoſitarius tantum de dolo teneatur non de culpa.] Yea, when (e) I have a ſecret from another, Data fide, I have this in all reſpects, in Natura Depoſiti; and yet no man doubts, but that I may in many caſes, depart with this ſecret.

c Ariſt. Probl. Sect. 29. q. 2.
a. In theſe caſes a depoſitarie cannot bee accuſed De culpa, if he be ſine Dolo.
3. A ſecret received, Data fide, is in Natura depoſiti.
d Tholoſ. Syntag. l 23. ca. 3. Nu. 17.
e Soto de Teg. Secr. membr. 1. q. 1.

SECT.

SECT. VIII.

There are many Metaphoricall and Similitudinarie Reasons, scattered amongst Authors, as in Cicero and Macrobius, made rather for illustration, then for argument or answer; which I will not stand to gleane amongst them, since they are almost all bound up in one sheafe, in (a) that Oration of Josephus. Or else will be fitly handled in those places of Scripture, which make some such allusions.

1. Of similitudinary Reasons in Authors not Divine.

a De Bello Iudaico. l. 3. ca. 14.

SECT. IX.

Josephus then in that Oration hath one Reason drawen from the custome of an Enemy. We esteeme them enemies, who attempt our lives, and shall we bee enemies to our selves? But besides that, in this place, Iosephus speakes to save his owne life, and may justly be thought to speak more ex animo, and dispassioned, wherein the (a) person of Eleazar hee perswades to kill themselves, there is neither certaine truth in the Assertion, nor in the Consequence. For do we esteeme God, or the Magistrate our enemy, when by them death is inflicted? And do not Martyrs, in whose death God is glorified, kisse the Executioners, and the Instruments of their death? Nor is it unlawfull, unnaturall, or unexpedient for us, in many cases, to be so much our a lib. 7. c. 28.

1. Of his reason of Hostis.

owne Enemies, as to deny our ſelves many things agreeable to our ſenſitive nature, and to inflict upon our ſelves many things repugnant to it, as was abundantly ſhewed in the firſt part.

SECT. X.

1. Of his reaſon of Servus.

In the ſame Oration he hath another alluſorie argument, [That a Servant which runnes away, is to be puniſhed by the Law, though his Maſter bee ſevere; much more if we runne away from ſo indulgent a Maſter, as God is to us.] But not to give ſtrength or delight to this reaſon, by affording it a long or diligent anſwer; wee ſay, In our caſe the Servant runnes not from his Maſter, but to him, and at his call obeys his voyce. Yet it is as truely, as devoutly ſayd. [The devill is overcome by reſiſting, but the world, and the fleſh by running away.] And the farther, the better.

Boſquier. Conc. 7.

SECT. XI.

Of his reaſon of a Pilot.

His laſt, which is of any taſte, is [That in a tempeſt, it were the part of an idle and treacherous Pylot, to ſinke the Ship.] But I ſay, if in a Tempeſt we muſt caſt out the moſt precious ware aboard, to ſave the lives of the Paſſengers, and the Marchant who is damnified thereby, cannot impute this to any, nor remedie himſelfe, how much more may I, when I am weather-beaten, and and in danger of betraying that precious ſoule which God hath embarqued in me, put off this burdenous fleſh, till his pleaſure be that I ſhall reſume it? For this is not to ſinck the ſhip but to retire it to ſafe Harbour, and aſſured Anchor. And thus our fourth Diſtinction, which was to embrace the reaſons propoſed by particular Authors, whether Divine or Prophane, and aſwell Oblique and Metaphoricall, as Direct, ſhall here be determined.

Diſtinction V.

SECT. I.

ANother ſort of Reaſons is produced from grounds of Morall Vertues. Of which (a)S. Thomas propoſeth two, which we limit for this Diſtinction; for that of Saint Auguſtine, That it is againſt Fortitude, hath another roome.) Firſt then Aquinas ſaies, it is againſt juſtice, and againſt Charity.

1. Of Aquin. two reaſons, from Juſtice and Charity. a 22. q. 64. ar. 5.

And the firſt in two reſpects, both becauſe he ſteales from the Univerſe, or from that State, to which his ſervice is due, one perſon, and member of the body; and alſo, becauſe he uſurpes upon the right of God. But the firſt of theſe may as well be ſaid of all who retyring themſelves ſelves from functions in the Common-wealth, defraud the State of their aſſiſtance, and attend onely their owne ends, whether in this life, or the next.

Of ſtealing away himſelfe from the State.

3. Monaſtique retiring is, in genere rei, the ſame offence.

For certainely to doe even that, ſo intenſly, as we neglect our office of Society is in genere rei, the ſame offence, as this.

4. The better opinion, that herein is no ſinne againſt Juſtice.

But as there are many which follow Aquinas herein; So Navar, and Sayr, and others are upon better reaſon of opinion, that this can be no ſinne againſt Juſtice.

5. I uſurpe not upon his ſervant, but am his ſervant herein.

And for the ſecond reaſon, This is not to uſurpe upon Gods Authoritie, or to deale with another's ſervant; if I become his Servant, and his Delegate, and his Commiſſioner, in doing this, when he can be no other way ſo much glo ryfied. And though the paſſage from this life to the next, bee not generally left to our free-will, and no body be properly Lord of his own life, yet (b) [Though we have not Dominium, we have Uſum, and it is lawfull for us, to loſe that when we will.]

b Sayr. Theſau. Caſ. Conſc. l. 7. ca. 9. Nu. 19.

6. Though we have not Dominium, wee have Vſum of this life, and we leave that when we will.

Betweene which negative killing, and p ſi ive killing, how little and narrow a diſtance t ere is, and how contiguous they are, we ſhall ſee in another place.

If therefore the reaſon why we may not dye thus, be, becauſe we are not Lords of our own life, but only God, then the State cannot take away our life; for (c) [That is no more Lord of our life, then we are,] that is, ſhe cannot doe it,

7. The State is not Lord of our life, yet takes it away.

c Sayr. l. 5. c. 7. Nu. 2.

it, but in cases where she is Gods Officer.

And if in this case, there were any injury done to the State, then certainly it were in the power of the State, to license a man to doe it, and he should upon such a license be excusable in conscience. For this, in the State, were but Cedere in re suo, which any may lawfully doe.

And lastly, if the State were injured in this, the State might lawfully recompence the dammage, upon the heire and goods of the Delinquent; which, except in those places, where expresse Lawes allow it, cannot be done.

Yet, I thinke, the better opinion, (to judge by number of Authors) will be, That if that person be of necessary use to that State, there are in it some degrees of injustice; but yet no more, then if a Generall of much use, should retire into a Monasterie. But if we may safely take this resolution, That it is not against justice, we may ease our selves of all that labour which must bee spent upon the third part; for, since the foundation of that will be principally the Commandement, Thou shalt not kill; If this killing be not against Justice, it is no breach of any part of the Decalogue, and so no sinne.

If any should thinke, that it may be an injustice to our selves, (d) Aquinas in the same place cleares it. And if it were possible, for a man to injure himselfe, which is not, yet this injury might be oftentimes such an one, as Cicero sayes, his banishment was, [Non modo non propul-

8. If injurie were herein done to the State, then by a license from the State, it might be lawfull.

9. And the State might recompence her domage upon the goods, or heire

10. In a man necessary there may be some injustice in this act.

d 22. q. 59. ar. 4. ad 3m.

11. No man can doe injurie to himselfe.

sanda,

fanda, sed emenda,] considering how much happineſſe might recompence it.

11. The queſtion, whether it bee againſt Charity, eſpitted to the third part.

And whether it be againſt Charity or no, becauſe Charity is not properly a Morall vertue, nor of this place, becauſe many of thoſe places of Scripture, which we muſt handle in the laſt part, are built upon his ground of Charitie, we will not examine, till we come thither. Here I will onely ſay, That though it be yet under Diſputation, and queſtionable, whether this be againſt Charity, or no; this is certainly againſt Charity to pronounce ſo deſperatly, as men uſe to doe, againſt them who fall into it.

SECT. II.

Of Ariſtotles two reaſons. Of Miſery, & Puſilanimity.

Of ſuch reaſons derived from the rules of Morall vertue, Ariſtotle inſinuates two. For obſerving that this kinde of death caught men by two baits, Eaſe and Honour, Againſt them who would dy to avoide Miſerie, (a) Hee teaches Death to be the greateſt miſery which can fall upon us. Which (not to examine how it can conſiſt with the reſt of his Doctrine) was to that purpoſe, the moſt ſlipperie and inſinuating perſwaſion.

a Ariſt. Eth. l.3.c.6.

And then, that Honour and Fame might draw none, (b) he ſayes, It is Cowardlineſſe, and Dejection, and an argument of an unſufferable and impatient minde. But of the firſt of theſe we have ſpoken before, in anſwer to one of P. Martyrs reaſons.

b Cap.7.

reasons. And of the other we shall have occasion to say in ugh, when wee come to a place where Saint Augustine sayes the same thing, and so we may ease this Distinction of that businesse.

Infra fol. 249.

Distinct. VI.

SECT. I.

HAving thus considered those Reasons, which in the best Authors are to be found, and shewed such Rules, as serve for the true understanding of them, and of all others which spring from the same, or like heads, before wee determine this Second Part, which is of the law of Reason; it shall bee requisit that wee also touch those Reasons, which on our part are by others, and may bee by us produced, by which this Selfe-homicide ma be delivered either a toto, or a tanto

1. Of Reasons to be made on the other part.

But not to stop long upon that Law and practise in the State of Rome, That any who had his causes allowed in the Senate, might kill himselfe; upon which (a) Quintilian frames a Case, That a Sonne who by Mathematicians Predictions, was first to kill many Enemies, and then his Father; having in the warres performed the first part,

2. Of the Law of Rome, of asking the Senate leave to kill himselfe.
a Declam. 4.
3. Of the case in Quintilian.

part, makes petition to the Senate, that before he come to performe the last part, he may be admitted to kill himselfe, and argues it for the Sonne, by many reasons appliable to his particular case, and to our maine question, I will hasten to our chiefe strength.

SECT. II.

1. Comparison of Desertion and Destruction.

It may then give much light to this businesse, if we compare Desertion and Destruction, and consider where and wherein they differ. Certainly, in Almighty God, it is not the same thing to forsake and to destroy, because he owes us nothing; and ever in his forsakings there are degrees of Mercy, because hee might then justly destroy us, and may after at his good pleasure returne againe to us.

2. Of Omissions equall to Committings.

3. In admonitorio.

But betweene men who are mutuall Debtors, and naturally bound to one another, it is otherwise. For a Magistrate, or Minister that abandons his charge, and neglects it, destroies it. So sayes (a) Agapetus the Deacon to Justinian the Emperour, Privati vitium est patrare, principis omittere. Yea, a private man which hinders not a mans wrong, when it belongs to him to do it, offers it. (b) [Fame morientem si non paveris, occidisti,] [with Ambrose. And c) [That Clergie man which hinders not a manslaughter, if hee can, is thereby irregular] And he which to himselfe denies necessarie things, or exposes himselfe b Dist. 86. passe.

c Tabula Paris. censurarum.

ſelfe inordinatly to ſuch dangers as men uſe not to eſcape, kills himſelfe. He that is as ſure that this Medicine will recover him, as that this Poyſon will deſtroy him, is as guilty if he forbeare the Phyſicke, as if he ſwallow the Poyſon. For what is this leſſe, then to attend the ruine of a houſe, or inundation of a ſtreame, or incurſion of mad beaſts? They which compare Omiſſions, and Committings, require no more to make them equall, but that we omit ſomething which we could, and ſhould doe.

SECT. III.

First, therefore in all Lawes, in ſuch faults as are greateſt, either in their owne nature, or in an irremediableneſſe when they are done; all approaches, yea the very firſt ſtep to them, hath the ſame guiltineſſe, and is under the ſame puniſhment, as the fault it ſelfe. As in Treaſon and Hereſie, the firſt conſent is the abſolute fault.

And (a) we have an example of a Woman burnt for petie Treaſon, for compaſſing the death of her husband, though it were not effected.

Homicide is one of thoſe crying ſins, and hath ever beene reckoned in Atrocibus. For though the (b) Athenians removed all Dracoes Lawes by diſuſe, for their extreame ſeverity, yet they retained thoſe againſt Homicide.

And this Homicide, (c) ſaies Tolet, may bee done five wayes, by 1. Commandement, by a Stanf. Plees de Cor n. cap. Petie treaſon.

1. In great ſinnes, the firſt ſtep imprints a guiltineſſe, yet many ſteps to Self-homicide are lawfull.

b Elian. l. 8. cap. 10. 2. Draco's laws againſt Homicide were retained.

c Precepto 5. 3. Tolets five Homicides.

2. Advise, by 3. Permission, by 4. Helpe, or by the fact it selfe.

4. Foure of these were to be found in Adams first Homicide in Paradise.

And in the first and worst Homicide committed in Paradise, in which were employed all the persons in the world, which were able to concurre to evill, when though there was but one man, all the Millions which have been and shall be, were massacred at once and himselfe too, as many of these kindes of Homicides were found, as was possible in so few persons. For as (c) one notes, [The Serpent counselled the Woman helped, and Adam perpetrated,] and wee may safely and reverently say) God permitted If then every one of these be a kind of Homicide, no approach towards it can be lawfull, if any bee lawfull, that is not Homicide. Let us therefore consider how farre and in how many of these waies Selfe-homicide may bee allowable.

c. Reuchlin. de verbo Mirifico. lib. 2. cap. 14.

SECT. IIII.

1. Of Tolets first & second way by Precept, and Advise, or option. a Bartol. le. Non solum. F. de injuriis, . Si mandato.

First therefore, though it be the common received opinion, (a) [Mandatorem & Mandatarium eidem pœnæ subjici,] Yet by the way of Precept, we cannot properly work upon ourselves, because in this act, the same partie must be agent, and patient, and instrument.

Nor very properly by the second way of advise; yet so neere, we may come to the nature of it, that after discourse we may advisedly chuse one part part, and refuse the other, (for (b) Cujus est velle, ejus est & nolle) and so we may wish to our selves, that which is naturally evill, I meane, Malum pœnæ; as the (c) Eremite by earnest prayer obtained of God, that he might be possessed of the Devill for certaine moneths, because he found in himselfe an inclination to pride and securitie.

Thus certainely in some cases, we may without sinne wish Death; and that not onely for enjoying the sight of God, (for so(d) sayes a holy man, Pro visione Dei, millies corpus nostrum morti dare optamus) but even to be so delivered from the encumbrances of this life; for so it hath [rationem boni] (e) as Peter Martyr argues; and then, [(f) Nove meliorem est Corruptio primæ habitudinis.]

This therefore we may wish; and yet it is so farre from being lawfull to wish any thing which were evill: that [(g) It is sinne to wish, that any thing which is naturally evill, were not so, that so wee might then wish it, when it were discharged of that naturall illnesse.]

Death it selfe therefore is not evill, nor is it evill to wish it, is it evill to further that with more actuall helpe, which we may lawfully wish to be done?

These two extreme Religions, which seem to avile secular Magistracie, and subject Monarchs either to an Ordinarie, or else to a Consistorie, accept willingly this saying, Curse not the King, no not in b Reg. Fur. 2. We may wish Malum pœnæ to our selves, as the Eremite did to be possessed.

c Sulpit. in vita Martini. Dialo. 1.

3. Wee may wish death for wearinesse of this life.

d Martialis ad Thelosanos.

e Coment. in Sam. l. 1 .c. ult.

f Hoptap. Pici. l.7. Procm.

4. It is sin to wish that evill were not so, that then wee might wish it.

g Adrian. quodlib. 10. ar. 2.

5. What wee may lawfully will, we may lawfully further.

6. Of wishing the Princes death.

in thy heart; That is, wish not ill to him. Nor have I observed that the Authors of either distemper have in their Books allowed, that the Subject might wish the death of the Prince, but in the same cases, where he might contribute his actuall helpe. For both Papists and Puritanes teaching that a lawfull King may become a tyrant, (which to my understanding cannot consist with the forme and right of an inheritable Monarchie.) Yet (h) one who pretends to go the middle way (and that is truely in this case, Via Regia, sayes, [That as well wee, as the Romanists esteeme a King of another Religion a Tyrant.] And [That it is impossible to make such a King, but he must be a Tyrant, in the opinion of one side.] h Saxavia de Imp. Author. Epistola. 7. In some opinions, false Religiō makes a Tirant.

And for his own opinion delivers [(i) That no man can be bound by oath of fidelity to the Pope, upon this reason, because he is not indeed Vicarius Dei, as he presumed him, and swore him to be.] i Lib. 2. ca. 36. 8. Why an oth of fidelity to the Pope binds no man.

And conformably to this, (k) that book whose title and scope is of the foundation of matter of State in France, and (as it pretends in all Christendome) when after it hath enraged Subjects against Tyrants, it comes to declare what a Tyrant is, exemplifies in the King of Spaine, and upon such reasons, as any Malignitie equall to that Author, may cast upon what Prince it will.

k Declaration & Protestation des Doctes de France. Anno 1605. 9. Who is a Tyrant in these mens opinions.

And lastly, who ever shall well compare (l) Beccariaes booke, with Bezaes, (if that other be Bezaes) though they differ Diametrally in many ny things, yet by their collision and beating together, arise abundantly sparkes of this pestilent Doctrine, That as Tranquillity was, so now Religion is, the reason why wee admit Kings, and why they are none, when they neglect Religion; upon these Doctrines, I say, it is inferred, (m) [That it is lawfull to wish the death of a Tyrant, or of a favourer of Heretiques, though he dye in mortall sinne.] To wish therefore, and to doe, are naturally the same fault; and yet, though it be (n) [a sinne to offer my selfe even to Martyrdome, only for wearinesse of life.] (o) [Or to wish death simply for Impaciencie, Anger, Shame, Povertie, or Misfortune;] yea to wish heaven meerely for mine owne happinesse; yet certainely (p) S. Paul had some allowable reasons, to desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ. And (q) Calvine by telling us upon what reason, and to what end he wished this, instructs us how we may wish the same. He sayes, Paul desired not death, for deaths sake, for that were against the sense of Nature, but he wished it, to be with Christ.

Beccar. cont. lib. De. jure Magistrat.

Now, (besides that, by his leave,) we desire many things which are against the sense of Nature, to grant that we may wish death to be in heaven, (though Peter Martyr before alledged, be of the same perswasion) is a larger scope, and somewhat more dangerous and slippery a graunt, then wee urge towards, because herein onely the interest and good of the party seeme m Carbo. Cas. Conc. Summa Summarum. Tom. 3. lib. 3. cap. 9.

n Sylvest. verb. Martyr.

o Navar. Manual. Ca. 15. Nu. 11.

p Phil. 1. 23. 10 How death may be wished by Calvine.

q In 2 Cor. 5. 1 Marlorate.

Supra.

to be considered; And yet (a) Emanuel Sâ extends it farther. [That wee may wish sickneſſe to one, for his correction; and death for the good of the State; yea to our Enemie which is like to doe us much harme for avoiding this our particular damage; and we may rejoyce at his death, even for that reſpect of our owne deliverie] All which will hold as well, if we be urged with like reaſons, to wiſh it to our ſelves.

q Eman. Sâ Aphor. Confeſſ. ver. Charitas.

11 How we may wish death to another for our owne advantage.

To conclude therefore this point, That it may become lawfull to wiſh our owne death; I will onely relate an Hiſtory which though it be but matter of fact (if it be ſo much) yet it is of ſuch a perſon, as his acts governe and perſwade, with very many, as farre as Rules. (ſ) In the life of Philip Nerius, who in our age inſtituted the laſt Religion approved and eſtabliſhed in the Church of Rome, we read, that he being entreated (as he was ordinarily in like deſperate caſes,) to come to one Paulus Maximus a youth of 14. who was then ready to expire his ſoule by ſickneſſe, before he could perfit his Sacrifice, and the office which hee had begunne, before the meſſage came to him, the young man dyed. When hee had been dead about halfe an houre, Nerius came, and after he had uſed ſome lowd exclamations, the youth revived againe, looked up, and talked in ſecret with Nerius a quarter of an houre The diſcourſe ended, Nerius gave him his choiſe, whether he would live, or dye; and when the boy wiſhed death, 12 Ph. Nerius conſented to the death of one who wiſhed his own death.

ſ Vita Phil. Ner. fol. 284.

death, he gave him leave to dy againe. Now, though it were a greater miracle, then any in that book; if any man should beleeve all that are in it, (for in it are attributed to Nerius, stranger things then the (t) book of Conformities imagined in Saint Francis (for I beleeve that Authuor purposed onely like Xenophon or Plato, or Sir Thomas Moore, to ideate and forme, then to write a credible History, though (u) Sedulius have defended it, with so much earnestnesse of late; yet thus much is established out of this, whether Fable or History, that their opinion, who authorised this book, is, that it was lawfull in Maximus to wish his own death, since a man of so much sanctity as Nerius, did approve and second, and accomplish that opinion of his.

t Liber Conformi. Fran. & Christi.

u Sedulius Minor. adverſ. Alcor. Francis.

SECT. V.

The next species of Homicide in Tolets division, is Permission; which when it is toward our selves, is by the Schoole-men usually called Desertion, or Derelict̃on, and Mors negativa.

1 Of Tolets 3. species. by permission which is Mors Negativa.

Of which I perceive not any kinde to be more obnoxious, or indefensible then that which is so common with our Delinquents, to stand mute at the Barre. And though Civill Lawes which are often enforced to chuse of two evills, the least, that is to say, the least hurtfull to civility and society, and must admit sometimes particular mischiefe, rather then a generall inconvenience, nience, may excuſe this; yet, ſince out of the law of Conſcience, which can in no caſe come to be ſo entangled and perplexed, that it can be forced to chuſe any thing naturally evill, no man hath as yet, to my knowledge, impugned this cuſtome of ours, it ſeemes to me, that aſwell our Church as our State, juſtifies this Deſertion of our ſelves: and this, for ſo low and worldly a reſpect, as the ſaving of our temporall eſtate, or eſcaping the ignominy of another death.

2 Of standing mute at the Barre.

3 Three rules from Sotus, Navar, and Mald. to guide us in theſe Deſertions of our ſelves.

But that we may the better diſcerne the limits, how farre theſe Omiſſions, and Deſertions, and Expoſings of our ſelves, are allowed us; firſt I muſt interpret one (a) rule, [That charity begins with it ſelfe, to bee underſtood onely in ſpirituall things.] For I may not doe a ſinne, to ſave (in the language of Schoole-men) the goods, or honour, or life, of the Pope; but for temporall things I muſt prefer others before my ſelfe, if a publique profit recompence my private Domage. (b) I muſt alſo lay down another rule, [That as for my ſelfe, So for my neighbour whom I am bound to love as my ſelfe,] I may expoſe goods, to ſategard honour, and honour, for life, and life for ſpirituall profit. And to theſe I muſt joyn a third rule, (c) [That no man is at any time enforced to exerciſe his priviledge.] [For the written Law every man is bound to know, but (d) priviledges and exemptions from that Law, he may be excuſably ignorant of and in ſuch ignorance tranſgreſſe them.] Hereupon it is ſately infer'd, that though every man have naturally a Soto. de teg. ſæret. membr. 1. q. 3.

b Nava. Manual.

c Sum. Maldo. q. 14. ar. 6.

d Acacius de privilegiis l. 1. cap. 9.

rally this priviledge, to resist force with force, and be authorised by that, to lay violent hands, even upon the Popes life, as (e) Gerson exemplifies, or upon the Emperours, as (f) Acacius, when either of them exceeds the limits of their Magistracy, (for then the party becomes the Deputy, and Lieutenant to Nature, which is a common and equall Soveraigne to them all.)

e Gerson.
f Acacius de privile. l. 1. c. 8.

Yet I may wayve this benefit, if I will, and even by a theefe, I may suffer my selfe to be killed, rather then kill him in that mortall sinne. (g) Which our Countryman Sayr, holds as the common opinion from Sotus, Navar, Cajetan, and many others. And none, that I have seen excepts to it, in any other person then a Souldier, or such as hath the lives and dignities of others so enwrapped in theirs, as they cannot give away themselves, but by betraying others. And this Desertion seems to bee of Naturall reason, because it is to be found in all lawes; for even in the (h) Alcorum we read [Vindicans non est reus, Patiens tamen optime facit.]

4 I may suffer a thiefe to kill me.

g Sayr Thesau. Cas. Conf. l. 7. cap. 9. nu. 17.

h Alcor. Azoar. 52.

And our law, which if a man kill another in his own necessary defence, punishes him with losse of goods, and delivers him from death, not by acquitall, but by way of pardon, seemes to me, to pronounce plainly, that it is not lawfull to defend my life by killing another; which is farther, then any of the others went. And when I compare our two lawes, That if I defend my selfe I am punished, and the other before mentioned,

5 Of se defendendo in our law.

mentioned, That if I kill my ſelfe I am puniſhed in the ſame manner, and meaſure; they ſeeme to me, to be ſomewhat perplexed and captious.

6 I am not bound to eſcape from priſon if I can, nor to eate rather then ſtarve.

And as I may depart from my naturall priviledge of defending my ſelfe, ſo I may obtain from any extrinſique or acceſſory helpe, which is caſually, or by providence (if God reveale not his will therein) preſented unto me (i [for a man condemned to death, is not bound in conſcience to redeeme his life with money, though by the law of the place he might doe it.

i Eman. Sa. Aphor. Confeſ. ver. Charitas.

And though (k) Saint Thomas ſay, [That he which is condemned to dy, kills himſelfe, if he apprehend not, an opportunity to eſcape by flight when it is preſented, and likewiſe if he refuſe meate, when he is condemned to be famiſhed,] yet the (l) whole ſtreame is againſt him, Sotus, Navar, Cajetan, and Sayr. And Navar adds, that in theſe dayes (and yet now it is not ſo likely to be Symbolum Idolotricæ pravitatis) a man is bound rather to famiſh, then to eat meat offred to Idols.

k Aquin. 22. q. 69. ar. 4. ad 2.

l Sayr Theſau. Caſ. Conſ. l. 7. cap. 9.

7 For ends better then this life, we may neglect this.

And therefore they ſay, that Aquinas his opinion, That a man is bound to uſe his priviledge for ſafegard of his life, is onely true then, when he doth not wayve it, for ſome end better and worthier then our naturall life; of which ſort all ſpirituall advantages are. So that in ſuch caſes they all agree, we may abandon and forſake our ſelves.

8 I may give my life for another.

And we may ſtep farther yet in this Deſertion; for we may offer our ſelves for the good of our neighbour. For the temporall life cannot be be more precious then our ſoule; which, in rigour is murdered by every ſinne conſented unto. Yet (m) Chriſoſtome ſayes, [No praiſe is enough to give Sara for conſenting to ly, and to ſubmit herſelfe to Adultery for ſalvation of her husbands life] I know (n) Saint Auguſtine is earneſt againſt this.

But his earneſtneſſe is upon the matter of fact, for he denyes that either Abraham or Sara conſented to any ſinne; But when he (o) diſputes De jure, whether Sara by Abrahams conſent might expoſe her ſelfe, to ſave his life, and is much troubled with the example of one which was priſoner, for debt to the State, under Acindinus a Præfect, under Conſtantius, whoſe wife being ſolicited by a rich man, who would give ſo much as would diſcharge her husband, to poſſeſſe her own night, by her husbands conſent, earned his liberty in that manner; at laſt he leaves it indifferent for any man to think it lawfull or unlawfull in ſuch a neceſſity, though indeede his own opinion decline from it. (p) Bonaventure denies, that for the temporall good of another, I may offer willinlgy my life. But he grounds it upon the ſame reaſon that (q) Auguſtine doth; That we may not love another more then our ſelves, which in this caſe we ſeeme to doe.

But many of the Fathers, Hierome, Ambroſe, and Lactantius, and many of the Schoole, as Aquinas Fra. Victoria, Sotus, Bannes, and infinite are againſt m Chriſ. Hom. 32. in Genes.

n Aug. l. 22. adver. fauſtum. cap. 33.

9 Chriſoſtomes opinion of Sarahs ly, and Adultery. And St. Aug. of that wife who proſtituted her ſelfe to pay her huſbands debt.

o Ca. 27. & primo: De ſerm. Dom. in monte.

p Bonavent. 3. Diſt. 29. q. 3.

q Aug. de mendacio. c. 6.

10 That to give my life for another is not to prefer another, as Bonaventure, and Aug. ſay, but to prefer vertue before life.

againſt him: and anſwer Saint Auguſtine thus, That in that caſe, a man doth not prefer his friend before himſelfe, but he prefers an Act of vertue, and of friendſhip, as things of more ſpirituall Nature, before his own temporall life.

But that for the ſpirituall good of another, a man ſhould expoſe his own life, is an unreſiſted doctrine, and as (r) Sayr ſaies, [It is ſub præcepto,] So (ſ) a Curate is bound to baptize, and to anoint in the plague time. Yea, it is an act of Vertue, though not of neceſſity, (as in the Curates caſe) (t [To viſit a ſick man, in ſuch a time, though you bee a private man, and your end be not ſpirituall comfort.

And we may yet proceed farther, for wee may lawfully diſpoſſeſſe our ſelves of that, which was before afforded us, and without which we can have no hope to ſuſtaine our lives. (u) As in a perſecution, a private man, having food left ſufficient only to ſuſtaine one man, may give it to a publike perſon, and ſo periſh. And only Sotus denyes, that in a ſhipwrack, if after wee have both beene in equall danger, I catch and poſſeſſe my ſelfe of any thing to ſuſtaine me, I may give this to my Father, or to a Magiſtrate: againſt the ſtrength of Navar, Tolet, Fra. Victor. and many others.

The fartheſt, and uttermoſt degree of this Deſertion, is inordinate and indiſcreete voluntary faſting, of which Saint Hierome, (as it is (x) related r Sayr Theſau. Caſ. Conſ. l. 7. c. 9. nu. 17.

11 For ſpirituall good is without queſtion.

ſ Eman Sa. Aphor. Con. verbo Charit.

t Idem verbo Hq.

12 I may give another that without which I cannot live.

u Aquin. 22. q. 32. ar. 6.

Sotus.

13 I may over-faſt my ſelfe.

(x) related into the Canons) sayes, [That by such an immoderate innocence, and indiscreete singing of Psalmes, and Offices, a man looseth his dignity, and incurres the note of madnesse,] And upon this place (y) Navar sayes, That Saint Hierome pronounceth, an [Indiscreete fasting which shortens the life, if the party perceive that it worke that effect, though it be without intention to shorten his life, and that he doe it, to be the better able to satisfie God, yet it is a Selfe-Homicide.] And (z) hee adds in another place, speaking of the same purpose, [It makes no difference whether thou be long in killing thy selfe, or doe it at once]

And (a) so Cassianus sayes expressly, [That that Friar killed himselfe, which having vowed in his journey, to eat nothing except God gave him meat immediately, refused to eat, when theeves accustomed to kill passengers by that place, came and presented him bread.] And yet, though he saies he killed himselfe, he imputes nothing to him but Indiscretion. And therefore saith (b, one, [Our Saviour Christ exceeded not 40. dayes in his fast, Ne sui Homicida videretur.] And he interprets that word, (d Esuriit, [That then he perceived his body to languish and suffer detriment by fasting] For, if he had not hungred till then, his fasting had had no vertue. So that he gave over, when he found the state of his body impaired by fasting, yet pursuing and imitating the superstition of the Philosophers, who taught that (e) [Dum corpus augemus, mortaliores efficimur,] And that (e) [Per tenuitatem

x De Consecr. Dist. 5. Non Mediocriter

y Navar ex Dist. 5. de consc. This in Saint Hieroms opinion is Selfhomicide.

z Soto de tegsecret mem. 1. q. 3. ex Hieron a Cas. Collatione 2. c. 6. 15 Of the Friar whom Cassianus calls a Selfe-Homicide for refusing bread from a theefe, upon a vow. Of Christs fast.

b Bosquier Cove. 17.

c Idem Cove. 18. 16 Of Philosophers inordinate fasts.

d Porphir. de Abstin. Anti.

e Idem de occasionibus.

tem assimilamur Deo,] How much the writers in the Romane Church suffer, and obliquely adhort these inordinate Fasts, and other disciplines, appears by that which I cited out of Clarus Bonarscius before, and whereſoever they have occasion to speake thereof.

Supra.

And in no one thing more, then that they inculcate so often, [That it was the practise of the Devill, to appeare to Saint Francis, and cry out to him, that no man which kills himselfe with such maceration, could be saved,] which (f) Bonaventure relates in his life.

17. Of the devills threatning S. Francis for fasting.

f Cap. de Austeritate.

What soever hath beene done by others, they teach, we ought to exceede. And since (g) [The Monkes in Prester John his Dominions, fast strictly fifty dayes, and stand all that time to the chinne in water] Since they finde in (h) Abbas Vrsperg, a maid that fasted two year and a halfe after she had received the body of our blessed Saviour.

8 Examples of long fasts.

g Middendor. de Academiis fol. 298.

h Lilius Gyr. Dialog. 17.

And an Eremit 22. yeares, without receiving any thing, they say no fast can be too severe, which is undertaken to reduce our body to a tamenesse. Yea, (i) [though that be already perfectly effected, yet a man is bound to the fasts injoyned.] For (k) [Fasting, without charity, doth wash away sinne.] By this rigor of fasting they seeme sure, that our Saviour watched all those 40 dayes: because (l) [Qui dormit, prandet.] And as it is not likely that Moses slept in his 40 dayes conversation with God, so is it unlikely that Christ did lesse then he. And so Saint Francis is extoll'd 19 Reasons, effects, and obligations, to rigorous fasts.

i Sayr Thesaur. Cas. Cons. l. 3. cap. 7. n. 13.

k Azor. Mor. Inst. pa. 1. l. 7. cap. 35.

l Bosqui. Coue. 17.

by

by them, for obſerving three Lents every year, which (m) Saint Hierome ſo much deteſts in the Montaniſts. And though their ends were divers, yet this ſhewes, that to ſome ends, theſe enormous witherings of our bodies are allowable. Upon which reaſon (n) John Baptiſts auſterity is ſo much dignified; And (o) Saint Peters feeding upon Lupins; And (p) Saint Matthewes living without fleſh. And not onely the Emperour Iuſtinians choiſe, (q) [Who in an extreme ſickeneſſe in Lent, would take nothing but hearbs, and ſalt, and water,] but alſo the (r) Carthuſian Rule, by which though it appeare that fleſh would ſave the Patients life, hee may not eate it. And by the (ſ) Apoſtolicall conſtitutions, (which Turrianus extols ſo much, that by them he confutes much of the Reformed Churches doctrine) [A man muſt faſt to death, rather then receive any meat, from an Excommunicate perſon.] And in another Chapter, (t) [If any thing be in a caſe of extreame neceſsity accepted from ſuch a perſon, it may bee beſtowed in full, that ſo their Almes may be burnt, and conſumed to aſhes, but not in meate to nouriſh our ſelves withall.]

m Hier. Epiſt. ad Marcell.

n Mat. 3. 4.

o Greg. Naz. Oratio, de Cura pauperum.

p Clem. Alex. l. 2. Pædag. c 1.

q Procop. Gaz. l. 1. de ædificiis Iuſtiniani.

r Sayr. Theſau. Caſ. Conſ. l. 7. c. 9. N. 30.

ſ Clem. Apoſtol. Conſtit. l. 4. cap. 7.

t Ibid. cap. 9.

So, to determine this Section of Deſertion, ſince we may wayve our defence which Law gives, by putting our ſelves upon a Jurie; and which Nature gives, to repell force with force, ſince I may without flying, or eating when I have meanes, attend an Executioner, or Famine, ſince I may offer my life, even for anothers temporall rall good, ſince I muſt doe it for his Spirituall, ſince I may give another my board in a Shipwracke, and ſo drowne, ſince I may haſten my arrivall to heaven, by conſuming penances, it is a wayward and unnoble ſtubborneſſe in argument, to ſay ſtill, I muſt not kill my ſelfe, but I may let my ſelfe dye; ſince of Affirmations and Denyals, of Omiſſions and Committings, of Enjoying and Prohibitory Commands, ever the one implies and enwraps the other. And if the matter ſhall bee reſolved and governed only by an outward act, and ever by that; if I forbeare to ſwimme in a river and ſo periſh, becauſe there is no act I ſhall not be guilty, and I ſhall bee guilty if I diſcharge a Piſtoll upon my ſelfe, which I knew not to be charged, nor intended harme, becauſe there is an act.

20 Corollary of this Section of Deſertion.

u Mariana de Rege, l. 1. cap. 7.

Of which latter opinion (u) Mariana the Jeſuite ſeemes to be, as we ſhall have occaſion to note, in the next Member and ſpecies of Homicide, which is, Aſſiſtance.

SECT. VI.

1 Of another degree of Homicide, by Mutilation, which is not in Tolets Diviſion.

But before we come to that, we muſt, though it be not, nor naturally could be delivered in Tolets Diviſion; conſider another ſpecies of Homicide, which is Mutilation or Mayming.

For, though in Civill Courts, it be not ſubject to like penaltie, yet if it bee accompanied with the ſame Malignitie, it is in conſcience the

the same sinne, especially towards our selves; because it violates the same reason, which is, that none may usurpe upon the bodie over which he hath no Dominion.

Upon which reason, it is also unlawfull for us to deliver our selves into bondage; (which I mention here, because it ariseth from the same ground, and I am loath to afford it a particular Section. Yet (a) holy Paulinus, a Confessor, and Bishop of Nola, then whom I find no man celebrated with more fame of sanctitie and integrity, to redeeme a Widowes Sonne, delivered himselfe as a a slave to the Vandals, and was exported from Italy to Afrique; and this, as I thinke, when hee was necessary to that place, being then there Bishop; for that was but five yeares before his death.

2 Of delivering ones selfe into bondage.

a Baron. Martirol, Junii 2.

But to returne to Mutilation, (b) it is cleare by the Canons, that towards irregularity, it works as much, and amounts as farre, to have maymed, as to have killed.

b Tabula Paris. irregularit.

And (c) in a Councell at London, Anno 1075 one Canon forbids a Clergy man, to bee present at judgement of death, or of Mutilation. And amongst the (d) Apostles Canons this is one, [He that gelds himselfe cannot be a Clerke, because he is an Homiciae of himselfe, and an enemy to Gods creature. [(e) And to geld, is to maime in our Law.]

3 By divers Canons it is all one fault.

c Binius To.2. pa.2.fo.1280.

d Can. Apost. Can.21.

e Stanf. Plees del Coron.

So in the next Canon it is said, [(f) A Clerk which gelds himselfe must be deposed, Quia homicida f Canon.23.

cida sui.] (g) And a Lay-man must for that fault be excommunicated three yeares, quia vitæ suæ posuit insidias.] It was therefore esteemed equivalent to killing.

g Canon. 23.

And (h) Calvine, esteemed it so hainous, that he builds his Argument against Divorce upon this ground, [God made them one Body, and it is in no case lawfull, for a man to teare his owne body.] But if this be so lawfull as Divorces are lawfull, certainly this peremptorie sentence against it, must admit some modification.

h Calvin Mat. 19. 4. Marlorate.

4 Of Calvins argument against divorce, upon the ground of Mutilation.

Without doubt, besides the examples of holy men who have done it, to disable themselves from taking the burden of Priesthood, of which (i) Saint Marke the Evangelist was one, who to that end cut off his thombe. And besides, that as our Saviour said, (k) [Many should geld themselves for the Kingdome of heaven.] So (l) Athenagoras, 50 yeares after Christ, saies, [that many did practise it.] It is doubted by none, [But (m) that a man unjustly detained to a certaine execution, may cut off that limbe by which he is tyed, if he have no other way to escape; or being encompassed with doggs, he may cut off a hand, and cast it to them, to entertaine them while he escape.

5 The example of Saint Mark to escape Priesthood.

i Hier. Prolog. in Marcum.

k Mat. 19. 12.

l Orat. vero Anto. & commodo Philosophic.

m Sayr Thes. Cas. Consil. 7. cap. 9.

6 In what cases it is cleare that a man may mayme himselfe.

SECT. VII.

The last species of Homicide, on this side, the last act, is an actuall helping and concurrence to it. And every step and degree conducing purposely

1 Of Tolets fourth way, by actual helping poſely to that end, is as juſtly by Judges of Conſciences, called Homicide, as (a) Ardoinus recknoning up all poyſons, which have a naturall malignity and affection to deſtroy mans body, forbeares not a Flea, though it never kill, becauſe it endeavours it, and doth all the hurt it can; and he is diligent in aſſigning preſervatives and reſtoratives againſt it.

a Ardoinus de veneniſ.l.8.c.20 Ardonius reckons a Flea amongſt poyſons becauſe it would kill.

And (b) ſo to that Amalekite, which told David he helped Saul to dy, when hee found him too weake to pierce himſelfe, David pronounced judgement of death, for (ſaith hee) thine owne mouth hath confeſſed, That thou haſt kill'd the Lords Anointed.

b 2 Sam.1.16. 2 David condemned the Amalekite, who ſaid, he helped Saul to dye.

Certainely, (c) Mariana the Jeſuite, whom I named before) eſteemes this actuall concurrence to ones death, as heavy as the act it ſelfe; yea, as it ſeemes, though the party bee ignorant thereof. For, after hee concluded how an Hereticall King may be poiſoned, he is diligent in this preſcription, [That the King bee not conſtrained to take the poyſon himſelfe, but that ſome other may adminiſter it to him: And that therefore it be prepared and conveied in ſome other way then meate or drinke, becauſe elſe, ſaith he, either willingly or ignorantly he ſhall kill himſelfe.] So that hee provides, that that King who muſt dye under the ſinnes of Tyranny and Hereſie, muſt yet be defended from concurring to his owne death, though ignorantly, as though this were a greater ſinne.

c Mariana de Rege.l.1.c.7. 3 Marianaes opinion, that a King drinking poyſon, prepared and miniſtred by another, he being ignorant, is a Selfe-homicide.

Since

Since therefore this haſtning of our death by ſuch an act, is the ſame, as the intire Selfe-homicide, let us conſider how farre irreproved Cuſtome, and example, and Law doth either allow or command it.

For that it is allowable, it ſeemes to me ſome proofe [(d) That before any man accuſes him, a Malefactor may go and declare his fault to the Iudge.]

Though amongſt Italian relations, (e) that in Sanſovine concerning England have many marks and impreſſions of malice, yet of that cuſtome, which hee falſely ſayes to bee obſerved here, [That men condemned to be hanged are ever accompanied to their Executions by all their kinred, who then hang at their feet, to haſten their ende; And that when a Patient is abandoned by the Phyſicians, his neereſt kinſman ſtrangles him with a pillow.] Of this, I ſay, that Author had thus much ground, that ordinarily at Executions, men, out of a Charitie, as they thinke, doe ſo; and women which are deſperate of ſicke perſons recovery, uſe to take the pillow from under them, and ſo give them leave to dye ſooner. Have they any more the Dominion over theſe bodies, then the perſon himſelfe? Or if a man were able to doe theſe Offices to himſelfe, might he not doe it? Or might he not with a ſafe conſcience put ſo much waights in his pockets, as ſhould countervaile their ſtretchings. I ſpeake but comparatively; might not he doe it as well as they?

d Sotus de teg. Secret. Memb. 1. q. 1.

4 A Malefactor unaccuſed, may accuſe himſelfe.

e Sanſovin. de Gover.

5 Of Sanſovinus relation of our cuſtomes at Executions, and withdrawing the pillow in deſperate caſes.

For

For to my understanding such an act, either in Executioner or by-stander, is no way justifiable; for it is both an injury unto the party, whom a suddaine pardon might redeeme; and to the Justice, who hath appointed a painfull death to deterre others. (f) The breaking of legs in Crucified men, which was done to hasten death, was not allowed but upon Petition. And the Law might be much defrauded, if such violence might be used, where the breaking of the halter delivered the prisoner from death, as in some places it doth, and (g) good opinions concurre, that it is to doe ever without doubt whatsoever is for ease, or escaping painfull passage out of this life; in such cases, a man may more allowably doe by his owne act, then a stranger may, For Law of Nature enclines and excuseth him, but they are by many Laws forbidden to hasten his death; for they are no otherwayes interessed in it, then as parts of the whole body of the State, and so it concerneth them that Iustice be executed. Yet wee see, this, and the other of withdrawing the pillowes, is ordinarily done, and esteemed a pious office. The Athenian Executions were ever by the hand of the offender, injuryments of poyson.

And in (h) that law of Purgation assigned by God, to ease a man on whom the spirit of Iealousie was come, the Woman was to take the water of curses and bitternesse, which should make her infamous, and her belly swell, and her

6 Of breaking leggs of men at executions: And of breaking the halter

f Iohn 19.

g Luod. de penna l. 1. c. de defer. et occult. Iohan. de Ant. Soliloq. 5. Optin. in D. leg. Imperium.

h Numb. 5.

7 Of the purgation assigned by Moses in cases of jealousie.

her thighs to rot. And those formes of purgation, which were called Vulgares, lasted long, even in the Church; for there is nothing extant against them, till (i) Stephen the fifth anno 885. And not only (k) Charles the great, in whom the Church did acknowledge pietie enough, induced one forme more severe than the the rest, which was to walke upon nine burning Harrows.

But (l) Britius a Bishop being but calumniated by the people extrajudicially, to have gotten his laundresse with child, after his innocency had prevailed so farre with God, that the childe of thirty dayes age, being adjurd in the name of Christ, had acquitted him did not admit, but chose and extort a forme of purgation, to carry burning coales, upon his head. with us both the species of Ordalium lasted evidently till King Iohns time.

And although into that of boyling water men were forced to goe, yet that was but for the meaner sort; but to carry the 3*l.* weight of red hot iron, which was for the purgation of the persons of better quality, was an act as all the former were, in which a man must of necessitie doe something actually himself, and be the executioner of his owne judgement. Which, as long as these formes of purgation, and the other by battaile, were lawfull, was lawfull also to be done.

And in S. Dorotheus, who every where professes

8 Of formes of Purgation, called vulgares i 2. q. 5. Confutiisti.

k Tholos. Synt. l. 48. c, 15. n. 7.

l Greg. Turo. Hist Fran. l. 2 c1.

9 Charlemane brought in a new purgation And Britius a B. extorted another beeing acquitted before.

m Lambert de legibus priscis Anglorum.

10 With us both kinds of Ordalium, by water, and fire lasted untill K. Iohns time.

11 In all these and in Battel, the party himself assisted to his paine.

feſſes a love to that obdience which himſelfe calleh indiſcreet, you ſhall reade many praiſes given to men, who did not only forſake themſelves but actually further their deſtruction, though not effectually, which maketh no difference, if it bee in dangers which men uſually eſcape not.

12 Three examples of Actuall Helpers to their owne Deſtruction in S. Doroth.

(n) He praiſeth one fryar, who being by his Abbat commanded to returne that night, the waters being riſen, committedhimſelfe unto a raging torrent, in ſuch an obedience.

n B. Dorotheus doctrinâ 1. de renunciatione.

And another, who being bid by his Abbat to goe into the Towne, where he doubted he ſhould fall into ſome temptation, by ſome ſpectacle, went, but with this Proteſtation, that that he hoped not in the protection of God, but in him who ſent him. But the moſt naturall to our preſent purpoſe is this, (o) that a holy old man ſeing his ſervant miſtake poyſon for hony, and put it into his broth, eate it nevertheleſſe without chiding: and when the ſervant perceived it, and exclaimed, Sir I have killed you, anſwered, it all one, for if God would have had me eat hony, he would have directed thy hand to hony. Of the holineſſe of Ioſeph of Arimathæa we have teſtimony enough, (p) who being ſent by the Apoſtles to preach the Goſpel, amongſt other perſecutions was conſtraynd to drink poyſon: in which there muſt of neceſſity be ſuch an act, as we diſpute of now. How much did (q) S. And. contibute

o Idem doct. 7. de accuſat ione ſui ipſius.

p Supplemen. Chronic. 40. Chr. 33.

13 Of Ioſeph of Arimathæa his drinking poyſon.

q Navar. manual. cap. 21. n. 25.

to his own Crucifying? How much Saint Laurence to his broyling, when he called to the Tyrant, This side is enough, turne the other, and then eate?] [(r) Magni quod faciunt, præcipiunt,] saith Quintilian. And these acts of men, otherwise esteemed holy, may ever be good warrants and examples to us, when the cause is not præjudged by any greater authority, as Scripture, or Councells, nor that very act accused by any Authour.

14 Of Saint Andrew and Saint Lawr.

r Controv. 3.

But to stay no longer upon examples, among Casuists, I observe the greater number to deny, that it is lawfull for a man condemned, to doe the last and immediate act conducing to death, as the drinking of poyson; But the acts somwhat more removed, they agree he may doe.

15. Casuists not clear whether a condemned man may doe the last act to his death.

And even this act of drinking poyson, (s) Fr: a Vict: defends to be lawful. So that among them it is not cleare, but that a man may do it. Yea, in very many cases, it is not only lawfull to doe as much, without any condemnation, but it is necessary, and by their rules, sinfull to omit it. For Curates must goe to infected houses, to minister the Sacraments. And (t) if a Priest enter a wood, where three wait to kill him, and one of them repenting that purpose meet him, and by way of confession sub sigillo, discover the fault, the Priest is bound to goe forward to a certain death into the wood, rather then by returning to let the others know, that he knew it by confession. Soe peremptory is their Doctrine, how ever their practise [Relect. de Homi. n. 30. in resp. ad 8.

16. But unto Curates and Priests sometimes it is sub præcepto, even without condemnation.

t Sayr Sum. Sacram. pœnit. cap. 32.

practise be, against revealing Confessions. And though perchance this seem a wanton case, framd on impossibl concurrences, as (u Soto esteems of it, yet the reason may have use; That though self preservation be Divine Naturall Law and the seale of Confession but Divine Positive Law, yet because circumstances are not alike, in this a publique good shall be preferred before his private life. So that we may doe some Acts our selves which conduceth probably, yea certainly, as far as humane knowledge can reach, to our destruction: which is the neerest step to the last act of doing it intirely our selves.

u De teg. Sec. memb. 3. q. 4.

SECT. VIII.

Of which last act, as we spoke whilst we considered the Law of Nature, and must againe when wee come to understand those places of Scripture, which seeme to ayme towards it, so before we conclude this part, of the Law of Reason, we may fitly present such deductions, comparisons, and consequences, as may justly seeme in reason, to annihilate or diminish this fault. Of which because most will be grounded, either upon the conscience of the Doer, or upon the Churches opinion of the fact when it is done, we will only consider how far an erring Conscience may justifie any act, and then produce som examples of persons guilty of this, and yet canonized by the Church, by admission into

1 Of Toletus last Species of Homicide which is the act it self.

2 How farre an erring conscience may justifie.

into the martyrologe, and assigning to them their feasts, and offices, and Vigills, and like religious Celebrations. Therefore to make no use of (a) Pythagoras example, who rather then he would offend his philosophical conscience, and either tread on the beanes himself, or suffer his schollars to speake before their time, delivered up himselfe, and forty of his schollars to his enemies sword.

a Diogenes Laertius l. 8.

3 Pythagoras conscience.

And to avoyd the ambages and multiforme entanglinges of Schoolemen herein, wee will followt hat which is delivered for the the common opinion; which is (b) that not onely a conscience that erreth justly, probably, and bonâ fide, that is after all morrall industry and diligence hath beene used, (yet I meane not exquisite diligence, but such as is proportionable to the person and his quality, and to the knowledge which that man is bound to have of that thing at that time) is bound to doe according to that misinformation and the misperswasion so contracted, but also if it erre negligently or otherwise vitiously, and malâ fide, as long as that errour remaines and resides in it, a man is bound not to doe against his conscience. In the first case, if one in his conscience thinks that he ought to ly to save an innocent, or that he ought to steal to save a famished man, he is a Homicide if he ly not or steal not. And in the second case, though he be not bound to any act, yet it is lawfull to him then, to omit any thing necessary otherwaies.

b Azor. Instit. p. 1. l. 2. c. 8.

And

And this obligation which our conscience casts upon us, is of stronger hold and of straighter band, then the præcept of any Superiour, whether Law or person, and is so much juris naturalis, as it cannot be infringed nor altered beneficio divinæ indulgentiæ, to use their owne words. Which doctrine, as it is every where to be gathered amongst the Casuists, so is it well collected and amassd, and argued, and confirmd, especially by Azorius. If then a man after convenient and requisit diligence, despoyled of all humane affections, and self-interest, and [sancto bonæ impatientiæ igne exardens] as Paulinus sayth, do in conscience beleve that he is invited by the spirit of God, to do such an act as Ionas, Abraham, and perchance Samson was, who can by these rules condemn this to be sin? and therefore I doubt there was some hast and præcipitation in (c) Cassianus his judgment, though otherwise a just estemer & valuer of works of devotion and obedience, who pronounceth that apparition of an angel to Hero an Eremite, after 50. years so intense and earnest attending of Gods Service, and religious negligence of himself, that he would scarse intermit Easter day from his strict fasting, and being now (d) Victoriarum conscientiâ plenus (as the Panegyrique saies) was an illusion of the Devil to make him destroy himself, Yet Hero being drawne out of the well into which he had cast himself, and living three dayes after, persisted in a devout acknowledgment

Epist. 3. Seve. l. 1.

c Cassian. Col. 2. c. 5. 4 Of the apparition unto Hero an Eremite, by which he killed himself out of Cassianus.

d Nazarius Constantio.

ledgement that it was the Spirit of God, which sollicited him to that, and dyed in so constant an assurance and alacrity, that Paphnutius the Abbat, though at first in some suspence, did not number him inter Biathanatos, which were persons reputed vitiously to have killd themselves.

5 The Devill sometimes sollicites to good.

Nor may it necessarily be concluded, that this act was therefore evill, if it appeared to be from the Devill. For (e) Wierus tells us of a maid whom the Devill perswaded to goe such a Pilgrimage, and at such an Altar to heare a Masse, for recovery of her health.

e Wier l. 5. c. 1.

Certainly if as (f) Vasquez hold, [it be not Idolatry to worship the Devill in an Apparition which I thinke to be God] it can be noe offence to beleeve him, after I have used all meanes to discerne and to distinguish: For not only those Rules which are delivered ordinarily to know him by are apparently false, which are a difference in his hands or feet, or some notable deformity by hornes, or a tayle, of which (g) Binsfeldius seems confident of the first, and (h) Menghi of the second. But that Rule that God always infuseth or commands good things, if it be understood of that which is good, in the common and naturall course is not always safe, for it held not in Abraham, nor the Israelites case. Therefore though Vasquez his first excuse That such a worship is not idolatry, because by reason of our immediate relation to God, wee never arrest nor stop upon the Devill by the way, will doe f Vasq. de adorat. l. 3. disp. 1. cap. 5.

6 By Vasquez it is not Idolatry to worship God in the Devill.

7 Rules to distinguish the spirits by marks are false

g Binsfeld. de confes sagarum f. 67.

h Menghi fustis Daemonum, cap. 8.

doe no good in our case of beleeving, yet his other will, which he hath in the same place, That there may be an invincible ignorance, and that in that any exterior act whatsoever, proceeding from a sincere and pure intention of the mind, is an act of true Religion. For safelier then the (i) Panegyrick could say to Constantine, [Suaque cuique Prudentia Deus est] may we say of every mans conscience thus rectified. If therefore they will still turn in their circle, and say, God concurs to no evill, we say nothing is so evill, but that it becomes good, if God command it; and that this is not so naturally evill, that it requires a speciall commission from God; but as it becomes good, if he commands it, so it becomes indifferent, if he remove the reasons with which the precept against it was conditioned. If they returne to S. Augustins two reasons against Donatus, whereof the first was, [we have authority to save thy body against thy will,] And the second, [None of the faithfull ever did this act] we are thereby hastned to the other consideration, how they which have done it, have been esteemed of by the Catholique Church.

But to speake a little in passing of Saint Augustines second reason, (for the first hath very little force, since though it may be lawfull to preserve a man willing to die, yet it is not alwaies of merit, nor obligatory; And therefore (k) Ignatius doth so earnestly dehort the Romans from endeavouring to succour him. And (l) Corona Civica

9. As in adoration, so in this case, invincible ignorance may excuse.

i Inc. Constan

Supra.

10. Of Saint Aug. his first reason to Donatus, that we may save one against his will.

k Ignatius ep: ad Romanos.

l Ant. August. Episc. Tarrac: de leg. Roman. cap. 44.

Civica which was given to any which had rescued a Citizen in the warres, was not given though he produced witnesses of the fact, except the person so rescued confessed that he received a benefit thereby;) why doth S. Augustine referre Donatus in that second reason, to examples. For if Donatus had produced any (as out of credible and authentique History he might very many, and out of Scriptures Canonick in (m S^t. Augustines opinion, he might have alledged the example Eleazar, and of Rasis,) Saint Augustine was ever provided for this retrait, That it was a speciall inspiration, and not to be drawn into consequence or imitation.

Had it been a good Argument in Rome for 500. yeeres, that Divorce was not lawfull, because (n) no example was of it? Or almost for 2000. That a woman might not sue it against her Husband, because (o) till Herods daughter there was no example of it? But now when the Church hath thus long persevered, in not only justifying but solemnizing many examples hereof, are not Saint Augustines Disciples guilty of the same pertinacy which is imputed to Aristotles followers, (p) who defending the Heavens to be inalterable, because in so many ages nothing had been observed to have been altered, his Schollers stubbornly maintain his Proposition still, though by many experiences of new Stars, the reason which moved Aristotle seems now to be utterly defeated?

11. Of his second of examples: and of his escape if Donatus had produced examples.

m De civitate Dei l. 18. cap. 38. et lib. 2. cont. Gaudent. cap. 23.

12 Divorce in Rome, and in Jurie long without example.

n A. Gellius l. 4. cap. 3.

o Serarius de Rabbin. et Herodibus cap. 17. 13. S. August. schollers in this point of examples, as stubborne as Aristotles, for the heavens inalterablnes, though the reason of both be ceased.

p Kepplerus de Stella Serpent. cap. 23.

Thus

Thus much being ſpoken by the way of Saint Auguſtine, and having purpoſely ſepos'd the examples recorded in the Scriptures, for our third part, we will conſider ſome Examples regiſtred in the Eccleſiaſtick Hiſtory.

The Church whoſe dignity and conſtancy it becomes well, that that Rule of her owne Law, be ever juſtly ſaid of her ſelf, (q) [Quod ſemel placuit amplius diſplicere non poteſt] where new reaſons do not interpoſe, (r) celebrates upon the 9. of February the Birth, (that is the death, of the Virgin and Martyr Appollonia; who, after the perſecutors had beat out her teeth, and vexed her with many other tortures, when ſhe was preſented to the fire, being inflamed with a more burning fire of the Holy Ghoſt, broke from the Officers hands, and leapt into the fire.

For this act of hers many Advocates riſe up for her, and ſay, that either the Hiſtory is not certain, (yet the Authors are Beda, Uſuardus, Ado, and (as Barronius ſayes Latinorum cæteri) Or elſe, (ſ) ſays Sayr, you muſt anſwer that ſhe was brought very neer the fire, and as good as thrown in: Or elſe that ſhe was provoked to it by divine inſpiration. But, but that another divine inſpiration, which is true Charity, moved the beholders then to beleeve, and the Church ever ſince to acknowledge, that ſhe did therein a Noble and Chriſtian act, to the ſpeciall glory of God, this act of hers, as well as any other, might have been calumniated to have been done, out of weaq Sextus Reg. Iur: quod ſemel.

r Baron. Martyrolog.

14. Of the Martyr Apollonia.

15 Of anſwers in her excuſe.

ſ Sayr. Theſaur. Caſ. Conſ. l. 9. c. 7. num. 11.

rineſſe of life, or fear of relapſe, or haſt to Heaven, or ambition of Martyrdome.

The memory of (t) Pelagia, as of a virgin and Martyr, is celebrated the ninth of June. And though the Hiſtory of this woman ſuffer ſome perplexity, and giue occaſion of doubting the truth thereof, (for Ambroſe ſays, That ſhe and her Mother drownd themſelves; and Chryſoſtome that they flung themſelves downe from a houſe top. And Baronius ſaw this knot to be ſo hard to unentangle, that he ſays, [Quid ad hæc dicamus, non habemus]) yet the Church, as I ſaid, celebrates the Act, as though it were glad to take any occaſion, of approving ſuch a courage in ſuch a cauſe, which was but preſervation of Chaſtity. [(u) Their Martyrdome ſaith Saint Auguſtine was ever in the Catholique Church frequented Veneratione Celeberrima.]

And (x) Saint Ambroſe, when his ſiſter Marcellina, conſulted him directly upon the point, what might be thought of them who kill themſelves in ſuch caſes, (and then it is agreed by all that the opinions of the Fathers are eſpecially to be valued, when they ſpeake of a matter, not incidently or caſually, but directly and deliberately) anſwers thus, [We have an example of ſuch a Martyrdome in Pelagia] And then he preſents her in this religious meditation, [Let us die, if we may have leave, or if we be denied leave, yet let us die. God cannot be offended with this, when we uſe it but for a remedy;] and our faith takes away all offence.

Here

t Baron. Mart. 16. Of the Marty. Pelagia.

17. Though her Hiſtory be very uncertain the Church ſeems glad of occaſion to celebrate ſo noble a fact.

18. Auguſtins teſtimonie of her.

u Auguſt. de Civitate Dei l. 1. cap. 26.

x De Virg. l. 3. 19 Ambroſe meditation upon her.

Here is no difficulty: for who is willing to dye, & cannot, since there are so many waies to death? I will not trust my hand least it strike not home: nor my breast, least it withdraw it selfe: I will leave no escape to my flesh, for we can dye with our own weapons, and without the benefit of an Executioner.

And then having drest her selfe as a Bride, and going to the water, Here, sayes she, let us be baptized; this is the Baptisme where sinnes are forgiven, and where a kingdome is purchased: and this is the baptisme after which none sinnes. This water regenerates; this makes us virgines, this opens heaven, defends the feeble, delivers from death, and makes us Martyrs. Onely we pray to God, that this water scatter us not, but reserve us to one funerall. Then entred they as in a dance, hand in hand, where the torrent was deepest, and most violent. And thus dyed, (as their mother upon the bank called them) [These Prelates of virginitie, Captaines of Chastitie, and companions in Martyrdome.]

29. Eusebius his Oration imagind in the person of her mother.

And before Ambrose, we finde (y) Eusebius to have been of the same perswasion, who thus produces the Mother encouraging them; [You know how I have brought you up in the feare of God; and shall your nakednesse, which the publicke ayre hath not had leave to see, now be prostituted in the Stewes? Have not so little faith in God, as to feare death, Despise not Chastity so much, as to live with shame; but with a pure and chaste death condemne this world.

y Eusebius Eccles. Histor: l. 8. cap. 4.

And so, deluding their Keepers, as though they withdrew for naturall necessities, they drowned themselves.] All Authors of that time are so profuse in the praise of this fact, that it is just to say thereof, as (z) Pliny layes of Nervaes adopting Trajane, [It was impossible it should have pleased all when it was done, except it had pleased all before it was done.]

z Plin. paneg. Trajan.

For no Author, that I have lighted upon, diminished the glory of these and such other, untill Saint Augustine out of his most zealous and startling tenderness of conscience, began to seeke out some waies, how these Selfe-homicides might be justified, because he doubted that this act naturally was not exempt from taxation. And yet ever hee brings himselfe to such perplexitie, as either he must defend it, and call in question, the authority of a generall consonance of all times and Authors, or retire to that poore and improbable defence, that it was done by Divine instinct. Which can very hardly be admitted in this case, where not their Religion but onely their Chastitie was solicited and attempted.

21. S. August. first of any doubted their fact, and did seeke shifts to defend it which it needed not.

Nor can Saint Ambrose, or Eusebius be drawn to that opinion of especiall Divine instinct, because speaking ex animo, though in the mothers person, they incite them to it with reasons from Morrall vertues.

22. S. August. example hath drawne Pedraca to the same shift, of special divine instinct in a like case.

Yet Saint Augustines example, (as it prevailes very much, and very justly for the most part) hath hath drawne many others since to the like interpretation of the like acts. For when the kingdome of Naples came to bee devided betweene Ferdinand the fifth, and Lewis the twelfth, the French Army being admitted into Capua, upon condition to do no violence, amongst many outrages, a virgin not able to escap the fury of a licentious Souldier, offered for ransome to lead him to treasure: and so tooke advantage of a place in the wall, to fling her selfe into the River. [Which act, (a) sayes Pedraça, we must beleeve to be done by Divine inspiration, because God loves chastity now as well as ever he did.] Which escape every side may finde easie, if being pressed with reason they may say, as Peter Martyr doth of the Egyptian Midwives, and of Rahab, and such, (b) [If they did lye, they did it, impulsu Dei.]

a Pedraca Cas. de consc. 5. præc. Hispanica Editio.
23. So sayes P. Martyr of the Midwiues and of Rahabs lye.
b In Jud 3.

But as our custome hitherto hath been, let us depart from Examples to Rules; though concurrence of Examples, and either an expresse or interpretative approbation of them, much more such a dignifying of them, as this, of the whole Church, and of Catholike Authors approved by that Church, bee equivalent to a Rule. And to ease the Reader, and to continue my first resolution of not descending into many particulars, I will onely present one Rule, but so pregnant, that from it many may be derived; by which, not onely a man may, but must doe the whole and intire action of killing himselfe; which is, to preserve the seale of Confession. For

24. To preserue the seale of confession a man may be bound to kill himselfe.

For though (c) the Rule in generall bee, [That if a Spider fall into the Chalice, the Wine may be changed, because, Nihil abominabile debet sumi occasione hujus Sacramenti.] And so (d) it may, if the Priest after Consecration come to the knowledge that the Wine is poysoned, [Ne calix vitæ vertatur in mortem;] Yet (e) if hee know this by Confession, from his assistant, or any other, and cannot by any diversion, nor disguise, escape the discovering, that this was confessed to him, without drinking it, if it bee poyson, he must drinke it.

But because men of more abundant reading, active discourse, and conclusive judgement, will easily provide themselves of more Reasons and Examples, to this purpose; it shall satisfie me, to have awakened them thus much, and shewed them a marke to direct their Meditations upon. And so I may proceed to the third Part, which is of the Law of God.

c Io: de Lap. Cas. Missales c. 6: art. 5.
d Ibid.
e Sotus de teg. secret. memb: 3. q: 4.

The Third Part.

OF THE LAW OF GOD.

Diſtinction I.

SECT. 1.

THat light which iſſues from the Moone, doth beſt repreſent and expreſſe that which in our ſelves we call the light of Nature; for as that in the Moone is permanent and ever there, and yet it is unequall, various, pale, and languiſhing, So is our light of Nature changeable. For being at the firſt kindling at full, it wayned preſently, and by dedeparting further and further from God, declined by generall ſinne, to almoſt a totall Eclipſe: till God comming neerer to us, firſt by the Law, and then by Grace, enlightned and repayred it againe, conveniently to his ends, for further exerciſe of his Mercy and Juſtice. And then thoſe Artific all Lights, which our ſelves make for our uſe and ſervice here, as Fires, Tapers and such resemble the light of Reason, as wee have in our Second part accepted that Word. For though the light of these Fires and Tapers be not so naturall, as the Moone, yet because they are more domestique, and obedient to us, wee distinguish particular objects better by them, then by the Moone; So by the Arguments, and Deductions, and Conclusions, which our selves beget and produce, as being more serviceable and under us, because they are our creatures; particular cases are made more cleare and evident to us; for these we can be bold withall, and put them to any office, and examine, and prove their truth, or likelihood, and make them answere as long as wee will aske; whereas the light of Nature, with a solemne and supercilious Majestie, will speake but once, and give no Reason, nor endure Examination.

1 An induction to the handlinge of theſe places of ſcripture.

But because of these two kindes of light, the first is to weake, and the other false, (for onely colour is the object of sight, and we not trust candlelight to discerne Colours) we have therefore the Sunne, which is the Fountaine and Treasure of all created light, for an Embleme of that third best light of our understanding, which is the Word of God. (a) Mandatum lucerna, & Lex lux,] sayes Solomon. But yet (b) as weake credulous men, thinke sometimes they see two or three Sunnes, when they see none but Meteors, or other apparance; so are many transported with like facilitie or dazeling, that for some

a Prov. 6.
b Plin: l. 2: cap 31.

ſome opinions which they maintaine, they think they have the light and authority of Scripture, when, God knowes, truth, which is the light of Scriptures, is Divine truely under them, and removed in the fartheſt diſtance that can bee. If any ſmall place of Scripture, mis appeare to them to bee of uſe for juſtifying any opinion of theirs; then (as the Word of God hath that precious nature of gold, that a little quantity thereof, by reaſon of a faithfull tenacity and ductileneſſe, will be brought to cover 10000. times as much of any other Mettall,) they extend it ſo farre, and labour, and beat it, to ſuch a thinneſſe, as it is ſcarce any longer the Word of God, only to give their other reaſons a little tincture and colour of gold, though they have loſt all the waight and eſtimation

But ſince the Scripture it ſelf teaches,(c)[That no Prophecie in the Scripture, is of private interpretation,] the whole Church may not be bound and concluded by the fancie of one, or of a few, who being content to enſlumber themſelves in an opinion, and lazy prejudice, dreame arguments to eſtabliſh, and authorize that.

c 2. Pet. 1: 20.

A (d) profeſſed interpreter of Dreames, tells us, [That no Dreame of a private man may be interpreted to ſignifie a publike buſineſſe.] This I ſay, becauſe of thoſe places of Scriptures, which are aledged for the Doctrin which we now examine, ſcarce any one, (except the Precept, Thou ſhalt not kill) is offered by any two Authors. But to d Artemidorus de ſomn. Interp. l. 1. cap. 2.

one, one place, to another, another seemes directly to governe in the point, and to me, (to allow Truth her naturall and comely boldnesse) no place, but that seemes to looke towards it.

2. Why I forbeare to name them who cite these places of Scripture.

And therefore in going over all those sentences, which I have gathered from many Authors, and presenting convenient answers and interpretations thereof, I will forbeare the names of those Authors, who produce them so impertinently, lest I should seeme to discover their nakednesse, or insimulat them even of prevarication.

3. If any oppose an answer what I intreat of him.

If any Divine shall thinke the cause, or persons injured herein, and esteeme me so much worth the reducing to the other opinion, as to apply an answer hereunto, with the same Charitie which provoked me, and which, I thanke God hath accompanied me from the beginning, I beseech him, to take thus much advantage from me and my instruction, that he will doe it without bitternesse. He shall see the way the better, and shew it the better, and saile through it the better, if he raise no stormes.

e Matt. 1. 17.

4. Why Clergy men may fish, or hunt but not with doggs.

f Ex Dist. 86. Esau.

Such men, (e) as they are [Fishers of men,] so may they also hunt us into their nets, for our good. But there is perchance, some mystique interpretation belonging to that (f) Canon which allowes Clergy men to hunt; for they may doe it by Nets and Snares, but not by Dogges; for clamour and bitings are forbidden them.

And

And I have been ſorry to ſee, that even Beza himſelfe, writing againſt an Adverſary, and a cauſe equally and extreamely obnoxious, onely by allowing too much fuell to his zeale, enraged againſt the man, and neglecting, or but preſcribing in the cauſe, hath with leſſe thoroughneſſe and ſatisfaction, then either became his learning and watchfulneſſe, or anſwered his uſe and cuſtome, given an anſwer to Ochius booke of Polygamy.

5. Of Beza's anſwer to Ochius Polygamy.

Diſtinction II.

SECT. I.

IN all the Iudiciall, in all the Ceremoniall Law delivered by Moſes, who was the moſt particular in his Lawes of any other, there is no abomination, no mention of this Selfe-Homicide. He teacheth what we ſhall, and ſhall not, eate, and weare, and ſpeake, and yet nothing againſt this.

1. No place offered out of Iudiciall nor Ceremoniall law.

SECT. II.

But the firſt place that I find offered againſt it is, in Geneſis. [I will require your bloud wherein your lives are, at the hand of every beaſt will I re-

Of the place in Gen. 9. 5.

quire it ; and at the hand of man, even at the hand of a mans brother will I require the life of man ; who ſo ſheddeth mans bloud, by man ſhall his bloud be ſhed.]

1. We are not bound to accept the interpretations of the Rabbins.

And this place a very learned man of the Reformed Church, ſayes, the Iewes underſtand of Selfe-homicide. But ſhall wee put our ſelves under the Iewes yoake, (a) [That if we finde in the Rabbins, things contrary to Nature, wee muſt dare to accuſe nothing but our owne weakeneſſe, becauſe their word is Gods Word, and if they contradict one another, yet both are from God.] a Buxdorfius Synag. Iudaica ex Rabbi Iſaac cap: 1. fol. 62.

b Lyra in hunc locum

(b) Lyra who ſeldome departs from the Iewes, in matters not controverted between them, and us, toucheth upon no ſuch expoſition ; yet hee expounds it more then one way, and with liberty enough, and farre ſtraying.

3. Of Lyra and of Sâ his Hebraiſmes.

c Ema. Sâ Not: in univerſ: Scrip.

And (c) Emanuel Sâ, who in his notes is more curious, and ſuperſtitious, in reſtoring all the Hebraiſmes, and oftentimes their interpretations, then perchance that Church would deſire at his hands, offers at no other ſenſe then the words preſent. Nor can Selfe homicide fall within the commination and puniſhment of that Law ; for how can the Magiſtrate ſhed his bloud, who hath killed himſelfe ?

SECT. III.

Of the place in Deuter. 33. 39.

The next is in Deuteronomie · [I kill, and I give life.] Out of which is concluded, that all authority thority of life and death is from God, and none in our ſelves.

But ſhall we therefore dare to condemne utterly, all thoſe ſtates and governments, where Fathers, Husbands, and Maſters, had juriſdiction over Children, wives, and ſervants lives? If we dare, yet how ſhall we defend any Magiſtracy, if this be ſo ſtrictly accepted? and if it admit exceptions, why may not our caſe be within thoſe?

4. Iuriſdiction of Parents, Husbands, Maſters, and Magiſtrates, muſt conſiſt with this place.

Howſoever that this place is incongruouſly brought, appears by the next words, [There is not any that can deliver from my hand] or this being a Verſe of that divine poem which God himſelfe made and delivered Moſes, as a ſtronger and more ſlippery inſinuation and impreſſion into the Iſraelites hearts, then the language of any Law would make, expreſſes onely that the mercies and judgements of God, are ſafe and removed from any humane hinderance, or interruption. So (a) in another gratulatory Song made by Samuels mother, the ſame words are repeated, [The Lord killeth and maketh alive,] and this becauſe God had given her a ſon, when ſhe was paſt hope. That place alſo in Tobit (b) is fitly paraleld with this, [He leadeth to hell, and bringeth up, nor is there any that can avoid his hand.] And can theſe two places be detorted to their purpoſe, That none but God may have juriſdiction over our temporall life? Or (c) that place of the book of Wiſdome, which is alſo ever joyned, as of the ſame ſignification with theſe, [for thou haſt the power of life, and a 1. Sam: 2. 6.

5. This place muſt be interpreted, as the other places of Scripture which have the ſame word, from which no concluſion can be wreſted againſt this fact.

b Tob: 13. 2.

c Sap: 16. 13.

and death] which is ſpoken of his miraculous curing by the Brazen Serpent. So that all theſe foure places have one reſpect and ayme, and none of them look towards our queſtion.

SECT. IIII.

1. Of the place of Iob 7.1.

In the order of the Divine books, the next place is produced out of Job, [Militia eſt vita hominis ſuper terram.] for, though our tranſlation give it thus, [Is there not an appointed time to man upon earth?] yet the Latine Text is thus cited to this purpoſe, by ſome not addicted to the Vulgat Edition, becauſe it ſeems in Latine better to afford an argument againſt Self homicide. For therupon they infer, that we may not depart at our own pleaſure from the battell. But becauſe onely the Metaphor and not the extending of it, nor inference upon it, is taken out of the Scripture, it brings no ſtrong obligation with it, nor deſerves much earneſtneſſe in the anſwer, yet to follow him a little in his Alluſion, a)[A Souldier may by Law, be ignorant of the Law, and is not much accuſable if he tranſgreſſe it] And by (b) another Law, it [a Souldier whoſe preſence is neceſſary for the ſafeguard of the Army, may be abſent causa Reipub. and being abſent, his abſence ſhall be interpreted to be ſo.] And (c) even to thoſe which killed themſelvs in the Army, we noted before in the ſecond part, That the lawes were not ſevere, if they had any colour of juſt cauſe: So that this figurative ar-

2. Why they cite this place in Latine.

a Digeſt. li: 22. tit: 6. le: 9.

b L. 4. tit: 6. leg: 44.

3. Of ſouldiers priviledges of abſence by law.

c Supra

gument

gument profits then nothing, especially being taken from this place where the scope of Job was to prove that our felicity and end upon which our actions are bent, is not in this life, but as wars work to peace, so we labour here to death, to that happines which we shall have after. And therfore whosoever were author of that letter which hath (d) Christs name to Abgarus, doth not make Christ say, that when he hath done that for which he was sent hither, he will come to him, and take his offer of halfe his Kingdome, but that when he hath done, he will returne to him which sent him: That is he will die, so that if either side have advantage by this place of Job, we have it.

4. Iobs scope is, that as war work to peace So here we only labour to Death.

d *Euseb. l.*1. *cap.*13.

5. Of Christs letter to King Abgarus.

SECT. V.

And by the other place of Job much more, which is, [Therefore my soule chuseth rather to bee strangled, and to die, then to be in my bones.] Hereuupon they infer, That if it might have been lawfull to die so, Job would have done it. But besides that the wretched poverty and feebleness of this manner of Negative arguments, Iob did it not, therefore he might not do it, we may perceive by the whole frame of the History, that God had chosen him for another use, and an example of extream patience. So that for any thing that appears in Iobs case, he might not lawfully doe it, because he could propose nothing but

1. Of the place Iob 7. 15.

2. Why this was not lawfull to Job.

his own eaſe. Yet Iob whoſe ſanctity I thinke it ſacriledge to diminiſh, whether he were a perſon or perſonate, in their confeſſion ſtrayed thus farre towards killing himſelfe, as to wiſh his death, and curſe his birth; for his whole third Chapter is a bitter and malignant invective againſt it, and a violent wiſhing of his own death.

3. His words ſeeme to ſhew ſome ſteps toward a purpoſe of Selfe-homicide.

4. Sex: Sen: and Gregories expoſition thereof.

(a) Sextus Senenſis gives an anſwer for him ſo litle all as it can admit or reach to no ſenſe, which is, [That curſing his birth day which then was paſt, he curſed nothing]

And (b) Saint Gregory gives an anſwer ſo myſticall, as no ſenſe can reach to it, which is, [That there is a ſecond birth into Sinne in this world, and Job curſed his entrance into that.] And ſo becauſe theſe words might bee readily taken for an inordinate wiſhing of death; Gregory provides them alſo a myſticall interpretation, for the Latine reading it thus, [Suſpendium elegit anima mea,] he ſays, [This was Suſpendium ſpirituale, which was but an elevation of the minde, as S. Paul ſaid, Chriſto crucifixus ſum cruci] But beſides that this eſcape will not ſerve, when the Originall word is conſidered, and that the next verſe is. Deſperavi, nequicquam ultra vivam] in the twentieth verſe, he chides God by the name of [O thou preſerver of men] as being angry that he preſerved him, [Being now a burthen to himſelfe, and would not leave him alone, whilſt he might ſwallow his ſpittle.] And he ends that Chapter thus, [If thou ſeekeſt me in the morning, I ſhall not be found.] This I a Sex: Sen: Bibliot. Sanct. lib: 8. Heref. 10.

b Greg. Mor: l: 4. cap. 6.

Gal: 2.

ſay

ſay, onely to ſhow that one whom none hath exceeded in holines, may without any detortion of his words, be argued to have ſtept farre towards a purpoſe of killing himſelfe. Who liſt to give any other conſtruction to his words ſhall not diſpleaſe me, nor impaire the ſtrength of our Propoſition.

5. Wherin I differ from the Anabapt. who affirme that Iob deſpaired.

And though I confeſſe, I have not read any to expound theſe words of Iob directly thus, and though I know the opinion in generall of his deſpairing, be thus much diſcredited, that it is held by the Anabaptiſts, yet, beſides that, it is not juſt nor ingenuous, to condemn all that a condemnd man ſays, (for even a leprous man may have one hand clean to take and give withall. And S. Hier. is inexcuſable, in that point of his ſlippery zeal, in his behaviour towards Vigilantius, yea the Trent Councell it ſelfe is obnoxious therein, for condemning Names of Authors, and not Books. Beſides this I ſay, the Anabaptiſts differ from me in their end and purpoſe, for they impute deſpaire to Iob, onely to infirme the Authority of the booke, which ſciſmatically they labour to rent from the Canon of Scripture: But I juſtly with the conſent of all Chriſtian Churches admitting it for ſuch, ſay, that Job might keep his ſanctity, and the Book his Dignity, and yet he might have a purpoſe to kill himſelfe.

6. S. Hierome and the Trent Councell erre in condemning all which a condemned man ſaith.

For very many reverend Authors in the Reformed Church, not raſhly to be forſaken, have imputed to our moſt bleſſed Saviour, as neer approaches proaches, to a more dangerous kind of despaire, then we impute to Iob, without diminishing him, or his Scriprures.

7. Of them which impute deſpayre unto Chriſt.

SECT. VI.

1. Of the place Iob 2. 4.

I finde also another place of Iob obtruded. [Skin for skin, and all that ever a man hath will he give for life.] From which words they argue a Naturall love in us to this life.

Let it be true, (though the Devill say it, for the words are his) that our sensitive Nature is too indulgent to this life, (though I feare I have offended and surfetted you in the first Part with Examples of meer Naturall and Sensitive men, which have chosen death,) yet will that prove that our Reasonable Nature may in no case correct that enormity? This is as strong against Gods outward calling us to him by sickness, or persecution, as against any such inward motions.

SECT. VII.

1. Of the place Eccl. 20. 16.

As unproperly, and unprofitably to their ends and purpose, do they offer that place of Ecclesiasticus, [Non est census supra censum salutis Corporis,] which I place here, though out of Order, because of the affinity betweene this place, and the last, and that one answer, is, at least, enough for them both. For, though this place may may prove that wee naturally love this body, (yet it is not of the safety of the body, as if all men desired that the body might live, but it is of bodily health whilst it doth live,) yet it proves not, that wee may in no case abandon it.

2. This place is not of safety, but of health.

SECT. VIII.

The most proper, and direct, and strongest place is the Commandement; for that is of Morall Law, [Thou shalt not kill;] and this place is cited by all to this purpose.

1. Of the place Exodus 20.

But I must have leave to depart from (a) S. Augustines opinion here, who thinks that this Commandement is more earnestly bent upon a mans selfe, then upon another; because here is no addition, and in the other, there is, [Against thy Neighbour,] for certainely, I am as much forbid by that Commandement to accuse my selfe falsely, as my Neighbour, though onely he be named. And by this I am as much forbid to kill my neighbour as my selfe, though none be named. So, as it is within the circuit of the Command, it may also bee within the exceptions thereof. For though the words be generall, Thou shalt not kill, we may kill beasts; Magistrates may kill men; and a private man in a just warre, may not onely kill, contrary to the sound of this Commandement, but hee may kill his Father, contrary to another.

(a) 23. q. 5. Si non licet.

2. S. August. thinks this law to concerne ones self more directly then another.

3. This law hath many exceptions.

4. Lawes of the first Table are strictioris vinculi, then of the later.

When two naturall Lawes contrary to one another occurre, we are bound to that which is strictioris vinculi.

As all Lawes concerning the Honour of God, and Faith, are in respect of the second Table, which is directed upon our Neighbour by Charitie. If therefore there could bee a necessity, that I must doe an act of Idolatry, or kill, I were bound to the later.

5. A case wherin it is probable that a man must kill himself.

By which Rule, If perchance a publique exemplary person, which had a just assurance that his example would governe the people, should be forced by a Tyrant, to doe an act of Idolatry, (although by circumstances he might satisfie his owne conscience, that he sinned not in doing it,) and so scandalize and endanger them, if the matter were so carried and disguised, that by no way he could let them know, that he did it by constraint, but voluntarily, I say, perchance he were better kill himselfe.

a Acatius de privil. l. c. 3.

It is a safe Rule, [(a) Iuri Divino derogari non potest, nisi ipsa derogatio juri Divino constet.] But since it is not thought a violating of that Rule, b Navr. Manual. cap. 15. n. 2.

[(b) To kill by publique Authority or in a just Warre, or defence of his life, or of anothers,] why may not our case be as safe and innocent?

c Supra.

If any importune me to shew this Priviledge, or exemption of this case from the Commandment, I may with (c) Sotus retort it, and call for their priviledge to kill a Day-thiefe, or any man in defence of another.

And

And as these Lawes may be mediately and secondarily deduced from the conformity of other Lawes, and from a generall Authority which God hath afforded all Soveraignes, to provide as necessities arise; So may our case bee derived as well from that necessary obligation which lyes alwayes upon us, of preferring Gods glorie above all humane respects. So that we cannot be put to shew, or pleade any exemption, but when such a case arises, wee say that that case never was within the reach of that Law. Which is also true of all the other which we called exemptions before.

6. As Lawes against Day theeves may be deduced from the Law of God authorizing Princes, so may this from the Commandement, of preferring Gods glory.

For, whatsoever might have beene done before the Law, (as this might, if it be neither against Nature, nor Justice, from both which we make account that wee have acquitted it,) upon that, this Commandement never fell, not extended to it.

7 Whatsoever might have been done before the Law, this Law forbids not.

SECT. IX.

I have found also a place urged out of the Booke of Wisdome, which is, [Seeke not death in the errour of your life.] Which being ever coupled with another place in Deuteronomie, by collation of the two places it appeares, That that which is forbidden there, is Idolatry, and by Death is meant the Second Death, or the way to it.

1 Of the place Sap. 1. 12.

Deut. 4. 24.

And so this Distinction which was intended for for the places cited from the Books of the old Testament, shall here have an end; and to the next we allow those of the New.

Distinct. III.

SECT. I.

1. Of the place Matt. 4. 6.

OF which the first that I have observed is in Matthew when the Devil tempts Christ thus, [If thou be the Son of God, cast thy self downe.] With all Expositors I confesse, this was a temptation to vain glory, and therefore most appliabl to our case, where we make account, that we work somwhat to the service of God, and advancement of his glory, when we allow this to be done; and it is a very slippery passage, and a devout man were out of the nature of devotion, likelier to erre that way, then a worldly, but that the hand of God is extended to the protection of such.

2. Christ, where it conduced to his owne ends, did as much as the Devill did tempt him to, in this place.

But directly this place will not shake, nor attempt our proposition, for though Christ would not satisfie the Devill, nor discover himselfe, yet he did as much when it conduced to his owne ends, as the Devill tempted him to in this place, or the other; both in changing the species and nature nature of water into Wine, and in expoſing himſelfe to certaine danger when he walked upon the waters. Chriſt refuſed no difficultie, nor abſtained from Miracles, when he knew he profited the beholders; nor doe I ſay, that in any other caſe, then when we are probably and excuſably aſſured, that it is to a good end, this may be lawfull to us.

SECT. II.

The next place is in the Acts of the Apoſtles. [The keeper of the priſon drew out his Sword, and would have killed himſelfe, ſuppoſing the Priſoners had beene gone; But Paul cryed, Doe thy ſelfe no harme, for we are all here.] To which I ſay, That by the ſame Spirit by which Paul being in the inner Priſon in the darke, knew what the Keeper thought, and what hee was about to doe without, hee knew alſo Gods purpoſe to be glorified in the converſion of him and his Family; and therefore did not onely reclaime him from that purpoſe, which was inordinate, and for his owne ſake, to eſcape puniſhment, (in which yet wee may obſerve how preſently Mans nature inclines him to this remedy) but alſo forbears to to make his benefit of this Miracle, and to eſcape away: and ſo, though he reſcue the Keeper, he betrayes himſelfe.

1. Of the place Acts 16. 17.

2. S. Paul knew Gods purpoſe of baptiſing the keeper.

3. Els ſaith Calvin, he had fruſtrated Gods way to give him an eſcape by the keepers death.

And therefore Calvin upon this place makes to himſelfe this objection, [That Paul ſeeing all his his hope of escape to consist in the death of the Keeper, neglected that way of liberty which God offered him, when he restrained the Keeper from killing himself.] And he answers it onely thus, [That he had a conscience and insight into Gods purpose and decree herein.] For otherwise, if he had not had that (which very few attaine to have) it seemes he ought to have permitted the keeper to proceed, to facilitate thereby his way of escaping.

SECT. III.

1. Of the place Rom. 3. 8.

Which also inferres some answer to another place of Saint Paul, where hee delivers and discharges himselfe, and his fellow Apostles, of having taught this Doctrine, [That a man might doe evill, that good might come thereof.] And consequently it is well and by just Collection pronounced that he forbids that Doctrine.

2. How Paul forbids evil to be done for good.

And we also humbly subscribe to that Rule, and accept it so, as Saint Paul intends it; that is, in things which Nature, and not Circumstance makes evil. And in these also, when any such circumstance doth make them evill, as another circumstance to the contrary doth not præponderate and over-rule this. This therefore we must have liberty to enlighten with a larger discourse.

3. God always inflicteth Malum pœnæ by Instruments.

Of the evils which seeme to us to bee of punishment, of which kind Death is, God ever makes others his executioners; for the greatest greateſt of all, though it be ſpirituall, which is Induration, is not ſo wrought by God himſelfe immediately, as his ſpirituall comforts are, but Occaſionally, and by Deſertion.

Sometimes in theſe God imployes his Angels, ſometime the Magiſtrate, ſomtimes our ſelves. Yet all which God doth in this life by any of theſe, is but Phyſicke: for (a) even excæcation and induration is ſent to further Salvation in ſome, and inflicted medicinally. And theſe m niſters and inſtruments of his, are our Phyſitians, and wee may not refuſe any bitterneſſe, no not that which is naturally poyſon, being wholeſomely corrected by them. For as in (b) Cramps which are contortions of the Sinewes, or in Tetars, which are rigors and ſtiffeneſſes in the Muſcles, wee may procure to our ſelfe a fever to thaw them, or we may procure them in a burning feaver, to condenſe and attemper our bloud againe, ſo in all rebellions and diſobediences of our fleſh, wee may miniſter to our ſelves ſuch corrections and remedies, as the Magiſtrate might, if the fact were evident. But, becauſe though for prevention of evill, wee may doe all the offices of a Magiſtrate upon our ſelves, in ſuch ſecret caſes, but whether we have that authority to doe it after or no, eſpecially in Capitall matters, is diſputable, and at this time, wee need not affirme it preciſely, I will examine the largeneſſe of that power no farther now.

4. Induration it ſelf is ſometime medicinall.

a Aqui. 12. q. 79. ar. 4. con.

b Hippocrat. Aphor. l. 2. 38. 5. Wee may correct in our ſelves one diſeaſe by another.

But descend to that kinde of evill, which must of necessity be understood in this place of Paul: which is, that we account naturally evill. And even in that, the Bishops of Rome have exercised their power, (c) to dispence with Bigamy, which is in their doctrine directly against Gods Commandement, and therefore naturally evill. So did (d) Nicholas the fift, dispense with a Bishop in Germany, to consult with Witches, for recovery of his health; and it were easie to amasse many cases of like boldnesse.

In like manner (e) the Imperiall Law tolerates Vsurie, Prescription Mala fidei, and Deceit ad Medium, and expressely allowes (f) Witchcraft, to good purposes. [Conformably to which Law, Paracelsus sayes, It is all one whether God or the Devill cure, so the Patient be well.]

And so the (g) Canons have prescribed certain rules of doing evill, when we are overtaken with perplexities, to chuse the least, of which (h) S. Gregory gives a naturall example, [That a man attempted upon a high wall, and forced to leape it, would take the lowest place of the wall.] And agreeably to all these, the (k) Casuists say, [That in extreame necessitie, I sinne not if I induce a man to lend me mony upon usury; And the reason is, because I incline him to a lesse sinne, which is usury, when else he should be a homicide, by not relieving me.] And in this fashion, (l) God himselfe is said to work evill in us, because when our heart is full of evill purposes, he governs and disposes

6. In things evill in such sence as Paul taketh them here, Popes dayly doe dispence.

c Dist. 34. lector gloss.

d Bodinus Dæmon. l. 5.

e Windek de consens. et dissens. leg. et Can. ca. 11.

7. So doe the Civill Laws.

f Cod. tit. de malef. l. 4. §. eorum.

g Paracel. l. de morb. cad.

h Dist. 14. cap. Duo mala.

i Dist. ead. cap. Nerui.

k Nav. Man. c. 17. num. 263.

8 So do Canons.

l Bellar. de Amiss. grat. & stat. peccat. l. 2. c. 13. ex Hug. de viet. & Tho.

9 So doth God occasion lesse sin to avoid greater.

disposes us rather to this then to that evill, wherin though all the vitiousnesse be ours, and evill, yet the order is from God, and good. Yea, he doth positively encline one to some certain evill thus, That he doth infuse into a man some good thoughts, by which, he, out of his vitiousnesse takes occasion to thinke he were better doe some other sinne then that which he intended. Since therefore all these lawes and practises concurre in this, that we sometime doe such evill, not onely for expresse and positive good, but to avoid greater evill, all which seems to be against this doctrine of S. Paul,

9. What any other may dispence withall in us, in extremity we may dispence within our selves. Supra.

And since, whatsoever any humane power may dispence withall in us, we, in extream necessity, in impossibility of recourse to better counsell, in an erring conscience, and in many such cases, may dispence with our selves, (for that Canon of duo mala, leaves it to our naturall reason, to judge, and value, and compare, and distinguish betweene those two evills which shall concurre.)

10. Yet noe such dispensation changeth the nature of things, therefore that particular was never naturally evill.

And since for all this, it is certaine, that no such dispensation from another, or from my selfe, doth so alter the nature of the thing, that it becomes thereby the more or the lesse evill, to mee there appeares no other interpretation safe, but this, That there is no externall act naturally evill; and that circumstances condition them, and give them their nature; as scandall makes an indifferent thing hainous at that time; which, if ſome perſon go out of the roome, or winke, is not ſo.

11. The Law it ſelf is neither good nor evill.

The Law it ſelfe, which is given us as a light, that we might not ſtumble, and by which we ſee, not what is evill naturally (for that we ſee naturally, and that was ſo even, to us, before the law declared it) but what would bee evill (that is produce evill effects,) if we did it at that time, and ſo circumſtanced, is not abſolutely good, but in ſuch meaſure, and in ſuch reſpects, as that which it forbids is evill. And therefore (m) Picus comparing the Law, to the firmament, (as Moſes accepts the word) as he obſerves, that the ſecond day, when God made the firmament, he did not ſay, that it was good, as he did of every other days work; and yet it was not evill, (for then ſaith Picus, it could not have received the ſunne, as if it had beene good, it had not needed it.) So he reprehends the Manichees, for ſaying that the Law was evill, yet he ſticks to that of (n) Ezechiel, That it was not good. That evill therefore which by this place of S. Paul is forbidden, is either Acts of infidelity, which no diſpenſation can deliver from the reach of the Law, or els, ſuch acts as being by our nature, and reaſon, and approbation of nations reputed evill, or declared by law or cuſtome to be ſuch, becauſe of there ordinary evill effects, doe caſt a guiltines upon the doer, ordinarily, and for the moſt part, and ever except his caſe be exempt and priviledged. This moved,

12. As Picus notes comparing it to the firmament.

m Heptapl. l. 7. proem.

n Ezech. 20. 25.

13. What evill Paul forbids, and why.

moved Chrysostome, (whom I cited before) to think a ly, and a consent to adultrery, not evill in Sarah: and this rectified S. Augustines squeamishnes so farre, as to leave us at liberty, to think what we would of that wifes act, which to pay her husbands debt, let out her self one night. For if any of these thing had been once evill naturally, they could never recover of that sickneſſe; but (as I insinuated before) as those things which we call miracles, were written in the history of Gods purpose, as exactly, and were as certainly to come to passe, as the rising and setting of the sunne, and as naturally, in tota compagine naturæ, (for there is no interlining in that book of God:) So in that his eternall Regiſter where he foresees all our acts, he hath preserued and defended, from that ordinary corruption of evill purpose, of inexcusable ignorance, of scandall, and of such other inquinations of indifferent things, (as he is said to have done our B. Lady from originall sinne in her inanimation,) Some of those acts of ours, which to those who doe not studiously distinguish circumstances, or see not the doers conscience, and testimony of Gods spirit, may at the first tast have some of the brackishnes of sin. Such was (o) Moses killing of the Egyptians; for which there appears no especiall calling from God. But because this falls not often: S. Paul would not embolden us, to do any of those things which are customarily reputed evill.

Supra.

14. Nothing which is once evill can ever recover of that

Supra.

15. Three acts were in God's decree preserued from those staines which make things evill, so as miracles were written in his book of nature, though not in our copy; and so, as our Lady is said to be preseru'd from originall sinne o Exod. 2. 12. Such was Moses killing the Egyptian.

But

17. If this place be taken of all kind of evill, it must admit exception, as well as the Decalogu.

But if others be delighted with the more ordinary interpretation of this place, that it speaks of all that which we call sinne, I will not refute that interpretation, so they make not the Apostles rule, (though in this place this be not given properly and exactly for a rule;) more strickt than the morall præcepts of the Decalogue it self, in which, as in all rules there are naturally included and incorporated some exceptions, which if they allow in this, they are still at the beginning; for this case may fall within those exceptions.

18. Otherwise the application which Bellarm. and others make of it will be intollerable. p De cul. sanct. l. 4. cap. 7.

Otherwise, that the generall application of this rule, is not proper, as by infinite other places, so it appears evidently by that in (p) Bellarmine, where he says, that by reason of this rule, a man may not with neglecting a poore neighbour, adorne a church; Yet there are a great many cases, wherein we may neglect this poore neighbour; and therefore that is not naturally evill. And certainly whosoever is delighted with such arguments, and such an application of this text, would not only have objected this rule to Lot, when he offered his Daughters, (for there it might have colour) but would have joyned with Iudas, when the woman anointed Christ; and have told her, that although the office which shee did were good, yet the wast which shee made first, was evill, and against this rule.

SECT.

SECT. IIII.

The same Apostle doth in divers other places use this phrase, That we are the Temples of the Holy Ghost; And from thence is argued, that it is an unlawfull Sacriledge to demolish or to deface those Temples. But wee are so the Temples of God, as we are his Images: that is, by his residing in our hearts.

Of the places 2 Cor. 6. 16. 1 Cor. 3. 16. & 6. 16.

And who may doubt, but that the blessed Soules of the departed, are still his Temples, and Images? Even amongst heathens, those Temples which were consecrated to their gods, might in cases of publique good or harme, be demolished, and yet the ground remaine sacred.

19 The dead are still his Temples, and Images. Silvius Com. ad leges.

And in the two first places, is onely a Dehortation from polluting our hearts which are Gods Temples, with Idolatry, or other sinne. In the other place he calles our materiall body, the temple: and he makes it to us an argument that we should flye from fornication, because therein wee tresspas against our owne body. And so here arises a double argument, that we may not doe injurie to our owne body, neither as it is ours, nor as it is Gods.

20 Heathens temples might be demolished, yet the soile remain sacred.

In the first of these then, he sayes, [A Fornicator sinnes against his body;] for as hee sayd two verses before, [Hee makes himselfe one body with an Harlot,] and so hee diminishes the dignity of his owne perſon. But is it ſo, in our Caſe? When he withdrawes and purges it from all corruptions, and delivers it from all the inquinations, and venime, and maligne Machinations of his, and Gods adverſaries, and prepares it by Gods inſinuation and concurrence, to that glory, which without death, cannot bee attained.

21 Pauls reason is in Cases where we avile our selves: here wee advance our selves.

Is it a leſſe dignitie, that himſelfe bee the Prieſt of God, and that himſelfe be the Sacrifice of God, then that he be the Temple? But ſayes Paul, [(a) Your body is the Temple of God, and you are not your owne.] But ſaies Calvine here, you are not ſo your owne, that you may live at your owne will, or abuſe your body with pollutions and uncleanneſſe. Our body is ſo much our owne, as we may uſe it to Gods glory; and it is ſo little our owne, as when hee is pleaſed to have it, we doe well in reſigning it to him, by what Officer ſoever he accept it, whether by Angell, Sickneſſe, Perſecution, Magiſtrate, or our ſelves. Onely bee carefull of this laſt leſſon, in which hee amaſſes and gathers all his former Doctrine, [(b) Glorifie God in your body, and in your ſpirit, for they are his.] a Verſ. 19. 22 That our body is not our own, how it is to be underſtood here in Paul.

b Verſ. 20.

SECT. V.

The place of the Epheſians hath ſome affinity with this; which is, [But let us follow the truth

1 Of the place Epheſ. 4. 15. 16

in

in love, and in all things grow up into him, which is the head, that is Christ, till we are all met together, unto a perfect man.] By which wee receive the honour to be one body with Christ our head; which is (a) after more expressely declared, [We are Members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bone.] And therefore, they say, that to withdraw our selves, which are limmes of him, is not onely homicide of our selves, who cannot live without him, but a Paricide towards him, who is our common Father.

a Cap. 5. v. 30.

But as in Fencing, Passion layes a man as open as unskilfulnesse, and a troubled desire to hirt, makes one not onely misse, but receive a wound; so out of an inordinate fervour, to strike home, hee which alledgeth this place, overreacheth to his owne danger; for onely this is taught herein, that all our growth and vegetation flowes from our head, Christ. And that he hath chosen to himselfe for the perfection of his body, limmes proportionall thereunto, and that, as a soule through all the body, so this care must live, and dwell in every part, that it be ever ready to doe his proper function, and also to succour those other parts, for whose reliefe or sustentation it is framed, and planted in the body. So that herein there is no litterall construction to be admitted, as though the body of Christ could be imperfited, by the removing of any man. For, as from a tree, some leaves passe their naturall course and season, and fall againe being withered by age, and some fruits are gathered unripe, and some ripe, and some branches which in a storme fall off, are carryed to the fire; So in this body of Christ, the Church, (I meane that which is visible) all these are also fulfilled and performed, and yet the body suffers no maims, much lesse the head any detriment.

2. This place gives arguments to all which spare not themselves for reliefe of others.

This place therefore is so farre from giving encouragement to any particular man to be carefull of his owne well being, as the Expositors (of what perswasion soever in controverted points) accept from hence an argument, that for the establishing, and sustentation of the whole body, a man is bound to depart with all respects to himselfe, and give his life to strengthen them which are weake.

And this place, as a common Conduit head hath affoorded justification for Martyrdomes, for pestilent visitations, and for all those Desertions of our selves, and of our naturall right of preserving our selves, which wee had occasion to insist upon before.

SECT. VI.

1. Of the place Eph. 5.

As therefore that construction doth well consist with those words, so doth it also with the words in the next Chapter, [No man ever hated his owne flesh, but nourished it, &c.] Of which Hate, because we are to speake when wee come to to Christs Commandement of Hating our life, we will here onely say, with (a) Marlorate upon this place, [He hates not his flesh, who hates the desires thereof, and would subject it to the Spirit: no more then a Goldsmith hates that gold, which hee casts into a furnace to purifie, and reduce to a better fashion.] And, because out of the Armory of Scripture I have not found that they take any better weapons, nor any more, we may here end this Distinction.

a Marlor. in hunc locum.

2. How Marlor. expounds this hate.

Distinction IV.

SECT. I.

IN the next our busines is, to try of what force and proofe their armes are against their adversaries forces. Of which we shall oppose two sorts; The first naturall and assured Subjects, which are, Reasons arising naturally from places of Scripture, and these, in this distinction; The other, Examples, as Auxiliaries. For though we rely not upon them, yet we have this advantage in that kind, that our aduersaries can make no use, nor profit of Examples. And therefore that answer which both Peter Martyr, and Lavater from him make, that we must not live by examples, and that if examples proved

1. Of places of scriptures on the other part.

2. We may, but our adversaries may not make use of examples. to which the answer of Martyr and Lavater is weake.

any thing they had the ſtronger ſide, (that is, there have beene more men which have not killed themſelves, then which have,) may well ſeeme from peremptorineſſe, and lazineſſe, and impoſſibillity of better defence, to have too much allay, to be currant. To prepare us therefore to a right underſtanding, and application of theſe places of ſcripture, we muſt arreſt awhile vpon the nature, and degrees, and effects of charity; the mother, and forme of all vertue; which ſhall not onely lead us to heaven, (for faith opens us the doore) but ſhall continue with us when we are there, when both Faith, and Hope, are ſpent and uſeleſſe.

3. The Nature, degrees, and effects of Charity.

We ſhall no where find a better pourtrait of charity, then that which S. Auguſtine hath drawne: ſhe loves not that which ſhould not be loved; ſhe neglects not that which ſhould be loved; ſhe beſtowes not more love upon that, which deſerves leſſe; nor doth ſhe equally love more and leſſe worthines; nor upon equall worthines, beſtow more and leſſe love. (a) To this charity the ſame bleſſed and happy Father, proportions this growth. [Inchoated, increaſed, growne great, and perfected, and this laſt is, ſaith he, when in reſpect of it, we contemne this life] And yet he acknowledgeth a higher charity then this. For (b) P. Lombard allowing charity this growth, [beginning, proficient, perfect, more, and moſt perfect.] he cites (c) S. Auguſtine who calls [that perfect charity to be readie

4. S. Auguſt. pourtraite of her.

a De natura et gratia cap. ult.

5. Of her higheſt perfection, beyond that which P. Lombard obſerved out of Aug.

b Lomb. l. 3. Diſt. 3.

c In epiſt. Io. tract. 5.

die to dy for another.] But when he comes to that, then which none can be greater, he ſays then, the Apoſtle came to (d) cupio diſſolvi.

For as [(e) one may love God with all his heart, and yet he may grow in that, and love God more with all his heart, for (f) the firſt was commanded in the Law, and yet (g) counſail of perfection was given to him, who ſaid that he had fulfilled the firſt commandement,] So as S. Auguſtine found a degree above that charity, which made a man paratum ponere which is cupere, ſo there is a degree above that, which is to doe it.

This is that vertue, by which (h) Martyrdome, which is not ſuch of it ſelf, becomes an act of higheſt perfection.

And this is that vertue, which (i) aſſureth any ſuffering which proceeds from it to be infallibly accompanied with the grace of God. Vpon aſſurednes therefore, and teſtimony of a rectified conſcience, that we have a charitable purpoſe, let us conſider how farre we may adventure upon authority of Scripture in this matter which we have in hand.

d Phil. 1.23

e Serarius trihereſi. l. 1. ca. 8.
f Deut. 6. 5.
g Mat. 5. 6. He who loves God with all his heart, may love him more h Aqui. 22. q. 124. ar. 3.

i Aqui. 22. q. 136. ar. 3. 7. Any ſuffering in charity hath infallibly the grace of God. By Aquin.

SECT. II.

Firſt therefore by the frame and working of Saint Pauls argument to the Corinthians, [Though I give my body that I be burned, and have not love, it profiteth nothing.] Theſe two things appeare evidently.

1. Of the place 1 Cor. 13. 4.

Firſt,

2. By this in common reputation, that was a degree of perfection to dye so. And charity made it acceptable.

First, That in a generall notion and common reputation, it was esteemed a high degree of perfection to dye so, and therefore not against the Law of Nature. And secondly, by this exception, (without Charity) it appeares, that with Charity it might well and profitably be done.

3. Paul speaks of a thing which might lawfully be done, for such are all his gradations in this argument.

For the first, if any thinke that the Apostle here takes example of an impossible thing, as when it is sayd, [If an Angel from heaven teach other doctrine,] he will, I thinke, correct himselfe, if he consider the former verses, and the Apostles progresse in his argument; wherein to dignifie Charity, the most that hee can, hee undervalues all other gifts, which were there ambitiously affected.

5. Tongues of Angels in what sence in this place.

For Eloquence he sayes, it is nothing to have all Languages, no not of Angels; which is not put literally, for they have none; but to expresse a high degree of Eloquence, as Calvine sayes here. Or, as Lyra sayes, by language of Angels is meant, the desire of communicating our conceptions to one another. And then he adds, That knowledge of Mysteries and Prophecies, is also nothing; which was also much affected. And for Miraculous Faith, it is also nothing.

Calvin. 5. Speech in the Asse, understanding of mysteries in Iudas, miraculous faith make not the possessor the better.

For the first of these guifts, doth not make a man better; for Balams Asse could speake, and was still an Asse. And the second Judas had, and the Pharisees. And the third is so small a matter, that as much as a graine of Musterseed is enough enough to remove mountaines. All theſe therefore were faiſable things, and were ſometimes done. So alſo, after he had paſſed through the gifts of knowledge, and gifts of utterance, hee preſents the gifts of working in the ſame manner; and therefore, as he ſayes, If I feed the poore with all my goods, (which he preſents as a harder thing then either of the other, (for in the other God gives me, but here I give other) yet poſſible to be done.) So he preſents the laſt, If I give my body, as the hardeſt of all, and yet, as all the reſt, ſometimes to be done.

That which I obſerved ſecondly to ariſe from this argument, was, That with Charity ſuch a death might be acceptable. And though I know the Donatiſts are ſaid to have made this uſe of theſe words, yet, becauſe the intent and end conditions every action, and infuſes the poyſon, or the nouriſhment which they which follow ſuck from thence, and we know that the Donatiſts rigorouſly and tyrannouſly racked and detorted thus much from this place, That they might preſent themſelves to others promiſcuouſly to bee killed, and if that were denied to them, they might kill themſelves, and them who refuſed it.

6 How I differ from the Donatiſts arguing from this place, that in charity ſelf-homicide was alwaies lawfull.

Yet, I ſay, I doubt not but thus much may naturally be collected from hence, that by this word, If I give my body, is inſinuated ſomewhat more then a prompt and willing yeelding of it, when I am enforced to it, by the perſecuting Magiſtrate.

7 To give my Body, is more then to let it be taken.

Metaph. in Niceph. Martyr.

And that theſe words will juſtifie the fact of the Martyr Nicephorus, being then in perfect Charity. Whoſe caſe was, That having had ſome enmitie with Sapritius, who was brought to the place where he was to receive the bloudy crowne of Martyredome, he fell downe to Sapritius, and begged from him then, a pardon of all former bitterneſſes. But Sapritius elated with the glory of Martyredome, refuſed him; but was preſently puniſhed; for his faith coold, and he recanted, and lived. And Nicephorus ſtanding by, ſtepped into his roome, and cryed, I am alſo a Chriſtian, and ſo provoked the Magiſtrate to execute him; leaſt from the faintneſſe of Sapritius, the cauſe might have received a wound, or a ſcorne. And this I take to bee Giving of his body.

8 How Nicephorus the martyre, gave his body in Sapritius his roome, who recanted.

Of which, as there may be ſuch neceſſitie for confirming of weaker Chriſtians, that a man may be bound to doe it, as in this caſe, is very probable. So there may bee caſes in men very exemplary, and in the cunning and ſubtile carriage of the Peſecutor, as one can no other way give his body for teſtimony of Gods truth, to which he may then be bound, but by doing it himſelfe.

9 There may be a caſe that a man bound to give his body, cannot doe it otherwiſe then by ſelfe-homicide.

SECT.

SECT. III.

As therefore Naturally and Customarily men thought it good to dye so, and that such a death with charity was acceptable, so is it generally said by Christ, [That the good Shepherd doth give his life for his sheepe.] Which is a justifying and approbation of our inclination thereunto. For to say, The good doe it, is to say, They which doe it are good.

1 Of the places Joh.10.11. & Joh.15.13.

And as we are all sheep of one fold, so in many cases, we are all shepherds of one another, and owe one another this dutie, of giving our temporall lives, for anothers spirituall advantage; yea, for his temporall. For (a) that I may abstaine from purging my selfe, when anothers crime is imputed to me, is grounded upon such another (b) Text as this, where it is said, The greatest love, is to bestow his life for his friend. In which, and all of this kind, we must remember, that we are commanded to doe it so, as Christ did it; and how Christ gave his body, we shall have another place to consider.

2 I need not purge my self, when anothers crime is imputed to me.

a Sot. de teg. Secret. Memb. 1.q.3.

b Joh.15.13.

SECT. IV.

Hereupon becaus Saint Peters zeale so forward, and carried him so high, that hee would dye for the Shepherd; for so he saies, [I will lay downe my life, for thy sake.] And this, as all

1 Of the place Ioh.13.37.

2 Peters readineſſe was naturall. Pauls deliberate.

Expoſitors ſay, was meerely and purely out of naturall affection, without examination of his owne ſtrength to performe it; but preſently and roundly Nature carryed him to that promiſe. And upon a more deliberate and orderly reſolution, Saint Paul witneſſeth of himſelfe ſuch a willlingneſſe to dye for his brethren, [I will be gladly beſtowed for your ſoules.]

2 Cor. 12.15.

SECT. V.

1 Of the place. Ioh. 10.15.

A Chriſtian nature reſts not in knowing thus much, That we may doe it, That Charitie makes it good, That the good doe it, and that wee muſt alwaies promiſe, that is, encline to doe it, and doe ſomething towards it, but will have the perfect fulneſſe of doing it in the reſolution and doctrine, and example of our bleſſed Saviour, who ſaies, de facto, [I lay down my life for my ſheepe.] And ſaith Muſculus, hee uſeth the preſent word, becauſe hee was ready to doe it: and as (a) Paul and Barnabas, men yet alive; are ſaid to have laid downe their lives for Chriſt.] But I rather thinke, (becauſe expoſing to danger, is not properly call'd a dying,) that Chriſt ſaid this now, becauſe his Paſſion was begun; for all his converſations here were degrees of exinanition.

2 Why Chriſt ſaies this in the preſent time.

a Act. 15.26.

3 Of the aboundant charity of Chriſt.

To expreſſe the abundant and overflowing charitie of our Saviour, all words are defective; for if we could expreſſe all which he did, that came came not neere to that which he would doe, if need were. It is obſerved by (b) one, I (confeſſe, too credulous an Authour, but yet one that adminiſters good and wholeſome incitements to Devotion,) That Chriſt going to Emaus ſpake of his Paſſion ſo ſleightly, as though he had in three dayes forgot all that he had ſuffered for us.

And that Chriſt in an apparition to Saint Charles, ſayes, that he would be content to dy againe, if need were.

Yea, to (c) Saint Brigit he ſaid, [That for any one ſoule he would ſuffer as much in every limme, as he had ſuffered for all the world in his whole body.]

And (d) this is noted for an extreame high degree of Charity, out of Anſelme, that his B. Mother ſaid, [Rather then he ſhould not have been Crucified, ſhee would have done it with her owne hands.

And certainly his charity was not inferiour to hers; He did as much as any could be willing to doe. And therefore, as himſelf ſaid, [No man can take away my ſoule] And [I have power to lay it down;] So without doubt, no man did take it away, nor was there any other then his own will, the cauſe of his dying at that time; many Martyrs having hanged upon Croſſes many days alive: And the theeves were yet alive; And therefore (e) Pilate wondred to heare that Chriſt was dead. [His Soule, ſaith (f) S. Aug.

b De Suidone. pa. 1. Notæ in Ca. 11.

4 Of his ſpeech going to Emaus.

5 Of his Apparition to Saint Charles.

c Revel. Brig. l. 1. ca. 59.
6 Of the Revelation to St. Brigit.

d Suidon. p. 1. Not. in Ca. 16.
7 Of his Mothers Charitiy.

8 That none could take away his ſoule.
9 His owne will the onely cauſe of his dying ſo ſoone, by St. Aug.
10 And by Aquin. becauſe he had all his ſtrength.
e Mar. 15.
f De Trinit l. 1. cap. 13.

did not leave his body constrained, but because he would, and when he would, and how he would.] Of which (g) S. Thomas produces this symptome, That he had yet his bodies nature in her full strength, because at the last moment he was able to cry with a loud voice. And (h) Marlorate gathers it upon this, that whereas our heads decline after our death by the slackness of the sinews and muscles, Christ did first of himself bow downe his head, and then give up the ghost. So, though it be truly said (i) [After they have scourged him, they will put him to death,] yet it is said so, because malitiously and purposely to kill him they inflicted those paines upon him; which would in time have killed him, but yet nothing which they had done occasioned his death so soone.

And therefore (k) S. Thomas, a man neither of unholy thoughts, nor of bold or irreligious or scandalous phrase or elocution, (yet I adventure not so farre in his behalfe as (l) Sylvester doth, [that it is impossible that hee should have spoken any thing against faith or good manners,] forbeares not to say, [That Christ was so much the cause of his death, as he is of his wetting, which might and would not shut the windowe, when the raine beats in.]

This actuall emission of his soule, which is death, and which was his own act, and before his naturall time, (m) (which his best beloved Apostle could imitate, who also died when he would, and went into his grave, and there gave up g 3. q. 47. ar. 1. ad 2.

h Mat. 27. 50.
11. And by Marl. because he bowed his head, and it fell not, as ours in death.
i Luc. 18. 33.
12 How it is true that the Jewes put him to death.
13. Of Aquin. and Sylvesters opinion of him.
k 3. q. 47. ar. 1. Con.
l Verbo matrimonium.
14. Christ was so the cause of his death, as he is of his wetting, which might, and doth not shut the window in raine by Aqui.
15. Who imitated Christ in this actuall emission of the soule.
m Aquin. supr. Ioh. cap. 21.

up the Ghost, and buried himselfe, which is reported but of very (n) few others, and by no very credible Authors,) we find thus celebrated, (o) That that is a brave death, which is accepted unconstrained; and that it is an Heroique Act of Fortitude, if a man when an urgent occasion is presented, expose himselfe to a certaine and assured death, as he did.

And it is there said, that Christ did so, as Saul did, who thought it foule, and dishonourable to dye by the hand of an Enemy. And that Apollonia, and others who prevented the fury of Executioners, and cast themselves into the fire, did therein immitate this act of our Saviour, of giving up his soule, before hee was constrained to do it. So that if the act of our blessed Saviour, in whom there was no more required for death, but that he should wil that his soule should goe out, were the same as Sauls, and these Martyrs actuall furtherance, which could not dye without that, then wee are taught that all those places, of Giving up our bodies to death, and of Laying downe the soule, signifie more then a yeelding to death when it comes.

l Sophro. prat. Stir. cap. 90. de phter. Anco. Et Surius To. 1. feb. de Sever. Raven.
m Sind. Not. in c. 11. ad 6.

16. Vpon what reasons this fashion of dying in Christ is calld Heroique, and by like epithites.
17. Christ is said to have done herein as Saul and Apol. and such.

SECT. VI.

And to my understanding there is a further degree of alacrity, and propensenesse to such a death, expressed in that phrase of John, [Hee that hateth his life in this world, shall keepe it unto life

1 Of the places Iohn 12. 25. and Luc. 14. 26.

life eternall. And in that of Luke, [Except he hate his owne life, he cannot be my Disciple.] Such a lothnesse to live is that which is spoken of in the Hebrews, (a [Some were rack'd, and would not bee delivered, that they might receive a better Resurrection.] a Heb. 11.35.

b In Ioh. 12. 25.
2. Iesuites apply particularly this hate.
c Reg. Iesuit. Conjit. spirit. 8.

This place (b) Calvine interprets of a readinesse to dye, and expresses it elegantly, To carrie our life in our hands, offering it to God for a Sacrifice. And this (c) the Jesuits in their rule extend thus farre, [Let every one thinke that this was said directly to him, Hate thy life.]

3. If the other place, noe man hates his owne flesh, be against homicide; This must be for it.

And they who in the other place, accept this phrase, No man hateth his owne flesh, to yeeld an argument against Selfe-homicide in any case, must also allow that the same hate being commanded here, authorises that act in some case.

4. S. August. denies that this place justifies the Donatists. but not in all cases.

And Saint Augustine apprehending the strength of this place, denies that by the authoritie of it, the Donatists can justifie their Selfe-homicide when they list to dye, but yet in these cases which are exempt from his rules; this place may encourage a man not to neglect the honour of God, onely upon this reason, that no body else will take his life.

SECT. VII.

1. Of the place 1. Iohn 3. 16.

And therefore the holy ghost proceeds more directly in the first Epistle of Saint Iohn, and shews us a necessary duty, [Because he laid downe his his life for us, therefore we ought to lay downe our lives for our brethren.] All these places work us to a true understanding of charity, and to a contempt of this life, in respect of it.

And as these informe us how ready we must be, So all those places which direct us by the example of Christ, to doe it as he did, shew, that in cases when our lives must be given, we neede not ever attend extrinsique force of others, but as he did in perfect charity, so we in such degrees of it, as this life, and our nature are capable of, must dy by our owne will, rather then his glory be neglected, whensoever, (a) as Paul saith, Christ may be magnified in our bodies, or the spirituall good of such another as wee are bound to advance, doth importune it.

2. All these places direct us to do it, as Christ did it, unconstraind.

a Phil. 1. 20.

SECT. VIII.

To which readines of dying for his bretheren, Saint Paul had so accustomed himself, and made it his nature, that but for his generall resolution of doing that ever which should promove their happines, he could scarce have obtain'd of himself leave to live. For, at first he says, he knew not which to wish, life or, death; (and therefore generally without some circumstance incline or avert us, they are equall to our nature.) Then after much perplexity, he was resolved, and desired to be loose, and to be with Christ; (therefore a holy man may wish it.) But yet he corrected

1. Of the place Phil 1. 23.

2 Of S. Pauls gradations to this wish; and his correcting of it.

that againe, becauſe ſaith he, [To abide in the fleſh, is more needfull for you.] And therefore charity muſt be the rule of our wiſhes, and actions in this point.

SECT. IX.

1 Of the place Gal. 4. 15.

2. This was more then vitam profundere by Calvin.

There is another place to the Galatians, which though it reach not to death, yet it proves that holy men may be ready to expreſſe their loves to another, by violence to themſelves. For he ſaith, [If it had bene poſſible, you would have plucked out your own eies, and given me:] And Calvin ſaith, [this was more then vitam profundere.] And this readines Saint Paul reprehends not in them.

SECT. X.

1 Of the place Rom. 9. 3.

But of the higheſt degrees of compaſſionate charity for others, is that of the Apoſtle, in contemplation of the Jewes dereliction, [I would wiſh my ſelfe to be ſeperated from Chriſt, for my brethren.

a 1 Cor. 16. 22.

2. That this Anathema was damnation.

The bitterneſſe of which Anathema, himſelf teaches us to underſtand, when in (a) another place, he wiſhes the ſame, [To thoſe which love not Jeſus Chriſt. And this fearefull wiſh which charitie excuſed in him, was utter damnation, as all Expoſitors ſay.

And though I beleeve with Calvine, that at this this time, in a zealous fury he remembred not deliberately his own election, and therefore cannot in that respect, be said to have resisted the will of God, yet it remaines, as an argument to us, That Charitie will recompence, and justifie many excesses, which seeme unnaturall, and irregular, and enormous transportations.

3. That he considered not his election at that time.

SECT. XI.

As in this Apostle of the Gentiles, so in the Law-giver of the Jewes, the like compassion wrought the like effect; and more. For Moses rested not in wishing, but face to face argued with God, [If thou pardon them, thy mercie shall appeare, but if thou wilt not, I pray thee blot my name out of the booke which thou hast written]

1 Of the place Exod. 32. 32.

I know, that many out of a reasonable Collection, that it became Moses to bee reposed, and dispassioned, and of ordinate affections in his conversation with God, are of opinion, that he strayed no further in this wish, and imprecation, then to be content that his name should bee blotted out of the Scriptures, and so to lose the honour of being known to posterity for a remarkable instrument of Gods power and mercie.

2. That this imprecation was not only to be blotted out of the history of the scriptures.

But, since a naturall infirmity could worke so much upon Christ, in whom there may be suspected no inordinateness of affections, as to divert him a little, and make him slip a faint wish of escaping the Cup; why might not a brave

3. It was stranger that Christ should admit such a slip downward as to wish an escape from death, then that Moses should have such an exaltation upward as to save his nation by perishing. Yet both without inordinatenes.

and noble zeale, exalt Moſes ſo much, as to deſire to reſtore ſuch a Nation to the love of God, by his owne deſtruction.

For, as certainely the firſt of theſe was without ſinne, ſo the other might be, out of an habituall aſſuredneſſe of his ſalvation, as (a) Paulinus ſayes, to Amandus, [Thou maiſt bee bold in thy prayers to God for mee, to ſay, forgive him, or blot out me, for thou canſt not bee blotted out; Iuſtum delere non poteſt Iuſtitia.] And thus retaining ever in our minds, that our example is Chriſt, and that he dyed not conſtrained, it ſhall ſuffice to have learned by theſe places, that in Charitie men may dye ſo, and have done, and ought to doe. The laſt thing which remaines yet, is to conſider the Examples reported in the Scriptures: which cannot poſſeſſe us long; becauſe a few Rules will include many examples; and thoſe few rules which are applyable to theſe Hiſtories, have been often iterated already; and, for other Rules, which may enlighten and governe us in all occurrences, for many Reaſons I reſpite to a maturer deliberation and diſcourſe.

a Pont. Paul. ad Amaud. Epiſt. 2.

4. How by Paulinus a juſt man may ſafely ſay to God, Dele me, Diſtinct.

Distinct. V.

SECT. I.

AS when I entred into the examination of places of Scriptures, it ſeemed to me to have ſome weight, that in all the Judiciall and Ceremoniall Law, there was no abomination of Selfe-homicide.

1. Of examples in Scriptures.

So doth it, That in relating the Hiſtories of them who killed themſelves, the phraſe of Scripture never diminiſhes them by any aſperſion or or imputation for that fact, if they were otherwiſe vertuous, nor aggravates thereby their former wickedneſſe, if they were wicked.

2. The phraſe of Scriptures, never imputes this act to any as a ſin, when it relates the hiſtory.
a Schultet. Medul. patr. pag. 1. in l. 4. Irenæi.

For my part, I am content to ſubmit my ſelf to that Rule, which is delivered from (a) Iræneus, [That thoſe things which the Scripture doth not reprehend, but ſimply lay downe, it becomes not us to accuſe; nor to make our ſelves more diligent then God; but if any thing ſeeme to us irregular, our endeavour muſt be, to ſerch out the Type, and ſignification thereof.]

3. Irenæus forbids us to accuſe where God doth not.

Neither ſhall I, for all this, be in danger of (b) Bezaes anſwer to that Argument of Ochius, That though ſome of the Patriarches lived unreprehended in Polygamie, it concluded nothing, becauſe (ſaith Beza) The ſilence of Scripture in

4. Bezas anſwer to Ochius reaſon, that ſome Patriarchs lived in polygamy reacheth not our caſe.
b Beza de polyg. fo. 7.

(c) Jacobs Inceſt, and in (d) Lots, and in (e) Davids unjuſt judgement; For Sibs doth not deliver them from guiltineſſe and tranſgreſſion therein.

c Gen. 29.
d Gen. 9.
e 2 Sam. 9. 2.

5 For it is not evident, that this is ſinne, by any other place of the Law; which was in all his caſes. And here many examples concurre.

For our caſe differs from all others, both becauſe this act is not from any place of the Law evicted to be ſinne. And becauſe here is a concurrence of Examples, of this fact without any reprehenſion: So that that anſwere is ſo farre ſhort from reaching us, that it reached not home to that argument of Ochius againſt which it was oppoſed. And if in debating theſe Examples, it be found, that ſome very reverend Authors, have concluded impenitence, and conſequently utter deſertion on Gods part, and ſo eternall periſhing; the circumſtances as they appeared to him then, may have made his judgement juſt: but for any other thereupon to apply that caſe to others, will not be ſafe. For (f) [Though a Judge may in cauſa verſanti interpret the Law, that Interpretation makes not Law.]

f Acacius de privileg. l. c. 3

SECT. II.

1 Of Acts which were not fully ſelfe-murders, but approaches.

As therfore in the former Diſtinctions wee ſpoke of ſome approaches to the act of ſelf-killing, ſo will wee in this pauſe a very little upon two ſuch ſteps. (a) The firſt ſhalbe of the prophet in the book of Kings, [who had a ſtranger ſtrike him, and becauſe he would not pronounce a heavy judgement upon him, which was preſently

a 1 Reg. 20. 35

ſently excecuted. And then he importuned another to doe it, who did it throughly, for he wounded him with the ſtroake.] This was, to common underſtanding an unnaturall thing, that ſo holy a man ſhould make ſuch meanes to have his body violated; and ſo it ſeems the firſt apprehended it, however it pleaſed God to enlighten the ſecond. This I produce not as though the prophet inclind to it of his owne diſpoſition, for it is expreſſely in the text, that God commanded him to doe it.

2 Of the Prophet who puniſhed him who would not ſtrike him.

But becauſe this is the only place in all the ſcriptures, where thoſe which offer, or deſirouſly admit violence to their owne bodies, are ſaid to have done it, by the expreſſe motion of God, I collect from it, that it is not without ſome boldneſs, if others affirme without authority of the text, that the death of Samſon and others, had the ſame foundation, when it appeares by this, that God when he would have it underſtood ſo, is pleaſed to deliver it plainly and expreſſely.

3 That when God invites men to ſuch violence, hee ſayes ſo plainly. And therefore ſuch particular invitations may not be preſumed, where they are not expreſſed.

SECT. III.

The next before we come to thoſe who entirely killed themſelves, is Ionas, who by often wiſhing his own death, and moving the marriners to caſt him out into the ſea, made many ſteps towards the very act. I know that it is everie where ſaid, that thoſe words, (a) [Take mee, and

1 Of Ionas.

a 1. 12.

and cast me into the Sea,] proceeded from a prophetique spirit; And (b) St. Hierome saith [that in this prophetique spirit, he foresaw that the Ninivites would repent, and so his preaching would be discredited.] But if this be so, must he not also in the same Prophetique Spirit see, that their repentance must be occasioned by his going thither and preaching there? And if this perswading to his destruction, being now innocent in their understanding; for they prayed, [Lay not innocent bloud upon us.] were from Divine motion, shall wee dare to impute also to like motions and spirit, his angry importuning of death? [Take I beseech thee, my life from me, for it is better for me, to dye then to live.] And after he wished from his heart to dye, and said, [I doe well to be angry unto the death.]

b Procm. in Com. in Iona.

Vers. 14.

43.

9.

(c) St. Hierome calles him Sanctum Ionam; and when Lyra observes that he had not done so, to any of the other Prophets, he concludes, that this testimony needed most in Ionas, who by his many reluctations against Gods will, might else fall into some suspition of eternall perishing. Which since we must be far from fearing in so eminent and exemplary a type of Christ, and yet have no ground to admit any such particular impulsion of Gods Spirit, as Hierome and Lyra pronounce him holy, for all these reluctations; so may we esteeme him advised, and ordinate, and rectified, for all these approches, which in wishing and consenting he made to his owne death.

c Lyra prolog. in Iona.

2 Why Saint Hier. calls only Ionas, of all the Prophets, Holy.

SECT.

SECT. IV.

Of thoſe which in the Scriptures are regiſtred to have killed themſelves, Samſon is the firſt. A man ſo exemplar, that not onely the times before him had him in Prophecy, (a) (for of him it is ſaid,) [Dan ſhall judge his people,] and the times after him more conſummately in Chriſt, of whom he was a Figure, but even in his own time, other nations may ſeeme to have had ſome Type, or Copy of him, in Hercules.

1. Of Samſon Iudg. 16.

a Perrius in Gen. 49. 16.

His fact of ſelfe-killing is celebrated by the Church to everlaſting memory, as the act of a Martyr; and as very many others in their Homilies and expoſitions.

2 The church celebrates him as a Martyr.

So that renowned (b) Paulinus ſayes, [God ſend me the death of Sampſon, and Sampſons blindneſſe, that I may live to God, and looke to God.]

b. Paul. Sever. Epiſt. 4. 3 Paulinus wiſhes ſuch a death.

And this generall applauſe and concurrence in the praiſe of the fact, hath made many think, or at leaſt write, that he purpoſed not to kill himſelfe: being loath either to depart from their opinion who extoll him, or to admit any thing which may countenance that manner of dying. Of which perſwaſion (c) two very learned men labour to ſeeme to be.

4 They which deny that he meant to kill himſelfe, are cofuted by the text.

c Fran. de Vit. in reflect. de Hom. Greg. Valent. tom. 3. diſp. 5. q. 8. p. 2.

But, beſides that ſuch an expoſing of himſelfe to unevitable danger, is the ſame fault as

Selfe-homicide, when there is any fault in it, the very Text is against them; for Samson dyed with these words in his mouth, (d) [Let mee lose my life with the Philistims.]

d Jud. 16. 30.

And though sometimes these Authors adde, That hee intended not his owne death principally, but accidentally (as Calvine also sayes, that Saint Paul did not desire death for deaths sake, but to be with Christ,) this can remove no man from our side; for wee say the same, that this may be done onely, when the honour of God may bee promoved by that way, and no other.

5 They which say he did not intend his own death principally say the same as we. Supra.

Therefore to justifie this fact in Samson, (e) Saint Augustine equally zealous of Samsons honour, and his own conscience, builds still upon his old foundation, [That this was by the speciall inspiration from God.] Which, because it appeares not in the History, nor lyes in proofe, may with the same easinesse be refused, as it is presented.

6 That Saint Aug. his answer to this fact, that it was by speciall instinct, hath no ground in the history.
e Aug. de civit. Dei cap. 12.

To give strength to this opinion of Augustine, (f) our Countreyman Sayr presents one reason preceding the fact, and (g) Pedraca the Spaniard, another subsequent.

f Sayr Thesau. Cas. Consc. l. 7. cap. 9. Nu. 9.
g Pedr. pr. 5. Hisp.

The first is that hee prepared himselfe to it by Prayer. But in this prayer, you may observe much humanity, and weakenesse and selfe-respect. [O Lord, saith he, I beseech thee, strengthen me at this time onely, that I may be avenged of the Philistims for my two eyes.

7 Of Says reasons in confirmation of August. that Samson pray'd.

The

The ſecond reaſon is, that becauſe hee effected that which he deſired, it is to be preſumed, that God reſtored him his ſtrength to that end, which he asked it. But, beſides that in the text it appeares, that (h) his haire before that time, was begunne to be growne out againe, and ſo his ſtrength ſomewhat renewed; doth this prove any impulſion, and inciteiment, and prevention of the holy Ghoſt, to that particular act, or rather only an habituall accompanying and awaking him, to ſuch actions by which God might be honoured and glorified, whenſoever any occaſion ſhould be preſented?

8. Of Pedr. his reaſon, that it was againſt the work of God, becauſe it was done as it was deſired.
h v. 22.

When therefore he felt his ſtrength in part refreſhed, and had by Prayer intreated the perfecting thereof, ſeeing they tooke continuall occaſion from his dejection to ſcorne and reproach his God, burning with an equall fervour to revenge their double fault, and to remove the wretched occaſion thereof, he had (i) as a very ſubtile Author ſayes, the ſame reaſon to kill himſelfe, which hee had to kill them, and the ſame authoritie, and the ſame priviledge, and ſafeguard from ſinne.

9 That he had as much reaſon, and authority to kill himſelfe as to kill the Philiſtims, and that it was only the glory of God.
i Fra. Georg. probl. 438.

And he dyed, as the ſame man ſayes, with the ſame zeale as Chriſt, unconſtrained; for (k) In this manner of dying, as much as in any thing els, he was a Type of Chriſt.

10. Samſon in this manner of dying was a type of Chriſt.
k Perer. in Gen. 49. 16.

SECT. V.

1 Of Saul 1 Sam. ult.

2. Whether the Amalekite did help to kill Saul.

The next example is Saul. And whether he did perfect and consummat the act of killing himself, or the Amalekite contribute his help, it makes no difference to our purpose; But that the latter was true, may wel enough consist with the relation of the history in the (a) first place, and it appeares to be the more likely and probable out of the (b) second: And by (c) Iosephus it is absolutely so delivered; And the (d) scholastique history saith also, that Saul was too weake to force the sword through his body.

a 1. Sam. ult.
b 2. Sam. 1.
c Antiq. l. 7. cap. 15
d Hist. Schol.

3. Whether Saul be saved or no.

Two things use to be disputed of Saul. Whether hee were saved or no; And whether if hee perished, it was for impenitence testified or presumed by this act of his. The Iewes are generally indulgent to him: And the Christians generally severe upon this reason, that it is said of him, (e) [Saul dyed for his transgressions against the Lord, and his word, and asking counsaile of a witch.] But this doth not necessarily conclude an impenitence, or a second death. For the Iews say, That beleeving the sentence of Samuel in the apparitions, and accepting that decree as from God, he repented his former life, and then presented and delivered up himselfe and his sonnes, conformably to the revealed will of God, there in the field to be sacrie 1 Cro. 10. 13.

ficed

ficed to him: underſtanding Samuells words you ſhall be with me, to be ſpoken, not generally of the ſtate of the dead, but of the ſtate of the juſt, becauſe both Samuel himſelf was ſo, and ſo was Jonathan, whoſe condition in this promiſe of being with Samuel, was the ſame as his Fathers. And therefore ſaith Lyra, [all Iews and ſome Chriſtians agree, that leaſt by his reproach diſhonour might redound upon God, a good and Zealous man may kill himſelf. as Samſon did, and the Virgins.] And he addeth, [If other reaſons were not ſufficient to excuſe Saul, this alſo might juſtly be applied to him, that he did it by divine inſtinct.]

Lyra.

Out of which I obſerve theſe two things, that he preſumes there are other reaſons ſufficient in ſome caſes, whether they were in Sauls caſe or no. And then the reaſon upon which Lyra preſumes he dyed well, [becauſe the contrary is not declared in Scriptures, nor determined by the Church.] And Saul hath a good teſtimony of ſanctity in this act, from (f) Mallonius, [That as Chriſt died when he would, ſo did Saul, thinking it diſhonourable to dye by the hand of his, and Gods enemies.] That argument which Burgenſis bringeth to the contrary, ſuffereth more force and violence in being brought in, then it giveth ſtrength to his opinion. It is, [That if the fact were juſtifiable in Saul, it had beene ſo too in the Amalekite, if his profeſſion to David were true, That he had killed Saul, and conſequently David unjuſt in that execution.] But, beſides that, that

4. In what caſes the Iews. and Lyra confeſs that a man may kill himſelfe.

5. Lyra's reaſons why Saul is to be preſumed to have dyed well.

f Notæ in Sindon. c. 21. Nu. 6.

6. Burgenſis reaſon to the contrary, that if Saul were excuſable, the Amalekite was ſo to.

Amalekite had no conſcience, nor inward knowledge of Sauls juſt reaſons, nor other warrant but his commandement, which might, and was to him likely to proceed from Sauls infirmities, it might well appeare to David, by his comming to tell him the newes, that he had humane reſpects in doing it, and a purpoſe onely to deſerve well of David. And when both Judge and priſoner are innocent, oft times the Executioner may be a Murtherer.

7. Of Sauls Armor-bearer

And ſuch humane reſpects of wearineſſe and deſpaire, and ſhame, and feare, and fidelity to his Maſter, and amazement, and ſuch, ſtand in the way betweene Sauls Armour-bearer and all excuſes, to our underſtandings. For though the phraſe of Scripture impute nothing to him for that fact of killing himſelfe, yet I have found none that offer any particular excuſe in his defence

SECT. VI.

1. Of Achitophel. 2 Sam. 15.

verſ. 14.

2 He ſet his houſe in order, And he was buried.

Neither doe I finde any thing to excuſe Achitophels death; though (as I ſaid of the other) the Hiſtory doe not accuſe that particular fact. The Text calles his counſaile good, and it ſeems he was not tranſported with paſſion, becauſe he ſet his houſe in order; And he was buried in his Fathers grave, when Abſalon ſlaine by anothers hand was caſt into a pit.

But if it were upon a meere diſpute of his owne owne disgrace, or feare of ill succesſe, or upon any ſelfe reſpect, without propoſing Gods glorie, and he repented not, he periſhed.

SECT. VII.

Of Judas, the moſt ſinnefull inſtrument of the moſt mercifull Worke, the common, (though not generall) opinion is, that he killed himſelfe; but whether by hanging, or no, is more controverted.

1 Of Judas. *Mat.*27.5. *Act.*1.18.

For from the words in the (a) Acts, [That he threw himſelfe downe headlong, and burſt aſunder, and his bowels guſhed out.] (b Euthymius thinks, That he was reſcued whilſt he hanged, and carryed away, and that after that hee killed himſelfe by throwing himſelfe headlong.

a *Act.*1.18.

q Euthym. in Com. in Matt.

And (c) Brentius leaves that indifferent to us, to thinke what we will thereof. But it ſeemes by (d) Oecumenius, that he did not only overlive this hanging, but that he grew to ſo enormous a bigneſſe, and burden to himſelfe, that he was not able to withdraw himſelfe out of a Coaches way, but had his guts cruſhed out ſo; which he receives from Papias the Diſciple to Saint Iohn, whoſe times cannot be thought ignorant, or incurious of Judas Hiſtory.

c Brent. in Act. 1. 18.
d Oecum. in Collect. Act. Apoſt.

2. He dyed not by hanging himſelf, in the opinion of Euthymius, Oecum. Papias S. Iohns diſciple. and Theoph.

And it is there ſaid further, that by others it was ſaid, that being ſwolne to that vaſtneſſe, and corrupted with vermine, hee laid himſelfe down down upon his field, and there his guts broke out. And this (e) Theophilact followes.

e Theophilact in Mat. 7.

3. By what meanes many places of scriptures have beene otherwise accepted, then they intend.

And it falls out very often, that some one Father, of strong reputation and authority in his time, doth snatch and swallow some probable interpretation of Scripture: and then digesting it into his Homilies, and applying it in dehortations, and encouragements, as the occasions and diseases of his Auditory, or his age require, and imagining thereupon delightfull and figurative insinuations, and setting it to the Musique of his stile, (as every man which is accustomed to these Meditations, shall often finde in himselfe such a spirituall wantonnesse, and devout straying into such delicacies,) that sense which was but probable, growes necessary, and those who succeed, had rather enjoy his wit, then vexe their owne; as often times we are loath to change or leave off a counterfeit stone, by reason of the well setting thereof.

By this meanes, I thinke, it became so generally to be beleeved, that the fruit which Eve eat was an Apple; And that Lots wife was turned to a pillar of Salt; And that Absalon was hanged by the haire of the head; And that Iephthe killed his Daughter; And many other such, which grew currant, not from an evidence in the Text, but because such an acceptation, was most usefull, and applyable. Of this number, Iudas case might be.

But

But if it were not, that act of killing himselfe, is not added to his faults in any place of Scriptures; no not in those (f) two Psalmes of particular accusations, and bitter imprecations against him, as they are ordinarily taken to be Prophetically purposed and directed.

4 Iudas not accused of this in the story, nor in the two prophetical Psalms of him.

f Psal. 69. et 109.

And even of this man, whose sinne, if any can exceed mercy, was such, Origen durst hope, not out of his erronious compassion, and sinnefull charity, by which he thinks that even the Devill shall be saved, but out of Iudas repentance. He sayes, (g) [The Devill led him to the sinne, and then induced him to that sorrowfulnesse which swallowed him.] But speaking of his repentance, he sayes, [(h) Those words, when Iudas saw that he was condemned, belong to Judas himselfe, for Christ was not then condemned. And upon this conscience and consideration, began his repentance. [For, it may be, saith Origen, that Satan which had entred into him, staid with him till Christ was betray'd, and then left him, and thereupon repentance followed.] And perchance, sayes he, he went to prevent, and goe before his Master, who was to dye, and so to meet him with his naked soule, that he might gaine Mercy by his confession and prayers.]

5. Origens opinion of his repentance.

g Ex not. Em. Sá in Mat. 27.

h Aquin. catena aurea.

And (i) Calvine, (though his purpose be, to enervate and maime, (or at least, declare it to be so defective,) that repentance which is admitted for sufficient in the Romane Church, sayes that [In Iudas there was perfect contrition of heart, i In Mat. 27. 4.

6. Calvin acknowledges all degrees of repentance which the Romane Church requireth, to salvation, to have beene in Iudas.

Confession of the mouth, and satisfaction for the money.]

But (k) Petilian, against whom Saint Augustine writes, proceeded further in justification of Iudas last act, then any. For hee said, [That in suffering death when hee repented, and so was a Confessor, hee became a Martyr.] Which opinion being pronounced singularly and undefensibly; (l) Saint Augustine answers as choleriquely, [Laquenm talibus reliquit.] Yet Saint Augustine himselfe confesseth, that an innocent man, should more have sinned in such an act, then Iudas did, because in his execution there were some degrees of justice.

But of his actuall impenitence I purposed not to speake, nor of his repentance, but onely to observe to you, that this last fact is not imputed to him, nor repentance said to be precluded thereby.

k 23. q. 5. Tu dixisti. glos.

7 Petilianus his opinion of his Martyrdome.

l Ibid. Si non licet.

8. Iudas act had some degrees of justice by S. Aug.

SECT.

SECT. VIII.

For the Paſſive action of Eleazar, none denies, but that that endangering of himſelfe, was an act of Vertue: yet it was a forſaking and expoſing himſelfe to certaine Deſtruction.

1. Of Eleazer Macab. 1. 6. 46. Joſ. Ant. 12. 15.

For every Elephant had thirty two men upon him: and was guarded with one thouſand Foot, and five hundred Horſe: And this which he ſlew, was in his opinion, the Kings Elephant, and therefore the better provided.

2. All confeſs that an act of vertue.
3. The deſtruction was certaine.

Howſoever hee might hope to eſcape before the very act of killing the Elephant, by creeping under it, was a direct killing of himſelfe, as expreſſely as Samſon pulling down the houſe.

4. He did as much to his owne death as Samſon.

And the reaſons of this action, are rendered in the Text to have been, To deliver his people, and to get a perpetuall name.

5. The reaſons of his act in the text,

And this fact doth Saint Ambroſe extoll by many glorious circumſtances; As [That hee flung away his Target, which might have ſheltred him, That deſpiſing death, he forced into the midſt of the Army, and Incluſus ruina, magis quam oppreſſus, ſuo eſt ſepultus Triumpho; And that by death he begot peace, as the heire of his valour.]

6. S. Ambroſe his extolling thereof.

And as very many Schoolemen have intended and exercised their wits in the praise of this action, So(a) Cajetan gives such a reason thereof, as is applyable to very many Selfe-homicides. [That to expose our selves to certaine death, if our first end be not our owne death, but common good, it is lawfull. For, saith hee, Our actions which bee Morally good or bad, must bee judged to bee such, by the first reason which moves them, not by any accident, or concomitance, accompanying, or succeding them, though necessarily.] And this resolution of Cajetan, will include many Cases, and instances, which are headlongly by intemperate censures condemned.

a Cajet. in 16. Iud.

7. Cajetanus his reason for Eleazers justification, appliable to very many other cases of Self-homicide.

SECT. IX.

The fall of Rasis, which is the last Example, is thus reported. [Hee was besieged and fired; willing to dye manfully, and escape reproach, unworthy of his House, hee fell upon his Sword; for haste, hee mist his stroke, and threw himselfe from the Castle wall; yet rose up againe, and ranne to a high Rocke, tooke out his owne bowells, and threw them among the people, calling upon the Lord of life and spirit, and so died.]

1. Rasis Mas. 2. 14.
2. His reasons in the text.

Which Act the Text accuseth not; nor doth St. (a) Thomas accuse it of any thing else, but that a Aquin. 22. q. 64. ar. 5.

it

it was Cowardlineſſe. Which alſo (b) Ariſtotle imputes to this manner of dying, as wee ſaid (c) before.

But either he ſpoke at that time, ſerviceably and advantagiouſly to the point which hee had then in hand; or elſe hee ſpoke, vt plurimum, becauſe for the moſt part infirmities provoke men to this act.

For (d) S. Auguſtine who argues as earneſtly as Ariſtotle, that this is not greatneſſe of minde, confeſſeth yet, that in Cleombrotus it was: who onely upon reading Plato his Phædo, killed himſelfe; for, ſaith Auguſtine: [When no calamitie urged him, no crime, either true or imputed, nothing but greatneſſe of minde moved him, to apprehend death, and to breake the ſweet bands of this life.] And though he adde, [That it was done rather Magnè then Benè;] yet by this, that which wee ſeeke now is in Confeſſion, that ſometimes there is in this act, Greatneſſe and Courage. Which upon the ſame reaſon which moved Ariſtotle, and all the reſt, which is, to quench in men their naturall love to it, he is loth to affoord in too many caſes.

For hee (e) ſayes [That, except Lucrece, it is not eaſie to finde any example worth the preſcribing, or imitating, but Cato: Not becauſe hee onely did it, but becauſe being reputed learned and honeſt, men might juſtly thinke, that that was well done, and might well bee done againe, which hee did.] Yet for all this, hee is loth to let Catoes act paſſe with ſo much

b Ariſtotelis Ethic. l. 3. c. 7.
c Supra fo. 130 3. Whether it be puſillanimity, as Aqui. Auguſt. and Ariſtot. ſays.

d Auguſt. de civit. Dei l. 1. c. 22.

4. S. Aug. confeſſes that to have beene greatnes of mind, in Cleombrotus.

e c. 23. 5. How much great examples governe.

much approbation, For hee addes, [That yet many of his learned friends thought it a weakneſſe to let him dye ſo.] And this hee doth becauſe when men have before them the precedent of a brave example, they contend no further, then what he did, not why.

f Vell. Paterc. de morte Grac.

For it is truely ſaid, (f) Examples doe not ſtoppe, nor conſiſt in the Degree where they begunne, but grow, and no man thinkes that unworthy for him, which profiteth another.] Yet, Saint Auguſtine though upon this reaſon loth to give glory to many examples, allows all greatneſſe and praiſe to Regulus, (g) of whom we ſpoke before: though, to my underſtanding there are in it many impreſſions of falſehood, and of oſtentation, from all which Catoes hiſtory is delivered.

g Supra

h. Diog. Laer. l. 6.

6. That it was reputed cowardlines in Antiſthenes extreamly ſick not to kill himſelf.

And, to end this point, whether it be alwais puſillanimity, Laertius ſays (h) [That in Antiſthenes the philoſopher, videbatur firme mollius, that lying extreame ſick, and Diogenes asking him, if he lacked a freind, (meaning to kill him,) and offering him alſo his dagger, to doe it himſelfe, the Philoſopher ſaid he deſired an end of paine, but not of life.]

7. Vpon what reaſons Lyra excuſeth this and like actions.

As therefore this fact of Raſis, may have proceeded from greatneſſe, So is it by Lyra excuſed from all ſin, by reaſons applyable to many other. For he ſayes, [Either to eſcape torment, by which probably a man might be ſeduced to Idolatry, or take away occaſion of making them them reproach God in him, a man may kill himſelfe; For, ſaith hee, Both theſe caſes, Ordinantur in Deum.]

And this (i) Francis a Victoria allowes as the more probable opinion.] And (k) Sotus, and (l) Valentia, follow Thomas his opinion herein; And Burgenſis condemnes it upon this preſumption, That hee could not doe this for love of the common good, becauſe this could not redeeme his people, being already captive. So that his accuſing him helpes us thus much, that if by his death hee could have redeemed them, hee might lawfully have done it.

i Relect. de homicid. reſp. ad ult. argum. k Sotus l. 2. de juſt. q. 3. ar. 8. l Valen. to. 3. diſp. 5. q. 8. 8 Burgenſis reaſons confeſſes he might have had juſt cauſes.

Concluſion.

AND this is as farre as I allowed my diſcourſe to progeſſe in this way: forbidding it earneſtly all darke and dangerous Seceſſions and divertings into points of our Free-will, and of Gods Deſtiny: though allowing many ordinary contingencies, to be under our Election, it may yet ſeem reaſonable, that our maine periods, of Birth, of Death, and of chief alterati-

1. Why I refraind diſcours of deſtinie herein.

alterations in this life be more immediately wrought upon by Gods determination. It is uſefully ſaid, and appliable to good purpoſe (though (a) by a wicked man, and with intention to croſſe Moſes,) [That man was made of ſhaddow, and the Devil of fire.] For as ſhaddow is not darknes, but groſſer light, ſo is mans underſtanding in theſe myſteries, not blind but clouded. And as fire doth not always give light (for that is accidentall, and it muſt have aire to work upon,) but it burneth naturally, ſo that deſire of knowledge which the Devill kindles in us, (as he doth as willingly bring bellows to inflame a heart curious of knowledge, as he doth more aſhes to ſtupifie and bury deeper, a ſlumbering underſtanding) doth not alwaies give us light, but it always burnes us, and imprints upon our judgment ſtigmaticall marks, and at laſt ſeares up our conſcience.

a Alcor. Azo. 65.

2. Man made of ſhadow and the devill of fire by the Alcoran.

If then reaſons which differ from me, and my reaſons be otherwiſe equall, yet theirs have this diſadvantage that they fight with themſelves and ſuffer a Civill Warre of contradiction. For many of their reaſons incline us to a love of this life, and a horror of death, and yet they ſay often, that wee are too much addicted to that naturally. But it is well noted by (b) Alcuinus, (and I thinke from Saint Auguſtine) [That though there bee foure things which wee muſt love, yet there is no precept given upon any more then two, God and our neighbour. So that the other which

3. Our adverſaries reaſons contradict one another.

b Alcuin. Ep. 23.

4 No præcept given to love our ſelves.

concernes

concerne our ſelves, may be pretermitted in ſome occaſions.

But becauſe of the benefits of death, enough hath beene occaſionally interſerted before, having preſented (c) Cyprians encouragement to it, who out of a contemplation that the whole frame of the world decayed and languiſhed, cries to us, [Nutant parietes, The walls and the roofe ſhake, and would'ſt not thou goe out? Thou art tyred in a pilgrimage, and wouldst thou not goe home?] I will end with applying (d) Auſonius thanks to the Emperour, to death, which deſerveth it better, [Thou provideſt that thy benefits and the good which thou bringeſt ſhall not be tranſitory; and that the ills from which thou delivereſt us, ſhall never returne.] Since therefore becauſe death hath a little bitternes, but medicinall, and a little allay, but to make it of more uſe, they would utterly recline & avert our nature from it, (as (e) Paracelſus ſays, of that foule contagious diſeaſe which then had invaded mankind in a few places, and ſince overflown in all, that for puniſhment of generall licentiouſnes, God firſt inflicted that diſeaſe, and when the diſeaſe would not reduce us, he ſent a ſecond worſe affliction, which was ignorant, and torturing Phyſitians.

So I may ſay of this caſe, that in puniſhment of Adams ſinne, God caſt upon us an infectious death, and ſince hath ſent us a worſe plague of men, which accompanie it with ſo much horrour and affrightment, that it can ſcarce be made

§ Encouragements to contempt of death

c Cypr. Serm. de mortalitate.

d Gratiar. act. de conſ.

e Chyrurgia mag. de ulcer.

wholſome and agreeable to us. That which (f) Hippocrates admitted in caſes of much profit, and ſmall danger, they teach with too much liberty, [That worſe meat may be given to a patient, ſo it be pleaſanter, and worſe drink, ſo it be more acceptable.] But though I thought it therefore needfull, to oppoſe this defenſative, as well to reencourage men to a juſt contempt of this life, and to reſtore them to their nature, which is a deſire of ſupreame happines in the next life by the loſſe of this, as alſo to rectify, and waſh again their fame, who religiouſly aſſuring themſelves that in ſome caſes, when wee were deſtitute of other meanes, we might be to our ſelves the ſtewards of Gods benefits, and the Miniſters of his mercifull Iuſtice, had yet, being, (g) as Ennodius ſays) Innocent within themſelves, incurred damnum opinionis, yet (as I ſaid before) I abſtained purpoſely from extending this diſcourſe to particular rules, or inſtances, both becauſe I dare not profeſſe my ſelf a Maiſter in ſo curious a ſcience, and becauſe the limits are obſcure, and ſteepy, and ſlippery, and narrow, and every errour deadly, except where a competent dilligence being fore-uſed, a miſtaking in our conſcience may provide an excuſe.

As to cure diſeaſes by touch, or by charme, (both which one (h) excellent Chirurgian, and one (i) excellent philoſopher, are of opinion may be done, becauſe what vertue ſoever the heavens infuſe into any creature, man, who is Al, is capable of, f Aphor. l. 2. 38.

6. Why I abſtaine from particular directions.

g Ennodius ad Celul.

7. Laws forbid ordinarie men to cure by extraordiry meanes, yet the Kings of England, and France, & Spaine cure ſo.

h Paracelſus Chyrurg. Mag. tract. 2. cap. 8. et de tranſ. cap. 10.

i Pet. Pomp. de incant. c. 4.

of, and being borne when that vertue is exacted, may receive a like impreſſion, or may give it to a word, or character made at that inſtant, if he can underſtand the time) though theſe, I ſay be forbidden by divers Lawes, out of a Juſt prejudice that vulgar owners of ſuch a vertue, would miſ-imploy, it, yet none miſlikes that the Kings of England & France, ſhould cure one ſickneſſe by ſuch meanes, nor (k) that the Kings of Spaine, ſhould diſpoſſeſs Dæmoniaque perſons ſo, becauſe Kings are juſtly preſumed to uſe all their power to the glory of God; So is it fit, that this priviledge of which we ſpeak ſhould be contracted and reſtrained.

For, that is certainly true of this, which (l) Caſtianus ſaith of a ly, [That it hath the nature of Ellebore, wholſome in deſperate diſeaſes, but otherwiſe poyſon.] though I dare not averre with him, [That we are in deſperate diſeaſes, whenſoever we are in ingenti lucro, aut damno, et in humilitate, ad evitandam gloriam] Howſoever it Caſſianus miſtake that, and we this, yet (m) as he, and Origen, and Chryſoſtome, and Hierome, are excuſed for following Platoes opinion, that a ly might have the nature of medicine and be admitted in many caſes, becauſe in their time the church had not declared her ſelf in that point, nor pronounced that a ly was naturally ill, by the ſame reaſon am I excuſable in this Paradox. Againſt the reaſons whereof, and againſt charity, if prejudice, or contempt of my weaknes, or miſ-devok Caſanæus catal. glo. mun. par. 5. conſider. 1.

l Caſian. l. 17 cap. 17. ad 25 As Hier. Orig. Chryſoſt. and Caſianus are excuſd for following Plato in the toleration of a ly, becauſe the church had not then pronounced, ſo may it be in this.

m Obſervat. in Caſian. in fine l. fo. 740.

tion have so precluded any, that they have not beene pleased to taste and digest them, I must leave them to their drowsines still, and bid them injoy the favour of that indulgent Physitian, Qui non concoxit, dormiat.

Cornelius Celsus sent. 15.

FINIS.

20. Sept.
1644.

Imprimatur
Io: Rushworth.

54.15
719

RAYMOND H. FOGLER LIBRARY
DATE DUE

DEC 17 1967
JAN 18 1968
NOV 4 1968
JUN 18 1973
NOV 19 1973
MAY 17 1975
MAY 21 1976
DEC 24 1976
AUG 25 1978

UNIV OF MAINE
3 7550 00945296 3